XXII of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act X of 1882). In such a proceeding a Magistrate is not bound to order payment of the full amount claimed by the municipality, but must satisfy himself as to the extent of the defaulter's legal liability before passing any order against him. *MUNICIPALITY OF AHMEDABAD v. On the 3rd of June 1881, he paid the tax—namely, Rs. 12—for which he had been rated, and on the 6th of January 1883 he sued for a refund of the said sum from the municipality. Held that the suit was not brought too late to satisfy the requirements of s. 86 of the Act. When the notice of the 25th of January 1881 was sent by K, he had no cause of action against the municipality for anything done; no notice, therefore, such as is contemplated by s. 86, was ever sent by K, and consequently there could be no final order on such notice from which the three months prescribed by that section would run. Quare—Whether s. 86 of the Bombay Act VI of 1873 applies to an action for money had and received. 1. —s. 43—Bombay District Municipal Act (Bombay Act VI of 1873), s. 86—Suits against municipality for ejectment.—The words "in the case of any such action for damages" in s. 43 of the Bombay District Municipal Act Amendment Act (Bombay Act II of 1884) clearly show that it was contemplated that there might be actions of another description to which the provisions in the former paragraph would be applicable. The section does not contemplate only "suits to recover monetary compensation for a wrongful act" & not an ejectment—nor being a suit brought to recover damages "for an act done or intended to be done"—was excluded under s. 86 of the Bombay District

3. ———— Bombay Act VI of 1873, s. 86—Purchase from mortgagee by municipality—Suit by mortgagor to recover possession—Ejectment—Limitation—Notice.—A mortgagee (defendant No. 1) refused to give up part of the mortgaged land when the mortgage was paid off in 1881. He remained in possession, and in 1888 he sold this land to the Municipality of Mahad (defendant No. 2). The mortgagor subsequently sued the municipality and its vendor to recover possession. The municipality contended that the suit was barred by limitation under s. 48 of the District Municipal Act, 1884. Held that the suit was not barred by s. 48, that section does not apply to actions of ejectment brought against a municipality. 4. ———— Ejectment suit against municipality—Notice.—The plaintiff was the iuamdar of the village of Dakor. He filed an ejectment suit against the municipality of Dakor, alleging that the municipality had illegally and wrongfully encroached upon a portion of the Gomti Lake at Dakor by laying the foundations of a building which they intended to erect for the purpose of a dharmsala. The municipality pleaded (inter alia) that the suit was bad for want of notice of action under s. 48 of the Bombay District Municipal Act, 1884. Held (by a majority of the Full Bench) that the provisions of s. 48 of Bombay Act II of 1884 do not apply to actions for the possession of land brought against a municipality. Per PARSONS, J.—The provisions of s. 48 apply only to actions for the possession of land whereof the plaintiff has been dispossessed by the municipality acting or purporting to act under some section of the Municipal Act, which empowers them to take possession of, or oust any one from, that land. Per RANADE, J.—S. 48 does not generally apply to suits for the possession of land, except in those cases where the claim arises on account of some act or omission of the municipality when it acts in pursuance of its statutory powers, and Under it, the condition precedent to levying the rate is not the fact ascertained by evidence whether the water in dispute has percolated from the canal, but the opinion of the canal officer that it has so percolated, he and not the Civil Court being made the Judge of such percolation for the purposes of the Act. Prior to this, however, the plaintiff and other tenants paid B rents for 1892—94. K then applied for and obtained from the Collector an order, under s. 86 of the Code, rendering him assistance in recovering these rents. The plaintiff, in August 1894, brought this suit to restrain K from recovering the rents and to avoid the order for assistance. The Subordinate Judge granted the injunction, but the District Judge reversed that decision and dismissed the suit on the ground that K was the registered occupant of the land, and that the order for assistance was valid, and that payment of rent to B did not discharge the tenants. ss. 119 and 121—Fixing boundaries—Boundaries, Effect of decision of revenue authorities as to—Meaning of the term "determinate."—In 1877 a dispute arose between plaintiffs and defendant as to the boundaries of certain land, being survey Nos. 88 and 87, of which the plaintiffs and the defendant were respectively occupants under Government. In 1879 the boundaries were fixed by a revenue officer under the orders of the Collector, and the piece of land in dispute was found to belong to the plaintiffs as occupants of survey No. 88. Subsequently, the defendant having encroached upon it and dispossessed the plaintiffs, the present suit was filed. The Court of first instance awarded the plaintiffs' claim, holding that the decision by the revenue officer was conclusive as to the boundary. The defendant appealed, and the lower Appellate Court reversed the lower Court's decree. On appeal by the plaintiffs to the High Court,—Held, restoring the decree of the Court of first instance, that, under the provisions of s. 121 of Act V of 1879, the decision of the Collector as to the boundaries was conclusive, and that the plaintiffs were entitled to possession. *BAI UJAN v. s. 182 of the Land Revenue Code the plaintiffs were precluded from raising this point. Held that, though s. 182 forbade the Court to entertain a suit against defendants Nos. 2 and 3 on the ground that they had bought the land for defendant No. 1, it did not debar it from entertaining a suit against them on the ground that subsequently to the sale they were holding on behalf of defendant No. 1 or against defendant No. 1 on the ground that he was himself really in possession through defendants Nos. 2 and 3 as his agents or tenants. The same principle of equity which would make defendant No. 1 a trustee for the mortgagors if he had bought in his own name would make defendants Nos. 2 and 3 trustees for them if subsequently to the sale they held the land on behalf of defendant No. 1, and would also make defendant No. 1 himself a trustee if subsequently to the sale the property came into his possession as beneficially entitled thereto owing to an agreement between him and the certified purchasers. *GENU v. (b). Held that the payment which the khot had been making to the inamdar before the time of the British survey was in the nature of assessment or rating by Government; but held, also, that the plaintiffs were entitled to the old assessment as claimed by them. It was plain that in cases falling within sub-cl. (a) and (e) of s. 216 of the Land Revenue Code, the inamdar's interest in the assessment would not be affected by the application of Chs. VIII to X of that Act. He would still get the old assessment in the alienated lands in the village in the former case and the same amount of assessment in the latter, and the same must have been the intention in cases contemplated by sub-cl. (b).

BOMBAY LOCAL FUNDS ACT (III OF 1869).

1. — s. 8—Local cess—Landlord and tenant—Fraudulent collection of cess.—The plaintiffs sued to recover back from the defendant the amount levied by him as local cess on certain wasta lands belonging to the plaintiffs, the defendant claiming to be the superior holder of the village in which the lands were situated. The amount was levied by the defendant through the assistance of the mamlatdar under Bombay Act III of 1869, s. 8. The defendant contended that, in consequence of a demand from Government, he had paid local cess on the whole of his talukh, including the village in which the plaintiffs' lands were situated, and was therefore entitled, under ss. 69 and 70 of the Contract Act (IX of 1872), to recover from them the amount which he had paid to Government as a portion of the cess which rateably fell upon their lands. It was found that the defendant was not the proprietor of the lands held by the plaintiffs, and that the relation of landlord and tenant did not exist between them; also that defendant paid local cess for the plaintiffs' lands fraudulently and with the intention of thereby making evidence of title to their lands, knowing that he had no lawful or just claim to them. Held that the defendant was not the superior holder of the lands within s. 8 of Bombay Act III of 1869, and was, therefore, not entitled to the assistance of the revenue officers of Government to recover the cess provided by that section for superior holders as against tenants and occupants, although he might have paid the local cess due on the land in the plaintiffs' possession; and that, consequently, the aid of the mamlatdar was illegally and improperly given to the defendant for the recovery of the amount from the plaintiffs. Held, also that the defendant was not a person

The width of the road in front of the buildings was about forty feet, and the length of the eaves varied from seven feet to nine feet two inches above the roadway. At the time this suit was filed there was an open drain or gutter, one foot three inches wide, running along by the side of the plaintiff's buildings and between them and the road. That gutter, however, subsequently to the filing of this suit, but before the hearing, was covered over, and so much additional width was thereby added to the road. Held that the eaves constituted an obstruction within the meaning of the above section, and that the Municipal Commissioner was entitled to remove them. Under the above section, the question to be decided is not whether there is a real practical inconvenience to the public traffic in the street. Those are not the words used in the section, and if that was the intention of the Legislature, it would have been expressed. (2) Drawback of the one-fifth part of the general tax shall be sanctioned by the Commissioner in cases falling within either of the following classes and in no others:—(a) Chawls or buildings let out for hire in single rooms either as lodging or godowns for the storage of goods. (3) No sanction for drawback shall extend or apply to any floor on which trade or manufacture is carried on, or any goods are sold.” The Commissioner having refused to sanction a drawback of the tax leviable on certain properties of the plaintiff on the ground that they did not fall within the terms of the above conditions, the plaintiff filed this suit. It was contended on his behalf that the second and third of the above conditions were bad, and that the Standing Committee could not by so-called general conditions limit or curtail the right given to tax-payers by s. 158. Held that the conditions prescribed by the Standing Committee were not ultra vires, and that the Commissioner was justified in refusing the drawback. GOVARDHANDAS GOCULIDAS TEJPAL v. 2. ———— and ss. 504 and 527 —Land taken by the municipality for street improvement—Compensation for land taken—Dispute as to amount of compensation—Notice of suit—Limitation.—In 1891 the municipal authorities of Bombay gave notice to the plaintiffs under s. 293 of Bombay Act III of 1888 that they required 23.30 square yards of the plaintiff's land for street improvement. On the 14th December 1891, the plaintiff gave possession of the land to the municipality, and on 27th January 1892 claimed Rs 60 per square yard as compensation. By letter dated 23rd February 1892, the Municipal Commissioner (without prejudice) offered Rs 50 per square yard as compensation, and stated that, on the plaintiff producing the title-deeds and papers to establish his title, the necessary documents in connection with the payment would be prepared. Nothing further took place in the matter until the 14th February 1894, on which refused to pay the compensation, contending that the plaintiff's claim was time-barred. The plaintiff thereupon brought this suit claiming Rs 1,165 (being at the rate of Rs 50 per square yard) as compensation for the land taken by the defendant or in the alternative for that sum as damages for the suit was not barred by limitation. Per FARRAN, J.—A suit against the municipality of Bombay for compensation for land acquired by the municipality under s. 293 of Bombay Act III of 1888 is not an action of tort or quasi-tort, but a simple action for the price of land which the terms of s. 301 of the Act impose upon the Commissioner to pay. The obligation to pay that price is of the same nature, (1) whether the owner assents to the valuation of the land placed upon it by the Commissioner; (2) whether the value is determined by the Chief Judge of the Small Cause Court; or (3) whether it is left undetermined. S. 527 does not apply to any of these three cases. In all of them the obligation to pay is imposed by s. 301, and does not arise from the manner in which the amount of the price to be paid is arrived at. S. 504 prescribes the only mode in which, in case of dispute, the value of the land can be determined. If the owner of land disputes the Commissioner's valuation, he must apply to the Chief Judge of the Small Cause Court within a year. If he does not do so, the result is that he loses the power of effectually disputing the Commissioner's valuation, but does not lose his right to the amount of the valuation. The owner of land has a remedy independent of the provision of s. 604. That section only deals with cases where there is a dispute as to the value of the land, and leaves untouched those cases where there is no such dispute, but where the Commissioner for some reason declines to pay. In such cases the owner is left to his ordinary remedy, no special mode of procedure being prescribed. Cases in which there has been a dispute, but in which the owner abandons his claim to dispute the valuation of the Commissioner, fall within the latter category. MANEKAL MOTILAL v. The building was completed in June 1893, and the notice was issued on 13th January 1894. R was prosecuted for not complying with this notice. He contended that the notice was time-barred, as it had not been given within three months after the completion of the building. In answer to this plea, it was urged, on behalf of the municipality, that the building could not be said to have been completed, unless and until such accommodations as privies and cesspools had been executed in accordance with the requirements of the Health Department, and that, therefore, the notice was within time. Held that the notice was time-barred. The word "completion" in s. 353 of Bombay Act III of 1888 must be taken in its ordinary sense, and the Court cannot read into the section "in accordance with sanitary regulations" or "sanitary officers' opinionous." IN RE RAGHUNATH MAKUND . And though the section gives power to the Commissioner to require the owner of low ground to cleanse and fill up the same, it does not permit him to issue an order that an indefinite extent of low-lying ground shall be filled up, much less that it shall be filled up to some particular level, or filled up with sweet earth, or that it shall be sloped in a particular direction. MUNICIPAL COMMISSIONER OF BOMBAY v. s. 527—Suit for damages against Municipal Commissioner—Notice of suit—What is sufficient notice.—The plaintiffs were owners of a house consisting of a ground floor and upper story and measuring 77 feet in length. The plaintiffs in this suit complained that in January 1891 the defendant by his servants dug a trench, 8 feet deep, along the whole length of the gully for the purpose of laying a drain pipe, and that the work was done so negligently that the plaintiffs' house was injured and became in such a dangerous condition that it had to be pulled down. The plaintiffs claimed Rs3,996 as damages. The defendant denied the negligence, and alleged that the work was not done by his servants or agents, but by a contractor. For the defendant it was contended that the notice of action given by the plaintiffs under s. 527 of the Bombay Municipal Act (III of 1888) was insufficient. The notice stated "that one S L, a contractor under you, and as such being your agent and servant, excavated a trench, etc." It was argued that this was not a good notice, as it only alleged a

At the end of the revenue year 1878-79, i.e., on 31st July 1879, the plaintiff was a defaulter in respect of the assessment payable to Government for that year. In November 1879 a punitive police post was established in the village, under s. 16 of Bombay Act VII of 1867, on account of the turbulent conduct of the inhabitants. Between January and April 1880 the Collector sold certain property of the talukhdar for arrears of revenue, and realized by the sale a sum of Rs1,608-12-8. This sum was more than sufficient to cover the arrears due for 1878-79 as well as the assessment payable for 1879-80, but the Collector, after deducting the arrears due for 1878-79, applied the rest of the sale-proceeds towards the payment of the cost of the punitive post. The assessment for 1879-80 having remained unpaid, the village was attached on the 1st of July 1880, under s. 159 of the Bombay Land Revenue Code (Act V of 1879). The attachment was followed on the 6th January 1881 by an order declaring the village to be forfeited under s. 153 of the Code. In 1886 the plaintiff filed the present suit against Government to recover possession of the village, and for a declaration that the order of forfeiture was illegal and ultra vires. The defendant pleaded (inter alia) that the suit was barred under s. 4, cl. (c), of the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act (X of 1876), that it was also barred by limitation. Held, also, that the plaintiff's claim for a declaration that the order of forfeiture was illegal was not barred by s. 4, cl. The proceeding authorized by law for the realization of land revenue, i.e., the attachment of the village, having been taken, no other proceeding could legally be taken, as against the plaintiff, till the expiration of twelve years from the date of the attachment. Held, further, that the claim for a declaration that the order of forfeiture was illegal was not time-barred, as it was governed by art. 120 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877). *SAMALDAS BEOHAR DESAI v. 3. ——— Service inam land—Suit for a declaration of title to trees thereon and for damages—Jurisdiction of Civil Court—Hereditary Offices Act (Bombay Act III of 1874)—Hereditary officer—Officiator.—The plaintiff complained that he was prevented from cutting the trees growing on land situate in the village of Tungari, belonging to certain persons who had sold the trees to him. He claimed damages and an injunction restraining the Collector from interfering with him. The defendant pleaded that the trees did not belong to the plaintiff's vendors, being on service inam land. The lower Court dismissed the plaintiff's claim, holding that the land, on which the trees were growing, was service inam land, and that the plaintiff's vendors had no title to them. On appeal, the High Court, on the evidence, upheld the lower Court's decision that the land was inam service land, but held that it did not necessarily follow that the trees upon it were the property of Government, and not of the vatandars. The latter might be the owners of the trees subject to a condition. The case was, therefore, remanded to the District Court for a finding on an issue as to whether the holders of service inam lands had a title to the trees on the lands, and, if so, whether they had the right to cut down trees without the permission of the Collector. On this finding the District Judge found in the affirmative. The case then came again before the High Court, when a preliminary objection was taken that under s. 4 of Act X of 1876 the Court had no jurisdiction. Held that, it having been decided that land in question was service inam land, the Court, under s. 4, cl. (a), of Bombay Act X of 1876, ceased to have jurisdiction over the plaintiff's claim against Government in respect of the trees growing thereon, as such claims related to property appertaining to the office of a village officer. *DESOUZA DEVINO v. 2. Boundary dispute.—“Boundary dispute,” as used in the Survey Act (Bombay Act I of 1865), means a contention between two neighbouring land-proprietors as to where a boundary line or boundary marks have or have been fixed by the survey officers. After the functions of the latter officers have ceased in a district, the Collector acting under Act III of 1863 is the proper officer to determine such a dispute, and fix the proper position of the boundary marks. But where a landholder claims to recover from a neighbouring holder land alleged to have been usurped or encroached upon by the latter, the person aggrieved must file his plaint in Court (which in the case of a claim for more possession may be the Court of the Munsifdar or the ordinary Civil Court), where the determination of the Collector as to the proper position of the boundary line or marks (although it of itself confers or withholds no right of possession) affords valuable evidence in adjudicating upon the rights of the parties. *PIRAMBAI DUNG C. Power of Government to raise assessment.—Bom. Reg. XVII of 1827, s. 4, cl. 2 and 3.—The words in s. 25 of Bombay Act I of 1865 confer upon Government no absolute power in all cases to fix any assessment they may please. But that section, as also s. 4, cl. 2, Regulation XVII of 1827, distinctly limit the power of Government to raise the assessment on land held partially exempt by right. Government, however, may set aside such limitations at their discretion by a legislative enactment, as provided by cl. 3 of the above Regulation. But Government can exercise this power only under “specific” rules. In Bombay Act I of 1865, s. 25, no such “specific” rules are to be found as would indicate that the Legislature intended to set aside the provisions of cl. 2, s. 4, Regulation XVII of 1827, and to enable the revenue officers to

ss. 35, 48—Power of local Legislature—Government land—Suit to set aside attachment on land—Building, Erection of.—In a suit for setting aside a summary attachment, under Bombay Act I of 1865, placed by the Collector on land held on a settlement for a period not exceeding thirty years, the value was held to be five times the assessment, and the stamp duty calculated upon it, irrespective of the actual market value or the amount for which the land was attached. The holder of a cocoanut cart in Bandora, in the island of Salsette, in the Thana district, paying an annual assessment of Rs 9 to Government, built a bungalow upon it without the permission of the Collector, who, under the rule purporting to have been issued by the Government of Bombay on the 1st February 1869 in accordance with the provisions of s. 35 of Bombay Act I of 1865, demanded from him a fine equal to sixty times the assessment, and, on the plaintiff's failure to pay the fine, summarily attached the land under the provisions of s. 48 of that Act. Held, first, that the Government of Bombay had no authority to make the rule of 1st February 1869, and that, s. 35 of the Survey Act providing no penalty for building without the Collector's permission, the attachment was illegal. Secondly, that the expressions “Government land” and “Land belonging to Government” in Bombay Act I of 1865 mean land of which Government is the proprietor, and do not apply to land in which the proprietary right in the soil vests in a private individual, whether or not it be subject to the payment of assessment to Government. Quere—Whether the amount of the

The lessee and his heirs held the site from the date of the lease down to 1873 without paying or being required to pay any land tax or rent to Government. S. 24 of Bombay Act I of 1874 authorizes the Bombay Tramway Company to make regulations “for regulating the travelling in or upon any carriage belonging to them.” Under this section, the Company made the following regulation:—“Any conductor who shall neglect to issue a ticket to a passenger, or shall issue to such passenger a ticket bearing a number other than one of the numbers contained in such books, or shall issue a ticket of a lower denomination than the amount of the fare, or non-consecutive in number, or a ticket other than the ticket provided by the Company for the journey to be travelled, shall for every such offence be liable to a penalty not exceeding Rs. 25.” Held that the regulation was ultra vires. MANOOKJI DADABHAI v. ss. 10, 11, and 12—Duties of the police patel in cases of unnatural or sudden death—Ancient village system of Police, how affected by the Code of Criminal Procedure (1882).—The ancient village system of police, as regulated by Bombay Act VIII of 1867, remains unaffected by the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act X of 1862) except where the Code contains a specific provision. Under Bombay Act VIII of 1867, the police patel has to do much more than merely inform the district police. He has himself to investigate the matter of a crime and obtain all procurable evidence. Under s. 11 of the Act, if an unnatural or sudden death occur, or any corpse be found, he must forthwith hold an inquest and investigate with the panel the causes of death and all the circumstances of the case, and make a written report of the same. If it appears that the death was unlawfully caused, he must immediately give notice to the police station, and if the state of the corpse permits, he shall at once forward it to the Civil Surgeon or other appointed medical officer. These provisions of the law are likely to be defeated if the police patel refrains from the proper action until the district police officers arrive on the spot. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. RAGHO MAHADU

27. ————— Suit upon a bond executed by the defendants to the plaintiff for the payment of a sum of money by instalments. The bond contained a proviso that, on default being made in the payment of any one instalment, the whole amount should become due. Default was made in the payment of several instalments, but subsequently payments were made by the defendants and accepted by the plaintiff on account of the unpaid instalments. The defendants pleaded the law of limitation. The suit was brought more than three years after the first default in payment of an instalment had been made, but within three years from the time when, taking into account the payments that had been made, the first instalment claimed became due. Held that these payments as regards both parties must be considered as if made at the time fixed; that the defendants could not rely upon the stipulation as making

29. ————— Waiver of default—Limitation.—Suit brought on 24th April 1873 for principal and interest due on a bond dated 30th October 1850. The debt was payable by eight annual instalments, on failure of any one of which the whole amount was to be payable on demand. No instalment was paid, and when the suit was brought, defendant pleaded that the suit was barred, as three years had elapsed from the date on which the last instalment became due. Held that the usual clause, that on failure to pay one instalment the whole amount shall be payable on demand, gave a mere election to plaintiff of converting the obligation into a different one; that that election was never exercised, and that the document continued to be one securing the payment of a debt by instalments, as to all of which the action had long been barred; and that it was unnecessary, therefore, to consider whether, in the present case, "on demand" must not be construed according to its meaning at the period at which the words were written. BATHAMAKALA SUBBAMMAH v. 30. ————— Construction of bond—Payments towards interest and principal.—Defendants were indebted to the plaintiff in the sum of Rs. 1,400. With the object of liquidating this debt with interest at 12 per cent. per annum, the parties executed a bond, whereby it was agreed that the defendants should grant an ijara lease of certain property for the term of fourteen years to the plaintiff's husband; and that the rent reserved on this lease should be paid by the lessee to the plaintiff during the terms in semi-annual payments each of Rs. 12. Held that, on the proper construction of this agreement, the semi-annual instalments were to be applied first to the reduction of the principal money due, and not to the payment of the interest. SHURNOMOYEE DOSSRE v. 31. — Course of action—Waiver of default in payment.—When a sum of money is payable under a bond by instalments with a condition that, in default of paying one instalment, the whole amount shall then become due, and default is made, but the obligee subsequently accepts payments of one or more sums as an instalment or instalments due under the bond, such acceptance amounts arises until some fresh default is made in the payment of a subsequent instalment. PASSAMMA ROW GARU v. TOLETTI VENKAYA. 5 Mad., 198

33. — Waiver of default—Limitation Acts, 1871 and 1877, art. 75—Civil

obligee may waive the default under Acts IX of 1871 and XV of 1877, sch. II, art. 76, but the Courts have no authority to compel him to waive it. Neither Act VIII of 1859, s. 194, nor Act X of 1877, s. 210, confers any authority on the Courts to relieve a contracting party from such an express stipulation in a bond payable by instalments as to the consequence of default in punctual payment of the instalments. A debt being presently due, an agreement to pay it by instalments, with a stipulation that in default the creditor may demand immediate payment of the whole balance due with interest, is not to be relieved against in equity. Such a stipulation is not in the nature of a penalty, inasmuch as its object is only to secure payment in a particular manner. The defendant executed to the plaintiff a bond payable by instalments, and expressly stipulating for the payment of the whole amount on failure to pay any instalment on the day fixed. He paid the first instalment, but made default in paying the second, which fell due on the 3rd August 1878. On the 20th August plaintiff sued to recover the whole balance due on the bond. Defendant admitted the bond, but pleaded tender of the amount of the second instalment as due after the due date, and prayed for payment by instalments without any interest. The first Court passed a decree in the plaintiff's favour for the amount claimed with costs, but ordered defendant to pay Rs100 and the costs at once, and the balance by yearly instalments of Rs100 each, with interest at six per cent. till payment. The District Judge, on appeal, affirmed the decree, with a slight variation as to interest, which he directed the defendant to pay on overdue instalments only. Held by the High Court, on second appeal, that neither of the lower Courts had jurisdiction, without the consent of the parties, to substitute, for the contract made by them, terms which the Court preferred. Held, also, that plaintiff was entitled to sue on the day after that on which the default was made, viz., on the day after that fixed for the payment of the instalment, and that the subordinate Judge had no power to rule the contrary. BAGHO GOBARD PAMAJEE v. DICHAND. I. L. R., 4 Bom., 96

34. — Waiver of default—Limitation Act, 1871, art. 75.—Where a bond is payable by instalments, with a provision that upon default of payment of any instalment the whole sum then unpaid shall become due with interest, the creditor, though he can elect but once to enforce this provision, may waive the benefit of it not only on the first, but on any subsequent default. SATRACHILLA v. SETAHAMA. I. L. R., 3 Mad., 61

35. — Default in payment—Expiration of time for specific enforcement of contract.—A bond for money provided that on failure on the part of the obligor to pay interest as agreed in the bond, and within a certain period from the date of the bond, the obligee might sue for possession of the immovable property mortgaged in the bond. Default was made in the payment of interest as agreed, but the obligee deferred bringing a suit for possession of the mortgaged property so long that the time mentioned in the bond expired before he could obtain a decree. Held that under these circumstances a decree for possession of the property could not be granted to him. *BALWANT DIXON v. 36. — Suit on bond—Limitation—Burden of proof—Indorsement of payment of instalments.—Where a defendant sets up the defence of limitation, he must plead it, and so that the claim is barred. default in payment of the eighth instalment. The bond showed on its face indorsements of the payments for which credit was given. The obligor alleged that no instalments were paid after the third year, that therefore the debt became due at an earlier date than that stated by the plaintiff, and that the claim was barred by limitation. Held that, inasmuch as the defendant adduced no evidence to show that the later instalments were not paid, and inasmuch as the evidence produced by the plaintiff did not show that the debt accrued at a date earlier than the limitation period, the plea of limitation failed. RADHA PRASAD SINGH v. There was a further stipulation that, on default of payment, the bond was to be enforced as a decree. On failure of payment, the obligee applied for execution under s. 53, Act XX of 1866, but the Subordinate Judge ordered the payment to be made by instalments. BOTTOMRY-BOND.

1. — Advance for repair of ship—Master's lien for wages—Priority.—A, the agent for a ship in port at Bombay, lent the master money on a bond, in the nature of a bottomry-bond, which he obtained from the master under pressure of necessity. It appeared that A, at the time of the making of the bond, had funds of his principal's in hand. Held that the master's lien for wages has priority over the bond-holder. IN THE MATTER OF THE "Good Success." 2. — Supply of necessities to foreign ship—Claim for, against proceeds of ship—Statute 7 Geo. 1, c. 21, s. 2.—The Statute 7 Geo. 1, c. 21, s. 2 (which declared void all contracts by way of bottomry made by any subject of His Majesty on any ship in the service of foreigners bound or designed to trade to the East, and all contracts for loading or supplying such ships with goods, etc., or with any provisions, stores, or necessities, etc.), is repealed by implication. When a suit is brought by material men for necessities supplied to a foreign ship against the surplus proceeds of such ship lying in the registry of the Court, and there is no opposition on the part of the owners of these proceeds, the Court has a discretionary power to allow the claim of the material men to be paid out of such unclaimed proceeds. IN THE PROCEEDS OF THE "ASIA." 3. — Master's lien for wages—Sale of ship—Charterer—Priority.—The charterer of a ship advanced money to enable her to complete the voyage, and obtained as security a "bottomry-bond," signed by both the master and owner. On the completion of the voyage, the charterer got the ship arrested and sold, and the money was brought into Court. Before any order had been made for the payment of the proceeds out of Court, the master also had got the ship arrested at his suit for wages due, but no decree had been obtained. Subsequently, the charterer, without notice to the master, obtained an order of Court for the payment of the proceeds of sale to satisfy his bottomry-bond. Thereupon the master applied to restrain the charterer from taking the money out of Court until the claim for wages had been first satisfied. Held that the master had a lien on the proceeds for wages due to him at the time of the sale of the ship, prior to that of the bottomry-bond-holder, and that he was entitled to have the proceeds retained in Court until the hearing of his claim. IN THE MATTER OF THE SHIP "PORTUGAL,"

1. ——— Demarcation of boundary line—Beng. Reg. X of 1822, ss. 2, 3, and 8—Suit for declaration of boundary contrary to survey award—Proprietary rights, Exercise of—Presumption of ownership—Beng. Reg. XI of 1825, s. 5, cl. 12.—At the time of the Permanent Settlement the northern boundary of the pergunnah Shoosung (situated in Mymensingh, at the foot of the Garrow hills) was not defined by Government. From before that time, and certainly for more than sixty years, the zamindars of the pergunnah have always, but in an irregular and uncertain manner, exercised certain rights in the Garrow hills and over the inhabitants, who are half savages, such as hunting elephants, cutting wood, levying cesses on the inhabitants when possible (including in some parts of the hills a tribute of one rupee per hut), and exacting occasional services from them. Government held a survey, and declared the northern boundary of pergunnah Shoosung to be a line running along the base of the Garrow hills. The zamindar thereupon sued to set aside the survey, and for a declaration that the northern boundary lay many miles further north, and that the intermediate hill country belonged to him as forming part of pergunnah Shoosung. Held (by SETON-KARR, J.) that the acts of possession proved by the zamindar were sufficient under the circumstances to prove his proprietary right in the disputed tract, and for the passing of a decree in his favour. Held (by MACPHERSON, J.) that they were not sufficient to entitle him to a decree, being acts of mere easement independent of possession. Held by PEACOCK, C.J., JACKSON and PHEAR, JJ., on appeal under the Letters Patent.—The rules laid down by Regulation X of 1802 were intended to take effect only within the tract of country described in s. 2, within which the administration of civil and criminal justice, etc., was by s. 3 declared to be vested in an officer to be denominated the Civil Commissioner of the north-eastern parts of Rungpore. The proviso in s. 8 was not intended to give substantive powers to the Governor General in Council in respect of other tracts of the country, and cl. 2 of the same section did not intend to take away the power of any Civil Court except within that tract. The proviso contained in s. 8 does not authorize Government to separate any part of the Garrow country beyond that described in s. 2 from the district and from the general Regulations, but merely directs the separation of such tracts from the estates of the neighbouring zamindars, and the discontinuance of the collection of cesses by the zamindars from the Garrows. By cl. 2, s. 8, the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts is taken away only in respect of acts of the above description, done under the authority of the Government; but that does not take away the right of a zamindar to contest a survey award drawing a line which deprives him of part of his zamindari and his permanently-settled estate. Where a Rajah had exercised rights and collected dues on certain hills and in forests north of an alleged line, and it was the unanimous opinion of all the revenue authorities that the forests were within his permanently-settled estate, the assumption by them and Government of such line as the boundary of the Rajah's estate, throwing upon him the onus of proving his claim to any portion north of that line, was held to be arbitrary and anomalous. If such proceedings were adopted under cl. 12, s. 5, Regulation IX of 1825, they were wholly irregular, and the irregularity can be no ground for excluding the Court from examining them. When a man is found exercising, on both sides of a boundary line, without objection, rights of ownership or incorporeal rights, and when it is not shown that there is any other owner of the soil, or that any objection to the exercise of such rights was made during a long course of years, his acts cannot be treated as the encroachments of a wrong-doer. Per PHEAR, J.—Where acts of user illustrate all the modes of enjoyment of which a disputed property can reasonably be expected to be capable, it can be rightly attributed to proprietorship of the tract upon which they were exercised. 1. Demarcation of boundary line—Beng. Reg. X of 1822, ss. 2, 3, and 8—Suit for declaration of boundary contrary to survey award—Proprietary rights, Exercise of—Presumption of ownership—Beng. Reg. XI of 1825, s. 5, cl. 12.*—At the time of the Permanent Settlement the northern boundary of the pergunnah Shoosung (situated in Mymensingh, at the foot of the Garrow hills) was not defined by Government. From before that time, and certainly for more than sixty years, the zamindars of the pergunnah have always, but in an irregular and uncertain manner, exercised certain rights regular and uncertain manner, exercised certain rights in the Garrow hills and over the inhabitants, who are half savages, such as hunting elephants, cutting wood, levying cesses on the inhabitants when possible (including in some parts of the hills a tribute of one rupee per hut), and exacting occasional services from them. Government held a survey, and declared the northern boundary of pergunnah Shoosung to be a line running along the base of the Garrow hills. The zamindar thereupon sued to set aside the survey, and for a declaration that the northern boundary lay many miles further north, and that the intermediate hill country belonged to him as forming part of pergunnah Shoosung. Held (by SETON-KARR, J.) that the

acts of possession proved by the zamindar were sufficient under the circumstances to prove his proprietary right in the disputed tract, and for the passing of a decree in his favour. Held (by MACPHERSON, J.) that they were not sufficient independent of possession, being acts of mere easement independent of possession. Held by PEACOCK, C.J., JACKSON and PHEAR, JJ., on appeal under the Letters Patent.—The rules laid down by Regulation X of 1802 were intended to take effect only within the tract of country described in s. 2, within which the administration of civil and criminal justice, etc., was by s. 3 declared to be vested in an officer to be denominated the Civil Commissioner of the north-eastern parts of Rungpore. The proviso in s. 8 was not intended to give substantive powers to the Governor General in Council in respect of other tracts of the country, and away the power of any Civil Court except within that tract. The proviso contained in s. 8 does not authorize Government to separate any part of the Garrow country beyond that described in s. 2 from the district and from the general Regulations, but merely directs the separation of cesses by the zamindars from the neighbouring zamindars, and the discontinuance of the collection of cesses by the zamindars from the Garrows. By cl. 2, s. 8, the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts is taken away only in respect of acts of the above description, done under the authority of the Government; but that does not take away the right of a zamindar to contest a survey award drawing a line which deprives him of part of his zamindari and his permanently-settled estate. Where a Rajah had exercised rights and collected dues on certain hills and in forests north of an alleged line, and it was the unanimous opinion of all the revenue authorities that the forests were within his permanently-settled estate, the assumption by them and Government of such line as the boundary of the Rajah's estate, throwing upon him the onus of proving his claim to any portion north of that line, was held to be arbitrary and anomalous. If such proceedings were adopted under cl. 12, s. 5, Regulation IX of 1825, they were wholly irregular, and the irregularity can be no ground for excluding the Court from examining them. When a man is found exercising, on both sides of a boundary line, without objection, rights of ownership or incorporeal rights, and when it is not shown that there is any other owner of the soil, or that any objection to the exercise of such rights was made during a long course of years, his acts cannot be treated as the encroachments of a wrong-doer. Per PHEAR, J.—Where acts of user illustrate all the modes of enjoyment of which a disputed property can reasonably be expected to be capable, it can be rightly attributed to proprietorship of the tract upon which they were exercised. —Agent—Right to commission—Claim of brokerage from both vendor and vendee—Vendor and purchaser.—A broker is entitled to his commission if the relation of buyer and seller is really brought about by him, although the actual sale has not been effected by him. A broker is entitled to his commission where he has induced in the vendor the contracting mind, the willingness to open negotiations upon a reasonable basis, even though a change or modification of the terms of the contract is made by the buyer and seller without his intervention. A broker sued the Municipality of Bombay for brokerage in respect of lands purchased by them. Held that, if during the time that the broker was negotiating with the vendor the latter was induced to consent to the sale, the broker was entitled to his brokerage. It was not material to inquire what operated upon the mind of the vendor, and whether it was the advice of friends, or the knowledge that his land could be acquired compulsorily, or the persuasions of the broker. It was sufficient to support the broker's claim if the vendor's acceptance of the terms was brought about during his intervention; and the fact that the Municipal Commissioner stepped in at the last moment, and himself actually struck the bargain, did not deprive the broker of his brokerage. 2. —Suit for brokerage—Contract effected by broker not carried out by purchaser—Quantum meruit.

The plaintiff was employed by the defendants as broker to sell certain property. The defendants' letter, dated 3rd January 1895, engaging him as broker stated as follows:—"It is understood that the brokerage will be paid on receipt by us of the money, and that this transaction is to be completed within a fortnight from date." The plaintiff negotiated with one Pestonji Patel and his brother, who eventually agreed to become purchasers, but stipulated for four or five months within which to pay the purchase-money. On the 1st February 1895, the defendants through the plaintiff finally closed the contract with the purchasers, one of the terms of which provided that Rs. 10,000 should be paid immediately as earnest and the balance (Rs. 27,000) of the purchase-money to be paid within four months. The purchasers were, however, unable to pay the Rs. 10,000 earnest-money, and they handed to the defendants three Bank of Bombay shares as security for the performance of the contract. One of the purchasers shortly afterwards died: the defendants apparently abandoned the idea of enforcing the contract, and at the end of the year they returned to the purchaser's family two of the Bank of Bombay shares, having (as they alleged) sold the third to defray the expenses which they had incurred in connection with the transaction. The plaintiff sued to recover Rs. 1,500 as brokerage from the defendants. Held that under the circumstances the plaintiff was not entitled to recover the Rs. 1,500, but only to a quantum meruit, there being no previous agreement as to the time when the brokerage was to be paid; and that he was only entitled to a percentage (5 per cent.) on the value of the shares which had been actually received by the defendants. Part of the business for which the plaintiff was employed was to find a solvent purchaser. STOKES v. SOONDERNATH KHOTE. [I. L. R., 22 Bom., 540]

that in the year 1870 they had adjusted accounts with the arrangement between them and the plaintiff to refer the matter to the Government surveyor; that this latter covenant was only collateral, and did not interfere with the plaintiff's right to sue the defendants for their half share of the cost; that the plaintiff's cause of action in this respect arose on the 16th October 1878, when the contractor's claim was finally settled, and that this suit not having been brought for more than three years after that date, it was barred by limitation. Held that the suit was not barred. There was no right of action independently of the valuation and award of the Government surveyor. There was no separate covenant to pay compensation to which the covenant for reference to the Government surveyor could be collateral. The rights of the parties were defined by the contracts, and under these each lessee might have the benefit of a party wall on such terms, and no others, as he on his part submitted to. Payment of a share of the cost was not one of those terms except in so far as each lessee, if a dispute arose, was bound by the decision of a Government surveyor. That decision was not ancillary, serving to give greater explicitness to a right already fully subsisting. It was essential to the right itself, and, until it was made, no cause of action for the moiety of the cost arose. Where,

BUILDING ERECTED BY ADJOINING OWNERS.

Liability of adjoining owners for costs of party wall.—Agreement for building.—Decision of Government surveyor made final in case of dispute.—Right of suit.—Right of one owner over portion of party wall not used or built on by the other.—Under separate agreements made by them respectively with the Government, the plaintiff and defendant held adjoining pieces of land for building. The agreements contained the same terms and stipulations, among which were the following:—“(a) The buildings to be continuous, with party walls common to both adjoining houses. (b) All disputes regarding the cost and maintenance of party walls to be decided by the Government surveyor, whose decision shall be binding on both parties.” The plaintiff employed a contractor to erect a house upon his plot of land. The house was completed in 1870, the north wall of which was built as a party wall in pursuance of the condition contained in the agreement with Government. Disputes subsequently arose between the plaintiff and his contractor, which were not settled until the 26th August 1878, on which date the plaintiff paid the contractor a sum of Rs. 51-4-11, which included the cost of the party wall. After the plaintiff's house had been completed, the defendant built his house upon the adjoining land, and in so doing he used a large portion of the party wall as the southern wall of his house. He paid the plaintiff half the cost of the portion so used by him. The rear portion of the said wall was not used by the defendant, as his house did not extend so far to the rear as the house of the plaintiff. The plaintiff demanded payment of half the cost of that part of the wall not used by the defendants, but the defendants refused to pay. The plaintiff then claimed that part of the wall as his own property, and proceeded to open windows in it. The defendants objected. The plaintiff subsequently filed the present suit, claiming from the defendants payment of half the cost of the said portion of the wall not used by the defendants, and, in the event of such payment not being awarded, he prayed for a declaration that he was the sole owner of the said portion of the wall, and for an injunction restraining the defendants from disturbing him in the sole enjoyment thereof. The brother (Khatav Luddha) of the first defendant was originally made the second defendant of the suit. He, however, disclaimed all interest in the premises, and it appeared that in 1876 the first defendant had sold the property to him (Khatav Luddha), who in 1879 sold it to Kesserbai, the first defendant's wife. Kesserbai accordingly was made the second

defendant in the place of Khatav Luddha. Both the defendants pleaded limitation, and denied their liability to pay any part of the cost of that part of the wall which they did not use. The first defendant further alleged that he had paid the whole cost of the foundation and other parts of the said wall, and claimed to set off this payment against the claim of the plaintiff. At the original hearing, SCOTT, J., held (1) that the part of the wall in dispute, although not used by the defendants, was a party wall, having regard to the terms of the agreement under which the said wall was erected; (2) that Kesserbai was liable, equally with the first defendant, to pay for this part of the wall, having purchased the property subject to the terms of the original agreement of which she presumably had notice; (3) that the suit was not barred, but that there was no right of action for the cost of the party wall independently of the award of the Government surveyor, in whose decision lay all disputes as to such cost; and that, until his decision was given, there was no complete cause of action. SCOTT, J., accordingly, on 11th December 1882, decreed that the defendants were severally liable to pay the half of whatever sum the Government surveyor might certify to be due for the cost of the disputed part of the said wall, and that the defendants were entitled to set off, in the calculation of what was due from them, the cost of any work or materials which the Government surveyor might find had been contributed by the first defendant. The case was thereupon adjourned, in order that the certificate of the Government surveyor might be obtained. The Government surveyor subsequently gave his certificate as to the cost of the unused portion of the said wall, but stated that on the evidence before him he was unable to decide as to the ownership of the foundations, &c., of the wall. The case came on again before SCOTT, J., who decided to take evidence on the points left undetermined by the Government surveyor. Witnesses were accordingly examined, and on 11th December 1883 the Court disallowed the defendant's claim of set-off and gave judgment for the plaintiff for half the sum certified by the Government surveyor as the cost of the disputed part of the wall. The defendants appealed. Held that, having regard to the terms of the agreements under which the plaintiff and defendants respectively held their property, the Court was not competent to determine the question of the defendant's set-off or the other points raised by the pleadings. These were matters to be decided by the Government surveyor, whose certificate was a condition precedent to the plaintiff's right to sue and upon which the Court might give judgment. Held, also, that the plaintiff was not entitled to use the portion of the wall not occupied by the defendants in any way except as a party wall. It was erected under the agreement as a party wall, and that it should be used for a purpose inconsistent with the idea of its being a party wall would be opposed to the true intention of the parties to the agreement, whether Government or the lessees. The plaintiff was not entitled to the full right of ownership over it, as if it had been built on his own ground: the declaration and injunction asked for, therefore, were refused. *COVERJI LUDDHA v. s. 4—Buddhist law of marriage in British Burma—Wife's claim upon husband for maintenance.—By the Buddhist law of marriage, as administered in the Courts of British Burma, it is the duty of the husband to provide subsistence for his wife and to furnish her with suitable clothes and ornaments. If he fails to do so, he is liable to pay debts contracted by her for necessities; but it appears that this law would not be applicable where she has sufficient means of her own. No authority has been found for saying that, where the wife has maintained herself, she can sue her husband for maintenance for the period during which she has done so. A wife married according to Burmese rights and customs claimed from her husband, in a Court in British Burma, a certain sum for her ex-of Justices—Procedure.—The Chairman of the Justices of Calcutta, on the complaint of the Health Officer, issued a warrant for the seizure of certain articles of food, and without notice to the owners, or reducing the proceedings to writing, condemned them as unfit for use. In support of a rule nisi for a certiorari for bringing up the order that it might be quashed, it was argued that the Chairman had not, as such, jurisdiction to make the order; and that it was invalid, as notice had not been given, and the proceedings had not been reduced to writing. Cause was shown that the description of the Chairman was immaterial, as he was also a Justice of the Peace, and that such summary proceedings were necessary for the public safety. Held that the Act does not empower the Chairman of the Justices, as such, to issue a warrant under the 200th section; that such a warrant must show, on the fact of it, that the Justice issuing it had jurisdiction; that the application under s. 200 must be reduced to writing; that the evidence taken therefrom must be recorded; and that notice must be given to the party proceeded against. *DAY & Co. v. The case was subsequently heard by B, and it was shown that notice of the assessment under class II, sch. 3, had been duly served on A, and that, though he then denied his liability to take out any license, and stated that he carried on no business as alleged, he had not appealed against the assessment under s. 79. It was further shown that the assessment had been confirmed by the Chairman of the Corporation, but that the amount had not been paid. A thereupon tendered evidence to show that he was not liable to take out any license; but B refused to hear such evidence, and, convicting A, sentenced him to pay a fine. On an application, under the above circumstances, to the High Court under s. 147, Act X of 1875, Held that the finality of the decision of the Chairman referred to in s. 79 has only reference to the class under which a particular person, who is admittedly bound to take out a license under s. 75, should be assessed, and not to the case where the liability to take out a license at all is denied, this being a question which can only be determined judicially after taking evidence by a competent Court in a prosecution under s. 77, and that, therefore, the refusal of B to hear the evidence tendered by A on this point was illegal. *WOOD v. CANTONMENT.

1. — Grant of land for building purposes—Right of Government to eject grantee—Regulations and orders for the Bengal Army—Alluvial land—Assessment of rent.—Certain ground situate within the limits of a cantonment was granted for building purposes by the military authorities in 1802. In June 1873 such cantonment was abandoned, and the ground comprised therein was made over to the Collector of the district in which it was situate. The Government subsequently sued P, who had succeeded to such grant, claiming (i) a declaration of its proprietary right to the ground comprised in such grant, and to the alluvial accretions to such ground; (ii) that P should be directed to pay rents for such ground and such alluvial accretions; and (iii) that, should P refuse to pay the rents fixed, she might be ejected and the Government put in possession. Held that, inasmuch as under the Military Regulations relating to such grants such a grant cannot be resumed by the Government without a month's notice and without payment of the value of any buildings which may have been authorized to be erected, and as the Civil Court had no jurisdiction in the matter of assessing rent on such alluvial accretions, which were outside the original grant, the Government was not entitled to the second and third reliefs it claimed, but was entitled only to a declaration of its proprietary title to such ground and to such alluvial accretions.

2. — Grant of land by military authorities for building purposes—Resumption of land by civil authorities—Assignment of profits of the land to municipal Committee—Liability of grantee to pay ground-rent—Refusal of grantee to pay ground-rent to municipality—Suit by the Secretary of State for India for declaration of title and assessment of rent—Cause of action—Jurisdiction of Civil Court—Right of grantee to compensation in case of ejectment.—Certain land situate within the limits of a cantonment was granted free of rent for building purposes by the military authorities. Under the Military Regulations relating to such grants, such a grant could not be resumed by the Government without a month's notice, and without the payment of the value of such buildings which might have been authorized to be erected. The land was subsequently resumed by the civil authorities, and, the land being within municipal limits, the ground-rents on it were assigned to the municipality. The Municipal Committee having demanded ground-rent in respect of the buildings erected on such land under such grant from the representative in title of the original grantee, and the latter having refused to pay for the same or to vacate the land, the Secretary of State for India in Council sued him in the Civil Court for a declaration of proprietary right to the land, for its assessment to ground-rent, and, in the event of the refusal of the defendant to pay such rent, when fixed, for his ejectment therefrom, and for mesne profits of the land for six years. The cause of action was stated in the plaint to be the refusal of the defendant to pay ground-rent or to accept a lease or to surrender the land, after a notice to that effect had been issued to him by the Municipal Committee as the plaintiffs' agents. Held that the Municipal Committee were the plaintiffs' duly authorized agents to lease and obtain rent for the land occupied by the defendant's buildings with their compounds; that such notice was properly issued in that character on behalf of the plaintiff; and that the defendant's subsequent refusal to pay rent, or to accept a lease or to evacuate the premises, amounted to a sufficient denial of the plaintiff's title to afford him a good cause of action; that, assuming that no agreement to pay rent existed, the plaintiff was entitled to demand and recover reasonable compensation for the use and occupation of the land by the defendant; and it had suit was maintainable in the Civil Court, and it had power to grant the plaintiff the reliefs sought; that by the conditions of the grant by the military authorities the plaintiff was not disqualified from demanding ground-rent for the land before he had paid the defendant the value of the buildings, but that, looking to those conditions, it would not be fair or equitable to grant the plaintiff a decree, pure and simple, for the ejectment of the defendant, but he should be put under the condition that, if in case of the defendant's refusal to pay the rent fixed he desired to eject him, the value of the buildings as cantonment residences must first be determined and, when determined, must be tendered to the defendant, and, if the latter refused to accept it, the plaintiff would then be entitled to eject him. 4. ——— Delivery of goods carried by sea—Lossing goods—Custom of port of Bombay—Portation of goods—A carrier by sea is obliged to make an actual delivery of goods carried by him to the consignee, but such prima facie obligation may be affected by the custom of the port where the goods are to be delivered. Neither by the custom of the port of Bombay nor by the provisions of the Customs Act is the master of a ship bound to wait fifteen days before commencing to land his cargo; but within a reasonable time after the arrival of his ships—18 hours in the case of a sailing vessel, and somewhat less in the case of a steamer—he is at liberty to land goods if the consignee has not sent boats for them; and such landing is not unlawful, nor a breach of contract as carrier on the part of the master. The landing of the goods under the above circumstances and setting them apart for the consignee do not constitute a delivery of them to the consignee; but such goods, after being so landed, continue in the possession of the master as carrier. Course of legislation with reference to the landing of goods on the custom-house wharf reviewed. Quere—Whether, under the special circumstances of this case, the goods, when so landed, remained in the custody of the master in his capacity of common carrier or as a warehouseman? HONGKONG AND SHANGHAI BANKING CORPORATION v. Such a person is bound to exercise reasonable and ordinary care in respect of baggage entrusted to him, but is not responsible for any loss which may not arise from the negligence or default of himself or his servants, he not being a common carrier bound to ensure the safe conveyance of the baggage against all risk, save the act of God or the Queen's enemies. He is to be regarded as a bailee for hire, and the fact that he does not deliver the baggage at the end of the journey should be accepted as prima facie proof that the loss has been occasioned by negligence for which he is responsible, and consequently the onus of proof lies on him that reasonable care was exercised by him. TODAL SINGH v. Held that the company being a foreign company were not common carriers; that the plaintiff was bound by the clause and conditions on the back of the passage-ticket; that none of the conditions had the effect of relieving the company from the consequences of their own negligence; that, in order to establish a defence upon the ground that the plaintiff's luggage was not registered, it was necessary for the defendants to prove, not only that the plaintiff was bound by the conditions, but also that they were ready and willing to register the plaintiff's luggage, and that the plaintiff did not in fact register it; that as the contract was made in Calcutta, the defendants were bound by the provisions of s. 151 of the Indian Contract Act. The plaintiffs entrusted to the defendants, who were common carriers under the Carriers Act, III of 1865, certain goods which were lost in the course of their carriage on one of the defendants' steamers. On the facts it was found that the defendants took as much care of the goods as a man of ordinary prudence would under similar circumstances take of his own goods of the same bulk, quality, and value as the goods bailed; and that the loss was not occasioned by the act of God or the Queen's enemies. There was no special contract of the nature provided for by s. 6, Act III of 1865. Held that ss. 151, 152 of the Contract Act did not apply, and that the defendants were liable for the loss of the goods. MOTHOORA KANT SHAW v. INDIA existence of which suag could not have been ascertained by any precautions on the part of the defendants. The goods were received for carriage by the defendants under conditions printed on the back of "forwarding note" signed by the plaintiff, by one of which conditions the defendants protected themselves from liability against accident of certain particular kinds, and "from any accident, loss, or damage resulting from negligence, etc." Held that the loss was not occasioned by the negligence of the defendants; that the forwarding note "was a special contract" within the meaning of the Carriers Act; that the clause purporting to protect the defendants from negligence was bad as being in contravention of the Carriers Act; but that, nevertheless, the contract was not thereby rendered wholly bad, but was divisible, being good so far as it provided that the defendants were not to be liable for loss by accident, but bad so far as it provided that they should not be liable for negligence. *INDIA GENERAL STEAM NAVIGATION Co. v. His responsibility to the owner does not originate in contract, but is cast upon him by reason of his exercising this public employment for reward. His liability as an insurer is an incident of the contract between him and the owner not inconsistent with the provisions of the Contract Act; and the Law of Carriers partly written and partly unwritten remained as before that Act. The Railway Acts of 1879 and 1890 reduced the responsibility of carriers by railway to that of bailees under the Contract Act, but this does not affect the construction of the law relating to common carriers and the Act of 1865. Notwithstanding some general expressions in the chapter on bailments, a common carrier's responsibility is not within the Contract Act, 1872. ss. 6 and 8—Negligence—Accident, Loss by—Special contract—Suit for damages.—The plaintiffs delivered to the defendants certain goods for carriage to Calcutta in a flat belonging to the defendants. The goods were carried under the terms of a special contract or "forwarding note," signed by the shipper. One of the conditions of the forwarding note was as follows:—"The Company will not be under any liability for damages or compensation in respect of loss of, or damage to, goods . . . except such liability as they are or may be subject to under the provisions of any law for the time being in force or of any contract other than this for the time being in existence between the Company and the shipper." While on board the defendants' flat, the goods were destroyed by fire. At the trial of the case, the defendants gave evidence showing the state of things before the fire occurred, the circumstances leading to the discovery of the fire (but not the cause or origin of it), and the measures taken to extinguish the fire. Held that the occurrence of a fire, under the circumstances disclosed in the case, without any explanation as to the origin of it, was of itself evidence of negligence. Held, also, reversing the decision of SALE, J., that the defendants had not discharged the onus cast upon them by law of showing that there was no negligence. Central Cachar Tea Company v. Rivers Steam Navigation Company, I. L. R., 24 Calc., 787, explained. Held on the construction of the above clause (per SALE, J., in the Court below, and per TREVELYAN, J., in the Court of Appeal) that the words "in any law for the time being in force" must be taken to refer not to the common law, but to the law as laid down in the Carriers Act (III of 1865), and that, unless their liability was enlarged by express contract, the defendant company were liable only for loss or damage of which, under s. 6 of that Act, they were not allowed to relieve themselves, that is, only for loss occasioned by their negligence or criminal acts of themselves, their servants or agents. The Judicial Committee dismissed an appeal in the above case from the decree of the Appellate High Court, which proceeded on a 9 of the Carriers Act (III of 1865), that Court having taken the non-delivery as placing the burden of proving absence of negligence on the carriers. There were facts showing that no adequate means had been provided by the defendants for extinguishing a fire on board, and that the watch was inefficient. The defendants, accordingly, had failed to exonerate themselves. RIVERS STEAM NAVIGATION CO. v. CHOUTMULL DOOGUR . . . I. L. R., 28 Calc., 398 intention.—In a trial with a jury under s. 366 of the Penal Code, the Judge on the question of intent charged the jury in the following words:—"It remains only to consider the question of intent. The charge was that the girl was kidnapped in order that she might be forced or seduced to illicit intercourse. As to this, it is sufficient to say that no other inference is possible under the circumstances. When a man carries off a young girl at night from her father's house, the presumption is that he did so with the intent indicated above. It would be open to him, if he had admitted the kidnapping, to prove that he had some other object, but no other object is apparent on the face of the facts." Held that this amounted to a misdirection of the jury. The question of intent was a pure question of fact, but the way in which it had been put to the jury left them no option but adopt the view taken by the Judge. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. HUGHES

54. ——— Murder—Distinction between murder and culpable homicide.—When a prisoner is on his trial by a jury upon a charge of murder, it is the duty of the Judge to point out to the jury accurately the difference between murder and culpable homicide not amounting to murder, and to direct the attention of the jury to the evidence, and to leave them to find the facts and say (under the direction of the Judge as regards the law) of what offence the prisoner is guilty. QUEEN v. SHAMSHERE BEG

[9 W. R., Cr., 51]

55. ——— Possession of forged document—Penal Code, ss. 474, 475—Possession of forged documents bearing counterfeit marks—Ingredients of the offence.—To support a charge under s. 474 of the Penal Code, it is necessary for the prosecution to prove (1) that the documents in respect of which the charge is brought are forged; (2) that the accused knew them to be forged; (3) that he was in possession of them; (4) that he intended that they should be fraudulently or dishonestly used as genuine; and (5) that each of the documents is of the description mentioned in s. 466 or s. 467 of the Penal Code. To support a charge under the latter part of s. 475 of the Penal Code, it is necessary for the prosecution to prove (1) that the accused was in possession of the papers referred to in the charge; (2) that the devices or marks were counterfeited on them; (3) that the marks were such as are used for the purpose of authenticating any document described in s. 467; and (4) that the accused intended that the marks should be used for the purpose of giving the appearance of authenticity to documents either then forged or thereafter to be forged. The accused was charged with being in possession of forged documents, an offence punishable under ss. 474 and 475 of the Penal Code. In his summing up, the Sessions Judge, after stating that the documents were admitted by the defence to be forgeries, told the jury that the only issue they had to decide was whether the forged documents were in the possession of the accused, and whether the nature of one, at all events, of the documents was such as to connect them with the accused, being the kind of document he would be likely to have in his house and he alone; and that, if they found this issue in the affirmative, they must return a verdict of guilty. Held that the charge to the jury was defective and misleading, and insufficiently complied with the requirements of s. 297 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. 56. ——— Private defence, Right of—Penal Code, s. 100, cls. 1, 2, and 6—Misdirection.—Held that it was no misdirection on the part of the Judge in not calling the attention of the jury to cls. 1 and 2 of s. 100 of the Penal Code, when he particularly called their attention to cl. 6 of that section. QUEEN v. MOOKHTARAM MUNDLE

57. ——— Rape—Erroneous verdict owing to misdirection—Failure of justice—Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1882), ss. 418, 423 (d), and 537.—On a charge of rape the Judge in his charge to the jury said: "You will observe that this sexual intercourse was against the girl's will and without her consent, etc.," instead of saying as he ought to have done, "you will have to determine upon the evidence in this case whether the intercourse was against the girl's will, etc.," and the charge went on in the same style of stating to the jury what had been proved instead of leaving it to them to decide what in their opinion was proved. In the concluding sentence of the charge the Judge said: "You have seen the witnesses, and I have no doubt that you will return a just verdict." Held that such a charge amounted to a clear misdirection, and that the verdict was erroneous owing to such misdirection. Even the concluding sentence did not satisfy the requirements of a proper charge. The provisions in s. 423 (d) and s. 537 of the Criminal Procedure Code do not require that the Court is to go through the facts and find for itself whether the verdict is actually erroneous upon the facts. ALI FAHRI v. QUEEN-EMPRESS

58. ——— Rioting—Unlawful assembly—Common object—Verdict of jury—Alternative common object—Criminal Procedure Code (1882), s. 303.—Fourteen accused were charged with rioting armed with deadly weapons, and with murder and causing grievous hurt during such riot. The common object alleged by the prosecution was to compel the payment of certain money by one of the persons of the opposite party. Some of the accused who admitted their presence at the scene of the occurrence stated that they had been attacked on account of an allegation being made that one of the opposite party had enticed away another's wife, and that they had merely acted in self-defence. The case was tried before a jury, and on the close of the case for the prosecution the Sessions Judge, considering that possibly the common object alleged by the prosecution might be considered not to have been proved, amended the charge and added an alternative common object to it, viz., that the object of the assembly was

1. ——— Nomination of ship's agents by freighters—Right of agents to sue on charter-party—Ships "going seeking," Meaning of.—A charter-party made between the defendants (the owners of the Seaforth) and H & Co. (the freighters) provided that the owners should employ at the ports of discharge the consignee nominated by the freighters to transact the ship business there inwards and outwards on the customary terms, not exceeding 2½ per cent. on amount of freight payable inwards, and 5 per cent. outwards. H & Co. nominated the plaintiffs to transact the ship's business in Bombay (a port of discharge) with the knowledge and consent of the master of the Seaforth, and the plaintiffs accepted and acted under such nomination. The defendants refused to pay the plaintiffs' commission on the outward freight of the Seaforth on the ground that, under the circumstances under which such freight was procured, the plaintiffs were not under the charter-party entitled to receive commission on it. Held that the plaintiffs were sufficiently within the consideration of the charter-party to maintain a suit for the breach of such clauses of it as were inserted for their benefit. Meaning of the mercantile expression of ship "going seeking" discussed. BLACKWALL & CO. v. JONES & CO. . 7 Bom., O. C., 144

The charter-party provided for payment of a commission on the contract, ship lost or not lost, that the £150 should be advanced in cash at the port of discharge on account of the freight against the captain's draft on M. The cargo was loaded accordingly, a bill of lading was given for the same, and the ship sailed from Cardiff on the 8th October 1863, M having consigned the cargo to A & Co., who carried on business at Madras. On the same day the owners drew a bill on M at three months for £261 ls. 10d., being one-third of the freight. On the 10th October 1863, the general agents in London of A & Co. advanced to M, on A & Co.'s account and out of their funds, £700, received as security for such advance the bill of lading blank, and endorsed and forwarded the bill to A & Co. On the 29th October 1863, M accepted the bill for £261 ls. 10d., and in the following December he suspended payment, and the bill was protested. On the 14th January 1864, the ship arrived at Madras, and thereupon A & Co., as holders of the bill of lading, applied for the delivery of the cargo, and offered to advance the £150 in cash pursuant to the charter-party, but the captain claimed to retain the cargo for the value of the dishonoured bill and the balance of freight due. Held that the terms of the contract were at variance with the right of lien so claimed, and that it was not suspended by the bill, nor revived by the freighters' insolvency. 3. ——— Freight—Bill of lading—Liability of master where quantity signed for is more than cargo shipped.—The plaintiff chartered a ship, of which he was master, to one C H C, of Calcutta, under a charter-party, by which it was agreed that the ship (which was then at Melbourne) should proceed to certain ports and there load a cargo for Calcutta, "the cargo to be delivered to the charterer at Calcutta, on being paid freight at and after the rate of the lump sum of £1,150 for the full reach of the ship; the said freight to be paid on the unloading and right delivery of the cargo as customary, less any advances that may have been made." On the arrival of the ship at Calcutta, C H C requested the plaintiff to deliver the cargo to the defendants as his agents, which the plaintiff agreed to do on having payment of the freight guaranteed by the defendants. The defendants were bona fide holders of the bills of lading which had been signed by the plaintiff in respect of the cargo. They sent to the agents of the plaintiff in Calcutta the following letter: "As it will be necessary for us for the protection of our interests to get delivery of the cargo, and as we do not care about further trouble in the matter, we agree to guarantee payment of the balance of freight due on the charter-party, less any claims for short delivery," etc. On unloading there was found to be a deficiency in quantity

On the 11th March, E, being unable to pay the Rs6,000, requested the plaintiffs to pay that sum to F, M & Co. on his behalf, which the plaintiffs did.—E agreeing that the said payment should be on the same terms as those on which the Rs12,000 had been paid. defendants or their agents in respect of the freight, and for payment of the balance found due after deducting the sums properly payable to the defendants for hire of the ship and for £100 damages sustained by the plaintiffs by reason of the wrongful act of the defendants, whereby the plaintiffs had been deprived of the two per cent. commission. The plaintiffs alleged that the balance due to them would be about £9,500. The first defendant did not appear. The second defendant (the master) contended that he was not liable; that F, M & Co. had been especially appointed as agents of the owner; that they were not his (the master's) agents; and that they had no authority to sign the charter-party for him. He admitted that the sum of £12,000 had been paid to F, M & Co. by the plaintiffs as agents for the owner; but as to the £6,000, he denied that it had been paid to F, M & Co. on his account or on account of the owner. He further alleged that there was a large sum due by E in respect of hire of the ship and other proper claims against him under the charter-party, and that the defendants were, therefore, justified in refusing the demands of the plaintiffs as assignees of E until the whole of their claims against E were liquidated. He alleged that F, M & Co. had received the freight of the ship, amounting to £20,426, and he claimed a lien on this sum in respect of the sum of £19,282 due for hire and other charges on the said ship, and £605 for money paid for short delivery of goods. The plaintiffs subsequently made F, M & Co. defendants to the suit. In their written statement, F, M & Co. stated that they had signed the charter-party as agents only and not as principals, and they contended that the plaintiffs could not proceed simultaneously against the first defendant and the second defendant, but must elect to proceed separately against either; and, further, that the plaintiffs could not proceed simultaneously against themselves (F, M & Co.) and the second defendant, but should elect to proceed separately against either. They admitted the receipt of the £12,000 as agents for the first defendant, and not as agents of the second defendant. As to the £6,000, they alleged that it had been paid to them, not on account of the Hutton, but in respect of claims which they had against E in connection with the Clan Gordon, another ship which had been chartered by E. They admitted the receipt of the freight of the Hutton, amounting to £20,426, but claimed a lien on this sum in respect of hire and other proper charges due under the charter-party. Held that the second defendant (the master) was not liable on the charter-party. He had given no authority to F, M & Co. to sign it as his agents; and his conduct in acting under the charter-party, being referable to his character of, and duty as, master, did not amount to ratification. But inasmuch as he claimed to deduct from the freight received in Bombay sums which were paid either by him or to F, M & Co. for him, he was so far a proper party to the suit. Held also that, under s. 230 of the Contract Act (IX of 1872), F, M & Co. were not liable as principals on the charter-party, as they appeared on the face of the charter-party to have signed merely as agents. But they were liable, under s. 235 of the Contract Act, for having untruly represented themselves to be the authorized agents of the master to enter on his behalf into the contract therein contained. Their liability was limited to the amount which could have been recovered from the master if he had really been their principal. No difference was made in their liability by the fact that the owner was also liable. As to the £6,000,—Held on the evidence that the plaintiffs at the time of the payment had specifically appropriated this sum to the hire then due for the Hutton. Held, further, that the charter-party was one of the class known as "locatio navis et operarum magistri," that under such a charter-party the master would, as between owner and charterer, sign bills of lading as agent of the charterer; that as between the owner and the charterer the latter was liable to defray the damages for non-performance of the contracts contained in the bills of lading, including damages for short delivery of cargo; and that, such being the liability of E as charterer, the plaintiffs as his assignees were bound by all the equities affecting him, so that the defendants might set off as against the plaintiffs whatever the owner of the Hutton might have set off against E if he had been the plaintiff. The second defendant (the master) alleged that he had paid in Bombay certain sums of money to consignees as damages for short delivery of cargo, and he claimed credit for such payments as against the plaintiffs. Held that he had no power to bind E by making such payments on his behalf in Bombay, where both E and the plaintiffs were resident, without the consent either of E or of the plaintiffs. In order to establish these charges against E and his assignees (the plaintiffs), it was necessary for the defendants to prove either that they were in fact due, in which case the master would be justified in paying them under s. 69 of the Contract Act, or that their correctness had been admitted by E or his agents. The defendants having failed to produce the required proof, the claim of the second defendant was disallowed.

7. — Misdescription of tonnage of ship—Misrepresentation in contract—Contract Act (XI of 1872), ss. 10, 13, 14, 18, 19—Condition precedent.—The defendants in Bombay chartered a ship from the plaintiffs, which was described in the charter-party as of the measurement of about 2,700—2,800 tons nett register. The ship had never been in Bombay, and was wholly unknown to the defendants. Evidence was given that in the negotiations for the charter-party the plaintiffs stated to the defendants that the ship was certainly not more than 2,800 tonnage register. She, however, turned out to be of the registered tonnage of 3,045 tons, and the defendants refused to accept her in fulfilment of the charter-party. Held by PARSONS, J., that the defendants were entitled to treat the contract as void by reason of the erroneous statement of the plaintiffs with regard to the size of the ship. (Contract Act, IX of 1872, ss. 10, 13, 14, 18, 19.) Held on appeal by SARGENT, C.J., and FARRAN, J., (1) that the representation in the charter-party as to agents in Bombay, and on the 12th May assigned a half share of their interest under the charter-party to K D & Co. By the charter-party a full and complete cargo was to be loaded, and the freight was to be £1-10 per ton. The captain, however, was authorized to sign clean bills of lading at any rate of freight required by the charterers without prejudice to the charter-party, but at not less than the chartered rate, unless the difference was paid in cash before sailing. K D & Co., having thus sub-chartered the Paddington, declared that steamer to the plaintiffs for 2,747 tons of cargo under their contract of the 3rd March 1898, and the name of the steamer was then entered in the shipping orders for that amount of cargo. The plaintiffs thereupon commenced to load a cargo of wheat. By the 21st June, 2,100 tons had been put on board; mate's receipts were given to the plaintiffs and bills of lading were prepared by them, stating the rate of freight to be 16s. 6d. per ton as per the shipping orders, and were presented for signature to the captain. He refused to sign them unless the difference between 16s. 6d. and the chartered rate, viz., £1-10, was paid to him as provided in the charter-party. The plaintiffs thereupon refused to ship any more cargo, and demanded the return of the cargo already shipped on board the Paddington. On the 24th June the Paddington sailed from Bombay, the captain having previously authorized the defendants to sign bills of lading for him after his departure, provided they were in accordance with the charter-party. After some delay the plaintiffs on the 29th June accepted bills of lading for the 2,100 tons at £1-10, and paid under protest the difference between that rate and their contract rate (16s. 6d.) and certain other sums, for which the defendants as agents for the owners claimed a lien. The plaintiffs now sued to recover from the defendants the amount so paid under protest. The defendants contended that as agents for owners they were justified in refusing to give bills of lading until the sums due and for which they claimed a lien were paid. Held that the defendants had no lien for the sums paid, and that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover the amount claimed. Per CANDY, J.—The plaintiffs were entitled upon demand to have the said 2,100 tons re-delivered to them by the captain. On 29th June the plaintiffs were entitled to clean bills of lading at 30s., and the sum paid by them under protest in order to obtain such bills of lading was recoverable by them. Under the circumstances, the defendants had no lien for freight and demurrage. Per STABLING, J.—The captain was justified in refusing to re-deliver the said 2,100 tons. The plaintiffs were entitled to clean bills of lading at 30s., and there was no lien for freight and demurrage in respect of which the plaintiffs had paid under protest the sum claimed by defendants. *RALLI BROTHERS v. CHIEF JUSTICE, POWER OF—

————— Refusal by Bench of Judges to hear affidavits in support of application for transfer of trial to another district—Application to the Chief Justice to appoint another Bench to hear and determine case—Interlocutory order in criminal matters, Finality of—High Court Charter Act (24 & 25 Vic., c. 104), s. 14.—Where a rule had been obtained on behalf of a prisoner, calling on the prosecution to show cause why the case should not be transferred for trial to some other Court of Session than that in which it was then pending, on the ground that such strong feeling and prejudice existed in the district against the accused as to render it unlikely that he would get a fair trial, a Division Bench of the High Court, duly constituted, consisting of two Judges, refused to allow the affidavits in support of the application to be read and discharged the rule. Subsequently, an application was made to the Chief Justice to appoint another Bench of the High Court to hear and determine the rule on the ground that it had not been heard, and that consequently the order passed by the Bench discharging it was null and void. Held that the Chief Justice, having once appointed a Bench under s. 14 of the Charter Act (24 & 25 Vic., c. 104) to hear any particular case, has no power to interfere when the case has been disposed of by that Bench. Held, also, that the refusal of the Bench to hear the affidavits read, if an error at all, was simply one of law in the course of dealing with a matter clearly within their jurisdiction; and that, therefore, the decision could not be treated as a nullity, or its legality questioned by the Chief Justice. Held, further, that whether the judgment had been signed or not, previous to the application being made to the Chief Justice, an interlocutory order of such a nature in a criminal matter is not final, but may be reviewed or reconsidered, or a similar application may be entertained as often as the Court in its discretion may think proper. 1. ——— Effect of repeal of Civil Procedure Code, 1859—General Clause Consolidation Act, I of 1859, s. 5—"Proceedings"—Procedure.—In all suits instituted before Act X of 1877 came into force, in which an appeal lay to the High Court under Act VIII of 1859, an appeal still lies notwithstanding the repeal of that Act by Act X of 1877. PER GARTH, C.J.—A suit is a "judicial proceeding" and the words "any proceedings" in s. 6 of Act I of 1859 include all proceedings in a suit from the date of its institution to its final disposal, and therefore include proceedings in appeal. The word "procedure" in s. 3, Act X of 1877, has not the same meaning as the word "proceedings" in the above-mentioned section. The proceedings in a suit instituted before Act X of 1877 came into force, including a special appeal if the old Code still was in force, go on to the end of the suit, notwithstanding the repeal of the old Code. The "procedure"—that is to say, the machinery by which those proceedings are conducted—is, after decree, to be that provided by the new Code. HUSSAIN SINGH v. MEHERRAN KOHIL

that such an appeal is to be governed by the law of procedure in force at the date of the presentation of the appeal. Where, therefore, an appeal presented when Act X of 1877 was in force has been dismissed under s. 556 of that Act, the appellant may apply for its readmission under s. 558; and if such readmission is refused, he is entitled to an appeal under s. 558 (c). ERANI BUKSH v. MAMUNOW

3 C. L. R., 503]

3. ——— Decree, Meaning of.—The effect of the proviso to s. 3 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1877 taken in connection with the definition of the word "decree" in s. 2 is that all suits pending when that Code came into force, the practice and procedure to be followed down to the final result of each suit (or, when nothing remains to be done but to execute the decree or to appeal from it) are the same as previously existed, but that in all subsequent proceedings in execution of the decree, or in appeal from it, the practice and procedure provided by the Civil Procedure Code of 1877 are to be observed. The word "decree" in s. 3 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1877, means an order final in its nature, and does not include an interlocutory order, such as an order of reference to take accounts, although such order may, in general, be properly termed a "decree" and, therefore, a suit which has been referred by the Court to the Commissioner to take accounts is still in a stage "prior to decree" within the meaning of s. 3 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1877. KASTORIJI HIRAJIJI v. KASTORIJI SATE

[I. L. R., 3 Bom., 181]

4. ——— Effect of change of law on proceedings already commenced—Attachment—Enforcement of decree—Political pension.—On the 28th of September 1877, i.e., three days before the new Code of Civil Procedure (Act X of 1877) came into operation, an application was made for the enforcement of a money decree by attachment (inter alia) of a political pension enjoyed by the defendants. Under s. 216 of the former Code (Act VIII of 1859), a notice was issued on the same day to the defendants, calling upon them to show cause why the decree should not be executed. The defendants accordingly appeared on the day fixed, at which date the new Code had come into force, and contended that, under s. 206, cl. (g), of the new Code, the pension was no longer attachable. Held that all proceedings commenced and pending when Act X of 1877 became law were, under the General Clause Act (I of 1859), s. 6, to be governed by the Code theretofore in force, the general rule of construction contained in that section not being affected or varied by ss. 1 and 3 of Act X of 1877; and that a bona fide application for enforcement of a decree in a particular way, coupled with an order of the Court in furtherance of that object, as much constitutes a proceeding in execution commenced and pending as the actual issue of a warrant of attachment. VIDYARAM v. CHANDRASHEKHARHAM

[I. L. R., 4 Bom., 183]

5. Effect of repeal of Civil Procedure Code, 1877—Proceedings commenced before repeal.—CL 3 of a. 3 of the Civil Procedure Code (XIV of 1882) provides that nothing in that Code shall apply to any proceedings after decree that intimately connected with the proceedings prior to that date as to be regarded as part of them. A decree was passed in 1870 by which the suit was give inspection of certain books. Held that the question as to inspection was so intimately connected with the taking of the accounts that it should be regarded as part of the same proceedings, and as these had commenced and were still pending on the 1st June 1882, the question whether the order refusing inspection was appealable or not was (under a. 3 of Act XIV of 1882) to be determined by the Civil Procedure Code (Act VIII) of 1859, and not by the Code of 1882. *RUSTOM BURJOMI v. within the jurisdiction of the Court, not being an authorized agent as contemplated by cl. 1, s. 17, Act VIII of 1859, was not competent to appear as plaintiff on behalf of his principal, and to file and verify the plaint as required by s. 27 of that enactment. THORNHILL v. TAYLOR . . . 1 Agra, 115

——— Presentation of plaint—Munim of firm—Partner.—The munim of a firm is not, for the purpose of presenting a plaint, the recognized agent (under s. 17 of the Civil Procedure Code) of a partner who is present within the jurisdiction. The munim and such partner should join in presenting the plaint or appointing a pleader.
The partner's not so joining is not a ground on which an Appellate Court should reverse the decree of a lower Court, unless the irregularity affects the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court.

that the case should not have been thrown out on such a technical objection not affecting the merits of the case. MANNOO DOSSEE v. ISHAN CHUNDER

ceased to carry on business, who is engaged in collecting the assets of such firm and otherwise winding up its affairs, is a recognized agent of the owner of such firm within the meaning of s. 17, cl. 2, of the Civil Procedure

he appeared, or the act in which he took an appearance, or an adjournment. But where the party is absent and an application for adjournment is made on his behalf by a pleader who has no other instructions, and whose functions are at an end when the adjournment is refused, in that case the party has not appeared within the meaning of the chapter. Where the pleader who applies for an adjournment is accompanied by a recognised agent of the party, but the latter neither makes any application nor does any act, the question is whether he intends to appear, and in fact does appear for the party in the exercise of his power under s. 37 of the Civil Procedure Code. That question is merely permissive and enabling. If the recognised agent, although able to do so, does not think proper to conduct the case on behalf of his principal, his mere presence in Court is not an "appearance" in the suit. An appearance may be made by a pleader or a recognised agent, but the concurrence of the pleader or agent is essential. As soon as he ceases to intend to represent the principal, the latter is being prejudiced. S. 38 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act does not preclude a plaintiff whose suit has been dismissed for default from applying under s. 103 of the Civil Procedure Code to take the order of dismissal out of file. There is no inconsistency between the two sections. A plaintiff whose suit has been dismissed for default has two separate remedies under different enactments. If he chooses to apply for a new trial under s. 37, he must do so within eight days. If he prefers to apply for an order setting aside the dismissal under s. 103 of the Civil Procedure Code, he can do so within thirty days (Limitation Act, XV of 1877, sec. II, art. 163). SOONDEHAL & GODHRAHAD

the Court gives of its action, and apart from the actual fact of the plaintiff's appearance or non-appearance, the real meaning and substance of the Court's action is, that it dismisses the suit on the view, whether right or wrong, that the plaintiff appears and the defendant does not appear. Where his suit having been dismissed for default of appearance under s. 102 of the Code, the plaintiff applies for its restoration, the defendant cannot prevent the application by filing an answer which cannot be entertained at all under s. 103 by showing that at the time of the dismissal there was an appearance by the plaintiff in fact or in law; but as an answer to the application on the merits, the defendant can raise the contention that the plaintiff was not prevented from appearing because in fact he did appear. It is not an "appearance" within the meaning of s. 102 of the Code when the plaintiff is represented only by a pleader who is without instructions enabling him to proceed with the case, and who is merely instructed to apply for an adjournment. *SHANKAR DAT DADA & RADHA KRISHNA, I. was adjourned to the day following. On that date, no one appeared for the defendant, and a decree was passed against him. 30. — Non-appearance of defendant after filing written statement.—A defendant filed a written statement in a suit, and, when the case was called on for final disposal, an application was made by counsel on his behalf for an adjournment; but the application was refused, and no one appearing for him, the case was proceeded with, and a judgment was obtained by the plaintiff. The defendant afterwards applied for an order setting aside the judgment on the ground that he was prevented from appearing when the suit was called on. Held that the application was within s. 119 of Act VIII of 1859, and the Court had no power in granting the order to impose terms as under s. 111. *ADMINISTRATOR GENERAL OF BENGAL v. 31. — Default in appearance after adjournment.—The parties to a suit appeared on the day fixed for the first hearing. On the application of defendant's vakil, the hearing of the suit was adjourned in order to enable them to obtain certain documents from the Collector's office, and afterwards put in written statements. This they failed to do on the day to which the hearing was adjourned, and when the suit came on for final hearing, they were still in default, and also failed to appear in person or by vakil. A decree was given for the plaintiff. Held that the decree of the original Court was not an ex-parte decree under s. 147 of the Code of Civil Procedure for non-appearance, but a decree under s. 148, and was therefore appealable. RANGASAMY MUDALIAR v. SIRANGAN. THANDRAYA GOUNDEN v. SITHAIYAN, 4 Mad., 254

32. — Absence at adjourned hearing.—Putting in written statement.—A mere formal appearance in Court with no further action than the putting in a written statement does not

33. — Failure of defendant to file affidavit of documents, defence struck out in consequence and decree made ex-parte.—Application to set aside the decree under s. 108.—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 136.—Where the defendants had entered appearance and filed their written statements, but their defence had been struck out under s. 136 of the Civil Procedure Code for failure to file their affidavit of documents and the suit had been placed in the undefended list of cases and a decree made therein, and the defendants subsequently sought to set aside that decree under s. 108, Civil Procedure Code, as well as its position in the Act, shows that its operation is limited to decrees made ex-parte under the provisions of Ch. VII, and does not govern other decrees made ex-parte unless where it has been extended to those decrees by other provisions of the Code. Held, also, that whatever may be the effect of the words "and to be placed in the same position as if he had not appeared and answered" in s. 136, it does not intend to introduce into the class of cases dealt with by s. 108 a new class of cases of an entirely different character, and the decree in the suit was not an ex-parte decree within the meaning of s. 108. Choonee Lal v. Chaman Lal, I. L. R., 7 Mad., 139, Mullins v. Howell, 11 Ch. D., 767, referred to. Assanulla Joo v. Abdul Aziz, I. L. R., 9 Calc., 923, distinguished. *KESHARIA ACCOMAR SREESUNGEJEE v. 34. — Ex-parte decree against one defendant.—Right to re-open the whole case.—Act X of 1859, s. 58.—When a suit has been decreed against several defendants, and one of them, who was not present at the hearing, obtains a re-hearing and files a written statement in which for the first time the objection is taken that the suit could not have been proceeded with, inasmuch as plaintiff had improperly joined two distinct causes of action against two different individuals, the Court is not justified in re-opening the whole case. S. 119, Act VIII of 1859, does not contemplate the setting aside of that portion of the decree in such a case which refers to the other defendants. S. 58, Act X of 1859, treated as an authority by analogy in such a case; and s. 119, Act VIII of 1859, interpreted. HURO KRISHNO DASS v. MOTEROHAND BABOO, 8 W. R., 280

earlier than fifteen days after service of process, and swore that no summons had been served on him in the case which led to the ex-parte decree, and that the contract under which the case had been decreed against him had been broken by the plaintiff himself, it was held that good and sufficient cause was shown for defendant's previous non-appearance, and a prima facie case had been made out to lead to the conclusion that there had been failure of justice. Held that, as this evidence was given in the presence of the mooters on both sides, the Court's order that the case should be entered on the register of cases was a proper order admitting the review. ANUND MOYEE DASSEE v. ANUND SOONDUR MOZOOMDAR

44. ——— Defendant showing no sufficient cause for non-appearance—Appearance by vakil—Ex-parte case.—One of several defendants in a suit did not enter appearance until nearly a month after the date fixed for the first hearing, when he applied by a vakil for leave to be heard in answer, under the last part of s. 111, Code of Civil Procedure. In the absence of good and sufficient cause for previous non-appearance, his application was rejected and an ex-parte judgment given against him. After this he applied, at the instance of the Appellate Court, for a re-hearing on the ground that the summons had not been duly served upon him. This application was rejected and the order of rejection was upheld on appeal. In special appeal he contended that the case did not fall within s. 119, and that he was entitled to have the regular appeal previously proffered determined upon the record as it stood, notwithstanding his prayer had been rejected under s. 113. Held that the mere fact of the special appellant having appeared by a vakil in the way mentioned above could not be taken as an appearance within the meaning of s. 119, and was not sufficient to prevent the Court from passing a judgment ex-parte against him. MAHOMED HOSSEIN v. On appeal to the High Court,—Held that, although, so far as the decrees made A personally liable, the Court had no power to interfere, yet, as the infants were not responsible for their non-appearances, it might be said that they had been prevented by "sufficient cause from appearing," and that the decrees might be set aside under s. 119 of Act VIII of 1859 (Act X of 1877, s. 108) as against them. KESHO PERSHAD v. Held that, the default not being of the nature described in s. 114, the suit was wrongly dismissed under that section, and for the same reason that the suit was improperly dismissed under that section, it was also improperly re-admitted under s. 119. MAHOMED AZEEMOOLLA v. 1. s. 137 (1859, s. 138)—Application for production of documents in another case—Discretion of Court.—Per NORMAN, C.J.—When a proper application was made to a Judge under s. 138, Act VIII of 1859, to send for, from the records of his own Court, papers which would be evidence in the case before the Court, the Judge had no discretion in the matter, but the section must be treated as giving a power which the Judge was bound to exercise, the principle being that where a statute conferred an authority to do a judicial act in a certain case, it was imperative on those authorized to exercise the authority when the case arose. Per KEMP, J.—It was in the discretion of the Court to send for them or not. Per STEER, J.—Though the Judge was not bound to send for them, it would be unfair not to do so. *RUGHOO-NATH BOSH v. 3. Decision on document sent for from record of another case.—A Judge may send for and inspect any document filed with any record in his Court, and there is nothing in the Code of Procedure to prevent his basing his decision, wholly or mainly, on such document. BUNWAREE LALL v. KISTO BEHARY ROY

4. Admissibility of documents from record of another case.—Held that a Civil Court which inspects the records of another case under s. 138 of Act VIII of 1859 can only use as evidence such documents as are otherwise unobjectionable and admissible for or against either of the parties to the suit. *NARAPPA BIN APPA HEGDI v. 7. Records from Court of Wards.—Where records from a Government office are required as evidence, it is for the Court to send for them; but papers required from a Court of Wards, which is not a Government office, must be obtained by the party who needs them, by means of a summons on the proper officer. *SOBBEE JHA v. 6. ————— In a suit for contribution in respect of Government revenue, the defendants, co-sharers, were, on the application of the plaintiff, ordered to attend to give evidence, but they failed to appear. The Principal Sudder Ameen thereupon dismissed the suit on the ground that, as the plaintiff's case had not been established, he was not entitled to a decree simply by reason of the defendants' failure to enter appearance. Held the suit should not have been dismissed. In a case where a party summoned to attend as a witness refuses to attend and give evidence, and the party who requires the evidence is unable to make out his case without it, his suit should not be dismissed for want of proof, when the points on which he fails depend upon matters of fact which may reasonably be presumed to be peculiarly in the knowledge of the defaulting parties, as for instance in the present case, the extent of their own shares, and the amount they had paid on account of revenue. HEMANGINI DAS v. 7. ————— Default of defendant to attend—Examination of parties to the suit.—When a plaintiff alleges that the defendant has a personal knowledge of the matters in dispute and the defendant denies that he has such knowledge, the Court, before exercising the discretion of decreeing the suit as upon default, should be satisfied on evidence as to the existence of such knowledge on the part of the defendant. LATH NARAIN DEO v. THAKOOR LALL MISSEER v. BROHMO MOYEE DABEE [15 W. R., 253]

20. —Default of plaintiff to appear.—Reasons for summoning witness.—In a suit for the right of pre-emption on the ground that plaintiff was a shafee khalit, defendant, who alleged that plaintiff was only a benami sharholder, offered to establish his case on the deposition of the plaintiff alone. The latter not appearing on summons, the suit was decreed against him under s. 170, Code of Civil Procedure. On this he appealed, and the Judge ordered the Munsif to give him further time to appear. This was granted, and then extended again and again by the Munsif, who, on the plaintiff failing to appear again, gave a decree against him under the same law as before. The case was then appealed to the Judge, who ordered the case to be tried on its merits, remarking that the presence of the plaintiff was not necessary. Held that, as the plaintiff's liability to appear and give evidence had been already determined by a competent Court, and therefore classified by himself, he could not take advantage of a technical objection to show that he was not bound to come because the formalities of the law had not been observed or his evidence shown to be necessary. JHOOMUCK SINGH v. JEETUN LALL 12 W. R., 359

21. —Failure to produce evidence.—In a suit by the patnidar for rent due under a dar-patni, defendant was summoned to produce the dar-patni pottah and a bynamah which he had produced on a former occasion in a different suit. On his representing that they were lost, plaintiff put in a certified copy of the bynamah obtained from the office of the Registrar of Deeds. Held that, as the defendant failed to produce the bynamah or to prove that it was out of his power to do so, the Judge might have passed judgment against him at once under s. 170, Act VIII of 1859. TARA CHAND BANERJEE v. BOISTUB CHURN BHUDRO 16 W. R., 196

22. —Defendant not appearing when summoned by plaintiff.—Where the plaintiff gave no evidence at all in support of her case, it was held not just to put in force against the defendant, who, when summoned to appear and give evidence, deliberately declined to do so, the stringent provisions of s. 170, Act VIII of 1859. The exercise of the discretion conferred by that section must be reasonable and judicial. ALEKH AHMED SAJJADANUSHEEN v. NUSSEBUN 17 W. R., 563

23. —Refusal to answer material questions.—Dismissal of suit.—A judgment passed against a plaintiff, under s. 126 of Act VIII of 1859, was reversed by the High Court in special appeal, as there was nothing on the record to show that the party refused to answer any material question relating to the suit. KRISHNAJI NIMKAR v. VISHNU NIMKAR 2 Bom., 360; 2nd Ed., 340

24. —Discretion of Court to summon party as witness.—Where the law allows a discretion to any Court, it presumes that such discretion will be soundly and properly exercised; and where it is shown that the discretion was not so exercised, the omission will be a ground for interference by the superior Court. Accordingly, the Subordinate Judge's order under s. 170 was set aside on the ground that he had ignored the fact that plaintiff had given very substantial reasons for his inability to attend and give evidence when summoned to do so; and as the Subordinate Judge had held substantially that there was sufficient evidence to prove plaintiff's claim, plaintiff was entitled to a decree, his failure to give evidence notwithstanding. ISHAN CHUNDER SEN v. ONATH NATH DEB. COWELL v. ISHAN CHUNDER SEN 18 W. R., 18

25. —Default of party to appear when summoned as witness.—Willingness to attend.—Lawful excuse.—A defendant's saying that he was willing to attend when he did not attend and showed no reason why he could not, is no lawful excuse for his non-attendance when summoned to attend. What is or is not a lawful excuse must depend on the circumstances of each case. DOORGA DUTTA SINGH v. JHENGOOR JHA 18 W. R., 63

26. —Refusal of applicant for certificate to attend.—The appellant, having applied to the Judge for a certificate to collect the debts of one R, whose adopted son, he claimed to be, referred in evidence to an ikrarnamah of adoption, of which he filed a copy procured from the kazi's books, alleging that the original had been made away with by an agent who had been bought over by his opponent. In the course of re-trial of the case on remand, the Judge required the petitioner to attend for the purpose of examination, and, as after being warned he did not do so, and assigned no good cause for his absence, upheld his former decision, and rejected the application. Held that the Judge exercised the powers conferred by s. 170, Civil Procedure Code, and that it was a proper exercise of discretion to take the course which he did take at that stage of the proceedings. If any other person brings to sale the hypothecated property in satisfaction of the debt due by the defendants, the plaintiff shall have power to take out execution of the decree without waiting for the instalments, and to cause the hypothecated property to be sold by auction.” Held that this was not a simple decree for the payment of money such as would come within the purview of s. 230 of the Code of Civil Procedure. *Janki Prasad v. PARAGA KUAR v. BHAGWAN DIN]

28. — Meaning of "granted."—A decree passed in April 1872 was kept alive by various applications for execution up to 1883. In February and December of that year two such applications were made, but the proceedings on both occasions terminated in the applications being struck off without any money being realized under the decree. In November 1884, the decree-holder again applied for execution, the application being the first made after the decree had become twelve years old, and being made within three years from the passing of the Civil Procedure Code, 1882. Held that the application must be entertained in accordance with the ruling of the Full Bench in *Musharraf Begum v. 27. — Application for execution of decree—Limitation—Subsequent application to execute the same decree—"Granted."—Meaning of—Civil Procedure Code, s. 235.—The "subsequent application to execute the same decree" mentioned in s. 230 of the Code of Civil Procedure means a substantive application for execution in the form prescribed by s. 235 of the Code. Hence, where an application for execution in accordance with s. 235 of the Code has been made within the period of limitation prescribed by s. 230 and has been granted, that is, execution has been ordered in accordance with the prayer of the decree-holder's application, the right of the decree-holder to obtain execution will not necessarily be defeated if, by reason of objections on the part of the judgment-debtor or action taken by the Court or other cause for which the decree-holder is not responsible, final completion of the Further applications of the decree-holder to the Court executing the decree to go on from the point where the execution-proceedings had been arrested and complete execution of his decree would be applications merely ancillary to the substantive application under s. 235, and would not be obnoxious to the bar of s. 230. *Delhi and London Bank v. 28. — Application to transfer decree for execution—"Granting" application, Meaning of—Issue of process.—An application to the Court which passed a decree for a certificate to allow execution to be taken out in another Court is not an application for the execution of the decree within the terms of s. 230 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The "granting" of an application under that section includes the issue of process for execution of the decree. NILMONEY SINGH DEO v. BIRESHWAR BANERJEE . . . I. L. R., 16 Cal., 744

29. — Limitation.—The term "application to execute a decree" in the third paragraph of s. 230 of the Code of Civil Procedure means any application to execute a decree. It is not confined to the last application preceding the expiry of the period of twelve years from either of the points of time mentioned in cl. (a) or cl. against the husband of the petitioner, since deceased. The decree was kept alive till 13th December 1876, when the decree-holder brought a suit to set aside certain alienations made by the judgment-debtor and alleged to be fictitious and fraudulent. Having succeeded in the suit and in rendering the property alienated available for attachment under his decree, the respondent again applied for execution in 1879, but not against the property fictitiously alienated. Lastly, the respondent applied on September 28th, 1880—more than twelve years after decree—for execution against certain immoveable property of the judgment-debtor, other than the property fictitiously alienated, in the petitioner's possession. Held that, having regard to the fraud of the judgment-debtor, the application was not barred by s. 230 of the Code of Civil Procedure. VISALATCHI AMMAL v. 41. ———— Execution of decree prevented by "fraud or force" of judgment-debtor—Period of limitation.—Where a judgment-debtor, knowing that a warrant of attachment had been issued against his moveable property, locked up his house and so prevented the moveable property therein from being attached,—Held that his action amounted to "fraud" within the meaning of s. 230 of the Code of Civil Procedure. In order to obtain the benefit of the proviso in that section, it is not necessary that a judgment-creditor should prove that the fraud of the judgment-debtor continued so as to prevent execution of the decree at any time. "Fraud" or "force" on the part of a judgment-debtor gives a new starting point for the period of limitation, and an application for the execution of a decree may be granted at any time within twelve years after the date on which a judgment-debtor has by "fraud" or "force" prevented execution of a decree. VENKAYYA v. CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE, ACT XIV OF 1882 (ACT X OF 1877)—continued.

Suit by transferee for decretal amount—Declaratory decree.—The transferee of a decree for costs, assisting with him the transferor, made an application under s. 232 of the Civil Procedure Code to be allowed to execute the decree. The application was opposed by the judgment-debtor and was rejected, and the Court refused the transferee to a regular suit. After taking various proceedings ineffectually, he instituted a suit for the recovery of the sum to which he was entitled as costs under the decree transferred to him. Held that the plaintiff, as the holder of the decree by assignment, could only recover the amount under it by executing the decree, and not by a separate suit; but that he was entitled to have a decree declaring that the assignment to him of the decree-holder's rights under the decree was valid, and gave him a right to execute it, and that the Court's order under s. 232, which disallowed the execution, was an improper one, a suit for this relief being maintainable; for, there being no appeal from orders under s. 232, there would otherwise be no remedy; and that, looking at the pleadings and the issues in which the parties were divided, and the fact that the Court which refused the plaintiff's application for execution referred him to a regular suit, this relief might properly be given in the present suit. Per MANMOON, J., that the suit was maintainable, inasmuch as the present plaintiff never having been accepted on the record as holder of the decree, the questions which were disposed of by the Court executing the decree, as between the plaintiff and the judgment-debtor, could not be regarded as questions within s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code. RAJ BAHADUR v. PANDA LAL. . . I. L. R., 7 All., 457

17. Application for execution by beneficial holder of decree—Application dismissed—Suit for declaration of applicant's right to execute the decree.—Held that, where an application under s. 232 of the Code of Civil Procedure by a person alleging himself to be beneficially entitled under a decree to execute such decree has been rejected, it is still competent to the applicant (no appeal lying from the order under s. 232 rejecting his application) to bring a separate suit for a declaration that he is the person entitled to execute the decree. *RAJ BIKHAR v. decree—Plea of fraud raised in execution-proceedings.—An assignee of a decree under an oral assignment has no locus standi at all to apply for execution of a decree, but, as regards one who claims to be an assignee in writing or by operation of law, the Court has a discretion under s. 232 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882), whether to recognize such assignment or not. When an assignee of a decree applied for execution, and the judgment-debtor contended that the decree sought to be executed had been obtained by fraud and was, therefore, a nullity and incapable of execution,—Held that it was not open to the judgment-debtor to raise the defence of fraud in the course of the execution-proceedings. *PANVATA v. 20. Joint decree—Purchase of decree by creditor of one of several judgment-debtors—Probability of decree being executed against another judgment-debtor—Ground for refusing execution to purchaser.—A decree for damages and costs having been obtained against P and C, A, to whom P was indebted and was about to assign property as security, in order to prevent P being adjudicated an insolvent, and with a view to execute the decree against C if possible, purchased the decree. A applied, under s. 232 of the Code of Civil Procedure, for leave to execute the decree. This application was rejected by RENNAN, J., on the ground that the decree was certain to be executed against C, and not against P, under whose orders and for whose benefit it acted when he infringed the right of, and became liable in damages to, the plaintiff in the suit. Held on appeal that the benefit likely to be gained by P by this transaction was no sufficient ground for refusing leave to A to execute the decree. *AGRA BAHADUR v. 21. Joint decree—Transfer of a money decree to one of several judgment-debtors.—Certain property was mortgaged by A to B. Subsequently, this property was purchased by C at a sale held in execution of a decree obtained by a third person against A; B then brought a suit on his mortgage-bond against A and C, and obtained a decree for the sale of the mortgaged property, and also a personal decree against A; B assigned his rights under this decree to C, who applied for execution under s. 232 of the Code. A objected to execution issuing, relying on prov. (b) to s. 232. Held that prov. (b) to s. 232 applies only to decrees for money personally due by two or more persons; and that the decree obtained by B against A and C not being a personal decree against C (he having been made a defendant only by reason that he had purchased the mortgaged property subject to the mortgage debt), C as assignee of B was entitled to take out execution. *LALLA BHAGUR PENSHAD v. 15. ———— Question as to whether purchase-money has been paid within time. Conditional decree.—The plaintiff in a suit to enforce a right of pre-emption obtained a decree to the effect mentioned in s. 214 of the Civil Procedure Code. On payment by him of the purchase-money into Court, the defendants objected, in the execution department, to such payment, on the ground that it had not been made within time. The Court which made the decree disallowed the objection. The defendants appealed from the order disallowing the objection: they had previously appealed from the decree. The Appellate Court heard both appeals together, and, holding that the purchase-money had not been paid into Court within time, reversed the decree and allowed the objection. The plaintiff preferred a second appeal to the High Court from the Appellate Court's decree, which was admitted. He also preferred an appeal from the appellate order allowing the objection, but this appeal was rejected as being beyond time, and such order became final. Held that, inasmuch as the question whether the plaintiff had paid the purchase-money into Court within time was not one relating to the execution of the decree within the meaning of s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, but was one which should be decided in the suit itself, and therefore the proceedings in the execution department

They then sued to set aside the order made in the execution proceedings and to recover possession. Held that the suit was barred under s. 244, cl. (c), of the Civil Procedure Code. *NAJHAN v. The decree provided for payment of the secured debt in various instalments by May 1895. The mortgagor died in 1883, having discharged part of the debt. The decree-holder having attached certain family property in execution, the mortgagor's two younger sons, who had not been born at the date of the above decree, objected that their

The mortgage debt was not paid within the time limited. The mortgagees sued on the covenant in their bond and obtained a decree for possession, declaring them entitled to remain in possession until the mortgage debt was satisfied from the usufruct. Some time after the mortgagees had got possession under this decree, the mortgagors applied, ostensibly under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure, for recovery of possession of the mortgaged property and for payment of a large sum of money, which they alleged the mortgagees to have collected as profits in excess of what was due under the mortgage. Held that such an application would not lie. 47.—Question whether lands were included in decree—Act VIII of 1859, s. 387—Act XXIII of 1861, s. 11.—The father of the defendant in 1853 obtained a decree against the father of the plaintiff and other persons for partition of village lands. The decree directed that in effecting the partition certain dhara lands then occupied by the plaintiff's father were not to be included. Application for execution of that decree was made in 1861, but the execution-proceedings remained pending until 1882. On the 12th December 1882, the decree was executed, and the defendant (his father being then dead) was put into possession of the lands now in dispute as being part of the lands to which he was entitled under the decree. The plaintiff objected that these lands were not subject to partition under the decree, and he applied for an order that they should be delivered back to him. His application was rejected, and he thereupon brought the present suit to recover the lands from the defendant. The Court of first instance was of opinion that the question raised in the suit related to the execution of the decree made in 1853, and under s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) could not be raised again by a separate suit. The plaintiff appealed to the Assistant Judge, who reversed the lower Court's decree. On appeal by the defendant to the High Court,—Held, reversing the decree of the lower Appellate Court, that the plaintiff's suit should be dismissed. In execution of this decree, plaintiff presented an application on the 28th November 1891, praying that he should be put in management of the devasthan lands on the ground that the defendant was guilty of mismanagement and misapplication of the devasthan property. This application was rejected by the Court of first instance on the ground that the question of mismanagement did not fall within s. 244, cl. (c), of the Code of Civil Procedure. ment-debtor in his own right disallowed—Order reversed on appeal—Claim under s. 278 rejected.—S mortgaged four parcels of land to M. M obtained a decree against S directing the sale of the lands mortgaged. S died, and K was brought in as his representative under s. 234 of the Code of Civil Procedure. M applied for execution against the lands mortgaged as assets of S. K objected to the sale of three parcels on the ground that one parcel belonged to himself (K) and two to the family to which S belonged, and of which K was the manager. The District Munsif investigated these questions under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and directed that execution should proceed against all four parcels. The District Court on appeal reversed the order of the Munsif, on the ground that he had no power to decide these questions under s. 244, and that the proper course was for M to attach the properties and for K to make a claim. This course was adopted and K's claim was rejected, and the four parcels were sold and bought by V. K thereupon brought a suit against M and V to cancel the sales to V. Held that, by virtue of s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the suit would not lie. Kuriyali v. Maxan [I. L. R., 7 Mad., 255]

After the confirmation of the decree Code at the instance of some of the defendants in the original suit. On an application under s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code having been made by a prior purchaser of the said properties in execution of another decree, to set aside the sale held in execution of the ex-parte decree, the defence was that the application could not come under s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, and that the sale could not be set aside, as it had been confirmed. Held that the case was one under s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, and that the ex-parte decree having been set aside, the sale could not stand, inasmuch as the decree-holder himself was the purchaser. *Doyamoyi Dasi v. Suit for amount of compromise.—The parties to a suit agreed upon a compromise, the result of which was that the plaintiff obtained by the decree a greater quantity of land than he had originally claimed, and a decree was drawn up in accordance with the compromise. In the execution proceedings, the defendant raised an objection that the plaintiff could not have execution for a greater quantity of land than he had claimed originally, and the Court executing the decree allowed the objection. No appeal from the Court's order was made, but the plaintiff brought a suit to recover possession of the larger amount of land mentioned in the compromise. 116. ————— Adjustment of decree—Suit to recover instalments due under a mortgage made in adjustment of a decree.—A suit will not lie to enforce an uncertified agreement of adjustment of a decree against a judgment-debtor the consideration for which is that it shall operate in satisfaction of the decree, as there is, in that case, no consideration which the Court can recognize, and therefore no valid consideration for the judgment-debtor's agreement. The plaintiff was the assignee of a decree obtained by one O K against the defendants on the 5th May 1883. By that decree O K was declared entitled to recover R9,961-5-6, with interest at nine per cent. from the defendants; and payment was ordered to be made to him of the said sum by weekly instalments of R200. In order to secure the payment of the said instalments, the defendants were required to execute a mortgage to O K of certain property with power to him to sell the same, and to execute the decree for the whole amount, in case of default for six months. O K assigned the decree to the plaintiff in the present suit, and subsequently to the assignment (viz., on the 21st July 1883) the defendants executed to the plaintiff the mortgage on which the present suit was brought. The mortgage-deed, after reciting the above facts, stated that the defendants had agreed to satisfy the amount of the decree, and it contained a covenant by the defendants that they would pay R9,961-5-6 with interest at six per cent. by monthly instalments of R400 from the 21st August 1883. The mortgage, therefore, differed from the decree both with regard to the instalments and the rate of interest. The plaintiff sued to recover the sum of R4,207, being the amount of instalments due to him under the said mortgage. Held that the suit would not lie, as the mortgage was an adjustment of the decree, and had not been certified to the Court, as required by s. 258 of the Civil Procedure Code. *ABDUL RAHIMAN v. 18th March 1880, passed to him by the defendant in satisfaction of the said decrees and in substitution of two bonds, dated February 1879. The Subordinate Judge, being of opinion that the application could not be granted, inasmuch as the execution of the decrees was then barred by limitation, referred the case to the High Court under s. 617 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held that the question could not be referred under s. 617 of the Civil Procedure Code, as the order applied for to the Subordinate Judge was appealable under s. 2 of the Code. The question raised by the application related to the satisfaction of the decree within the meaning of s. 244 of the Code. RANGJI v. BHAIJI HARJIVAN . I. L. R., 11 Bom., 57

118. ————— Judgment-debtor as part-purchaser of a decree, Suit by.—H D and R D owned a 6-anna share in certain decrees. The other decree-holders subsequently sold their 10-anna share to H S and S M, two of the judgment-debtors. H D and R D then proceeded to execute the decrees, and in satisfaction thereof were allowed to receive, upon giving security under s. 231 of the Code, the full 16-anna share of the decretal amount from H S and S M, notwithstanding the objection of the latter on the ground of their purchase. Thereupon H S and S M brought a suit for declaration of their right of purchase and the recovery of a 10-anna share of the money in the hands of H D and R D. Held that the plaintiffs were entitled to the relief sought for. Held, also, that the provisions of s. 258 of the Civil Procedure Code did not affect the suit, which was brought, not upon the allegation that the decrees were satisfied by the plaintiffs' purchase, but, on the contrary, was founded upon the proposition that the decrees were not so satisfied. ABDUL RAHIMAN v. KHOJA KHAKI ARUTH, I. L. R., 11 Bom., 6, referred to. Held, further, that the claim was not within the words "relating to the execution of the decree" in s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, inasmuch as it did not raise any question in respect to the furtherance of, or hindrance to, or the manner of carrying out, the execution of the decrees. *HARAGOBIND DAS KORBUTO v. Subsequently, by a registered ekramamah, the decree-holder having received from the judgment-debtors (the plaintiffs) the amount due on account of mesne profits, and also a further consideration of R100, relinquished an 8-anna share of the jote in favour of them. The remaining 8-anna share of the jote was also sold by the decree-holder by a registered kobala to the judgment-debtor. The heirs of the decree-holder on his death applied for execution of the decree, but, notwithstanding the judgment-debtor's objection that the decree could not be executed, it having been satisfied by virtue of the aforesaid ekramamah and kobala, they obtained possession of the jote; the adjustment, not having been certified, was not taken into account by the Court executing the decree. On a regular suit by the judgment-debtors for a declaration of title to, as well as for the recovery of, possession of the jote, the defence mainly was that, under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure, no separate suit would lie. Held that such a suit was maintainable, and that s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure was no bar to it. Azizan v. Majeed Lall Sahu, I. L. R., 21 Cal., 437, distinguished. *ISWAR CHANDRA DUTT v. The decree-holder accepted the money, but did not carry out his part of the agreement, and more than two years later applied for execution which was ordered to issue, the judgment-debtor's objections being dismissed as out of time. 158. ———— Decree incapable of execution by reason of events subsequent to decree—Decree giving an option to the parties.—A partition suit brought by a son against his father was referred to arbitration. On the 9th January 1890, the award was published, and, on the 27th March 1890, the defendants moved for and obtained a decree in terms of the award. By this decree it was ordered that, in satisfaction of the plaintiff's claim, the defendant should pay to him Rs. 1,05,000 in the manner therein stated, viz., Rs. 40,000 to be paid forthwith, and the balance of Rs. 65,000 to be paid "upon the plaintiff delivering to the defendant certain specified property, which included two vessels or buglows, called respectively the Nasri and Sambuk." In no event was defendant to be required to pay the Rs. 65,000 before the 15th November 1890. At the date of the decree the vessel Sambuk was at sea on a voyage, and, on the 18th June 1890, while still on the voyage, she was lost. On the 15th November 1890, the plaintiff's attorneys demanded payment of the balance of Rs. 65,000. They offered to deliver the other properties specified in the decree, but stated that the vessel Sambuk had been lost. They offered to pay its value, which they estimated at Rs. 1,000. The defendants, however, demanded the delivery of the buglow, which they stated to be worth a very large sum. The defendant having, under the circumstances, refused to pay the Rs. 65,000, the plaintiff applied for execution of the decree, which was refused. He then obtained a rule calling on the defendant to show cause why the decree of the 27th March should not be amended or rectified by stating therein the amount of money to be paid to the defendant as an alternative, if delivery of the vessel Sambuk could not be made, such delivery having become impossible. That rule was discharged. The plaintiffs then took out a summons calling on the defendant to show cause why an order should be made, under s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, directing the plaintiffs to pay to the first defendant, in lieu of the delivery of the vessel Sambuk, such sum of money as might be fixed by the Court as the value of or compensation for the loss of the vessel Sambuk in the decree mentioned, and why an order should not be made that on payment of such sum and delivery of the other properties mentioned in the decree which the plaintiffs were to deliver under the decree to the first defendant on payment by the latter to them of Rs. 65,000 the first defendant should pay to the plaintiffs Rs. 65,000 and interest thereon from the 15th day of November 1890, mentioned in the said decree, and, in the event on its being held that the first defendant was not bound to pay the said sum of Rs. 65,000, then why an order should not be made that the property mentioned in the decree which the plaintiffs were to hand over to the first defendant on payment of Rs. 65,000 should not be retained, used, and appropriated, absolutely by the plaintiffs for their own use and benefit, freed and discharged of all claims on the part of the first defendant, and why the first defendant should not be directed to withdraw the claim made by him to a debt of Rs. 22,000, or thereabouts, mentioned in an affidavit of one Ahmed bin Essa Khaliffa, and why such further or other order as to the Court might seem fit and the justice of the case may require should not be made in the premises and in relation to the properties mentioned in the decree which were to be delivered over by the plaintiffs to the first defendant on receiving from him Rs. 65,000, and why in the alternative this suit should not be rostered and placed on the board for trial. It was contended by the plaintiff that the questions raised in the summons were questions arising in execution to be dealt with by a Judge in chambers under s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, and that a fresh suit was not necessary. Held, dismissing the summons, that the application was not one in execution of a decree, nor was the question one arising in the course of execution, but that the decree having become incapable of execution, the summons asked the Judge to decide what were the rights of the parties in consequence of its non-execution. Held, also (as to the part of the summons asking for restitution of the suit), that the matters in issue in the suit had been fully heard and determined, and the rights of all parties had been settled by the decree, and consequently there was nothing further to be tried. The Court could not in this suit, after passing a decree, proceed to ascertain the rights of the parties under a state of facts quite different from those which appeared in the pleadings and arising subsequently to the decree. Their objection was allowed, and the Court made an order, directing the property to be sold, subject to the defendants' rights. In the proclamation of sale, however, it was stated that the Court did not guarantee the title of the intervenors. The plaintiff purchased the property at the Court-sale. The effect of the decision was to decree the claim against the estate of the widow, and to exempt from liability the judgment-debtors personally and the property which they had purchased. In execution of the decree, the said property was sold, and was purchased by the decree-holder; one of the judgment-debtors had died during the execution-proceedings, and her son was duly impleaded as her representative, and he raised no objection to the attachment and sale. Subsequently this son sold his rights and interests in the property; and his vendee sued the decree-holder to recover possession on the ground that, the decree being limited to the estate of the childless Hindu widow, the defendant as purchaser could not acquire by the sale any rights superior to those of the widow; that those rights had expired upon her death, and left nothing to be sold, and that on her death the property devolved upon the plaintiff's vendor, and had thence passed to the plaintiff. Held that the plaintiff's vendor was a party to the suit within the meaning of s. 244 (c) of the Civil Procedure Code, and that he not having objected to the sale in execution of the decree, neither he nor the plaintiff could go behind that sale or claim the property upon any title which he might have asserted in the execution-proceedings; and that the suit was barred by s. 244. *Ram Ghulam v. 203. ——— Party to suit in representative character.—In 1875 a decree was passed against N as representative of L, who died pending the suit, declaring N liable to the extent of the assets of L which might have come to the hands of N. In 1879 the decree-holder applied for execution of the decree, and, without proof that any of the assets of L had come to the hands of N, obtained an order and attached lands belonging to N. N objected to the attachment, but the Munsif, without investigation, rejected his claim and directed N to bring a regular suit. The land was sold and purchased by A B. N, after an abortive attempt to obtain a review of the Munsif's order from his successor, brought a suit in 1880 against the decree-holder and A B to recover the land. Held that, as N was a party to the former suit of 1875 within the meaning of s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1877, the suit would not lie. *ARUNDADHI v. 204. ——— Sale of property in execution of decree obtained by second mortgagee for sale of property—Holder of prior decree enforcing first mortgage—Execution of decree—Fresh suit—Meaning of "representative" of judgment-debtor.—A decree enforcing a first mortgage of certain property not being satisfied, the property was sold in execution of a decree of a later date enforcing a second mortgage of the property. Per STUART, C.J., that the decree enforcing the first mortgage could not be executed against the property, but the holder of such decree was bound to bring a fresh suit against the purchaser of the property to enforce his decree. Per STRAIGHT, BRODHURST, and TYRRELL, J.J., that a fresh suit was the most convenient and expeditious remedy. Per OLDFIELD, J., that the purchaser not being the "representative" of the judgment-debtor, within the meaning of s. 244 (e) of the Civil Procedure Code, the holder of such decree must bring a fresh suit to enforce it. *JAGAT NARAIN v. 205. ——— Transfer of interest pending suit—Lis pendens—Application to bring transferee upon the record.—A decree of the High Court, giving possession of certain shares in a bank to the plaintiff, R, was reversed on appeal by the Privy Council. The defendant then applied to the Court of first instance to order restitution of the shares, which had been realized by the plaintiff. Upon being ordered to produce the shares, R made an application to the Court, professing under s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, in which he alleged that,

Council, and pending the hearing of that appeal, the widow died, and B was brought on the record as her legal representative. The decree of the High Court was ultimately confirmed by the Privy Council. In execution of the decree, it was sought to make B liable to satisfy the amount out of the properties which he had obtained under the ikramamah, the mortgagee not having been aware of the conditions of that document before the decree of the High Court. Held that, so far as these properties were concerned, he was not the legal representative of the widow, as he inherited them as heir-at-law of her husband, and that his title to them under the ikramamah was not that of a "representative" within the meaning of cl. (c) of s. 244. Held, further, that the question of B's liability under the ikramamah did not fall within the scope of the provisions of cl. (c) of s. 244, as being a question to be decided between the "parties" to the suit, as, although B was a party to the suit, the only claim against him was that the property in his hands was liable as having been previously hypothecated; and as the suit was dismissed, so far as that claim was concerned, it was not a question relating to the execution of the decree. KAMESHWAR PERSHAD v. substituted as his representatives. In execution of the decree, only the share which had stood recorded in the name of the deceased judgment-debtor, and which was in possession of J and L as his representatives, was sold; and the decree-holder then applied for sale of the other shares which had been attached. To this B objected under s. 281 of the Civil Procedure Code, claiming to be the owner of the shares in question. Before the hearing of her objection she died, and L applied to have his name brought upon the record in her place for the purpose of supporting the objections. An order having been passed disallowing the objections which had been filed by B, L applied to the High Court. A preliminary objection was taken on behalf of the decree-holder to the hearing of the appeal on the ground that, as the first Court's order related to L's claim as the heir of B to have the shares entered in her name released from attachment, it must be regarded as passed under s. 281 of the Civil Procedure Code, and as conclusive, subject to L's bringing a suit to establish his right. On the other side it was contended that, L being the representative of the deceased judgment-debtor K, the first Court's order must be regarded as passed under s. 244 of the Code, and the appeal would therefore lie. Held that the preliminary objection must prevail, and the first Court's order must be regarded as passed under s. 281, and not under s. 244 of the Code, inasmuch as L's claim, which was rejected by it, was nothing more than to come in as B's representative for the purpose of supporting her objections; and it was in right of a third person, whose interest he asserted to have passed to him, that he prayed admission to the proceedings, and his character was wholly distinct from that he filled as the legal representative of his deceased father. Because L happened, for the purpose of the execution proceeding, to be his father's legal representative, and to be liable to satisfy the decree to the extent of any assets which might have come to his hands, it did not follow that any rights claimed by him through a third person must be dealt with, and could only be dealt with, between him and the decree-holder in the execution-proceedings. Wahed Ali v. 220. ——— Deceased judgment-debtor—Execution against a person not the legal representative.—The defendants, along with one N and C, had brought a suit against one A in the Civil Court at Peshawar in the Punjab, and obtained a decree, on the 23rd July 1878 for Rs. 3,05,645-12-0. In 1881 application for transfer of the decree to the Court at Moradabad for execution was made, and it was granted, but no steps were taken thereupon. On the 12th June 1883 A died. On the 30th April 1884, the defendants again applied to the Court at Peshawar, treating their judgment-debtor as being then alive, for a fresh certificate to execute their decree in the Moradabad district, and obtained it. On the 20th August 1885, they made an application to the District Judge of Moradabad for execution of their decree, and in it it was stated that the application was "for execution against Ajudhia Prasad and after his death against Angan Lal, the own brother, and Durga Kuar, widow, and Lachman Prasad and others, sons of Ajudhia Prasad, residents of Kundarki, and the said Angan Lal, at present residing at Umballa and employed in the Commissariat-Transport Department, judgment-debtors." It was further stated that "the judgment-debtor was dead, and his heirs are living and in possession of his estate, and Angan Lal himself has realized Rs. 637-4-9 due to the deceased judgment-debtor from the Commissariat Department of Calcutta and appropriated the same; therefore to that extent the person of the said Angan Lal was liable." Notification of this application was issued to Angan Lal as also to the other persons named therein. Angan Lal objected to the application as against him, stating that, although he was the brother of A, deceased, yet he always lived separate and carried on business separately; and that there was no connection or partnership between him and the deceased judgment-debtor, and that he had no property of the deceased in his possession. Further, that as A left issue, it was wrong to call him an heir to A, and take out execution process against him. In reply to these objections, the judgment-creditors (defendants) did not contend that Angan Lal was a representative of the deceased.

him as a person in possession of a sum of money belonging to the deceased, and, therefore, liable to the extent of the sum so received by him. The Subordinate Judge, holding that Angan Lal was the brother of the deceased and had realized the amount of the Commissariat Office, which he failed to prove that he paid to the deceased, ordered execution to proceed against him. Angan Lal then instituted this suit to set aside the order of the Subordinate Judge. It was contended that the proceedings of the Subordinate Judge were held under s. 244 of the Code, and, therefore, no separate suit would lie. 222. ——— Representatives of judgment-debtor—Death of party to suit before final decree in appeal—Subsequent proceedings in execution taken against representatives of such party.—A decree was given to the defendant (then plaintiff) in 1856 for possession of land and mesne profits against numerous defendants, including one Dawan Rai. Some of the judgment-debtors, including Dawan Rai, appealed to the Sadr Diwani Adalat, but before the decree of the Sadr Diwani Adalat was passed, Dawan Singh died. No application was made to put any representative of Dawan Rai on the record; but in 1881 (the amount of the mesne profits payable under the decree having been finally determined in 1877), certain persons were made parties, as representatives of Dawan Rai, to various proceedings in execution of the decree for mesne profits, which ended in the sale of certain property which had been of Dawan Rai in his lifetime. Subsequently the said representatives of Dawan Rai brought a suit to recover the property sold as above described on the ground that they were no parties to the decree under execution. Held that the plaintiffs were entitled to bring such a suit, and it was not barred by the provisions of s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure. BENI PRASAD KUNWAR v. MUHTESAR RAI

Whilst that suit was pending, one K D took out execution of a money-decree which he had obtained in 1871 against defendant No. 3, and put up for sale the mahal Olipore, which was Subsequently the decree was modified on appeal by increasing the amount of sale-consideration to Rs. 1,995, which the plaintiff was required to pay as the condition of pre-emption. The property was put up for sale again on the following day under s. 306 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and was in due course knocked down for a smaller sum. 23. Agreement for satisfaction of judgment-debt.—A money-decree was passed against a zamindar by the High Court in 1883, and it was transferred to the District Court for execution. The decree-holder attached and prepared to bring to sale certain villages of the judgment-debtor. These villages were included in a mortgage subsequently executed by the judgment-debtor in favour of third parties. Both before and after the mortgage the decree-holder received from the zamindar certain sums in consideration of his agreeing to postponements of the sale; also it was agreed between them at a date subsequent to the mortgage that interest should be computed at a higher rate than that provided by the decree. Subsequently the decree-holder sought to bring the land to sale, and in computing the amount then due gave credit for none of the sums so received and calculated interest at the enhanced rate. The mortgagee objected that the computation was erroneous in both these respects, and the District Judge upheld his objection. The judgment-debtor took no part in the contest. Held that the District Court, not being the Court which passed the decree, had no power to sanction the agreements under s. 257A, and that the decision was right. PARAMANANDA DAS v. MAHABEER DOSSJI

24. Agreement to give time to the judgment-debtor.—Agreement not sanctioned by the Court.—A judgment-debtor asked for time to pay the decretal amount. The decree-holders agreed to give time on condition that the judgment-debtor gave them a hundi for Rs. 500, that sum representing a portion of the decree-holder's claim which had been dismissed as barred by limitation. The judgment-debtor gave the hundi, but the sanction of the Court was not obtained to the transaction. In a suit by the decree-holders to recover the money secured by the hundi given under the circumstances mentioned above, it was held that the transaction was one contemplated by s. 257A of the Code of Civil Procedure, and that, as it had not been made with the sanction of the Court, it could not be enforced, and the suit should be dismissed. Hakum Chand Oswal v. taken place between him and K. The Judge, however, refused to enter into the question of the adjustment, as the terms of it had not been certified to the Court under s. 206 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held that the Judge was in error; that it was the duty of K, on applying for the release of C, to certify the adjustment to the Court; that it would be unjust to allow him to take advantage of his own omission to do so; and that, not having done so, the presumption against him was that the decree had been satisfied in full; but that, under the circumstances, it would be the most equitable course to direct the Judge to enquire into the terms of the adjustment. The terms of this compromise were not certified to the Court under s. 206 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held that this compromise, having been effected after the decree in favour of B had been reversed, did not come within the meaning of s. 206, and was, therefore, a good defence to the suit of H. HAIR SADASHIV DIKSHIT v. 16. ————— Adjustment made out of Court—Payment into Court.—Under the Civil Procedure Code, s. 206, a debtor under a money-decree can at any time bring the amount of his debt into Court to be paid to the judgment-creditor; and by analogy any other person against whom a decree is made for the delivery of moveable or immovable property has an equal right to relieve himself from further vexation by making satisfaction with the knowledge of the Court in such mode as the circumstances of the special case admit of. The property was sold, and the proceeds paid into Court, and by order of Court A received a sum in part satisfaction of his decree. Subsequently A, at the request of B, and without receiving any consideration, gave him a letter in Bengali, purporting to be a release to him of the remainder of his decree, but such adjustment was not made through the Court. A afterwards applied for execution of his decree against B, C, and D, but his application was refused, the Court treating the letter as a release. *Appealed. In May 1872, C applied for execution for recovery of the balance due on the decree, deducting the amount received under the arrangement. Held he was not entitled to execution in supersession of the agreement. CHUNDER NATH MISSE v.

In execution of a decree in a former suit between the same parties a petition was presented by them to the Munsif's Court, stating an arrangement between them for the payment of the amount decreed by instalments, with a provision that in default of payment, "the Court may, on the application of the plaintiff, issue a warrant and collect the amount, with costs of the petition, from the produce of my share of the agramharam lands . . . which are held liable by the raziinama decree of this suit, from the said lands, from my other property and from myself, and pay the same to plaintiff." The petition concluded thus: "We, both the parties, present this postpone-petition with our free will and consent, and pray for its being enforced according to its terms." Held, on second appeal, by the Full Court, affirming the decree of both the lower Courts, that, as it was clear that no intention existed between the parties to create new rights enforceable by suit in supersession of those acquired or declared by the decree, a suit on the "postpone-petition" was not maintainable. DARBHA

In such an investigation evidence may be given either orally or by affidavit. 42. Power of Court to examine parties as to satisfaction of decree made out of Court.—A Court executing decrees, whilst giving effect to s. 206 of Act VIII of 1859, should also take reasonable care that its process is not about to be abused for fraudulent purposes. It may, by examining the judgment-debtor and others having knowledge, inform itself of the position of the decree, and whether it has or has not been satisfied. This, however, is merely an enquiry to inform the Court, and it need not frame and decide an issue. PARSHURAM CHUT v. RUGHU GOORDEO

47. Act XII of 1879, s. 36—Suit to recover money paid out of Court in satisfaction of decree.—The provisions of s. 206 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act VIII) of 1859 only prevent the Court executing the decree from recognizing a payment made out of Court, and do not bar a suit for the refund of such payment. G held a decree against D, who satisfied it out of Court, and obtained a receipt from G to the effect that it was satisfied. Notwithstanding this, G executed the decree and recovered the amount of it through the Court, although D pleaded satisfaction in the execution proceedings and produced the receipt. Suit to recover payments due under a mortgage made in adjustment of a decree.—Under s. 258 of the Civil Procedure Code, no Court can recognize an uncertified payment of a decree for any judicial purpose whatsoever. Pattankar v. Derji, I. L. R., 6 Bom., 146, decided. A suit will not lie to enforce an uncertified payment of adjustment of a decree against a judgment-debtor, the consideration for which is, that it operates in satisfaction of the decree; as there is no case, no consideration which the Court can give, and therefore no valid consideration for the judgment-debtor's agreement. The plaintiff was the creditor of a decree obtained by one O K against the defendants on the 5th May 1883. By that decree, the defendants were declared entitled to recover Rs. 9,961-5-6, with interest at nine per cent. from the defendants; payment was ordered to be made to him of the sum by weekly instalments of Rs. 200. In order to secure the payment of the said instalments, the defendants were required to execute a mortgage deed of certain property, with power to him to sell the same and to execute the decree for the whole amount, in case of default, for six months. O K executed the decree to the plaintiff in the present suit and subsequently to the assignment (viz., on the 1st July 1883) the defendants executed to the plaintiff the mortgage on which the present suit was brought. The mortgage-deed, after reciting the facts, stated that the defendants had agreed to pay the amount of the decree, and it contained a covenant by the defendants that they would pay Rs. 1-5-6, with interest at six per cent. by monthly instalments of Rs. 400 from the 21st August 1883.

The mortgage, therefore, differed from the decree, both with regard to the instalments and the rate of interest. The plaintiff sued to recover the sum of Rs. 4,207, being the amount of instalments due to him under the said mortgage. Held that the suit would not lie, as the mortgage was an adjustment of the decree, and had not been certified to the Court as required by s. 258 of the Civil Procedure Code. ABDUL RAHMAN v. Madan Mohan Ghose, 4 B. L. R., F. B., 130, that such payments, although not certified to the Court, were effectual to prevent the appellant's application for execution from being barred by limitation. Shortly afterwards the defendant sent Rs. 70 to the plaintiff's vakil, intimating by a letter that the remittance was in part payment of the decree, and that an arrangement would be made to pay the balance. The plaintiff did not take out execution of the decree, but the part payment was not certified to the Court. On appeal the decree was reversed, and the defendant applied for the refund of the amount which he had paid to the plaintiff. The Court of first instance granted the application. The plaintiff appealed, and the Appellate Court reversed the order, holding that, under the provisions of s. 258 of the Civil Procedure Code, the payment made by the defendant, not having been certified, could not

The suit was compromised, and by a consent decree it was declared that the defendants held by mirasi tenure, and they were directed to pay rent "as before," or in default the plaintiff should take possession. The plaintiff afterwards applied in execution for possession, alleging that the rent had not been paid. The defendants pleaded that it had been paid, and the plaintiff rejoined that, even if it had been paid, the Court could not recognize the payment, as it had not been certified under s. 258 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held that, under the circumstances, the rent, when paid, was to be deemed as paid under the mirasi tenure and not under the decree, and, therefore, s. 258 of the Civil Procedure Code did not apply, and payment need not be certified. KEDARI v. — ss. 325A, 326—Execution of decree—Limitation—Execution as to immoveable property of judgment-debtor stayed by reason of such property being in charge of the Collector.—The plaintiffs obtained in 1874 a decree for money against the defendant. In 1879, by an order under s. 326 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the immoveable property of the judgment-debtor was placed under the management of the Collector. Before this order was made, and during the period when the judgment-debtor's property was in charge of the Collector, various applications for execution were made by the decree-holders. Finally, in 1896, about ten years after the last preceding application, the decree-holders applied for execution of their decree shortly after the property had been released by the Collector. Held that,
as regards the immoveable property of the judgment-debtors, against which execution was sought, the application was not barred by limitation, inasmuch as the decree-holders had no remedy by execution against that property until the Collector's management had ceased. GIRDHAR DAS v. HAR SHANKAR PRASAD

2. ———— Suit against an officer of Government—Bombay Civil Courts Act (XIV of 1869), s. 32—Suit ex contractu—Notice of suit.—S. 424 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), which requires notice to be given to a public officer two months before the institution of a suit against him, does not apply where the suit is one ex contractu. Shahunshah Begum v. 3. ———— Suit against public officer in respect of acts done by him in his official capacity—Notice of suit—Suit for damages against a public officer—Trespass—Misjoinder of causes of action—Amendment of plaint.—The plaintiff sued the defendant, a public officer, to recover damages for two distinct acts (viz., wrongful arrest and trespass) alleged to have been illegally and maliciously done by the defendant on two different occasions, and claimed one lump sum as damages for both the acts; no permission to amend the plaint was asked for in the lower Court. On the 21st of October 1895, the plaintiff instituted this suit, having on the 18th of September 1895 served the defendant with a notice under s. 424 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). Held that the former act (viz., the plaintiff's arrest) was an act done by the defendant in his official capacity and was clearly of the kind contemplated by s. 424 of the Civil Procedure Code, under which two months' notice to the defendant would be necessary previous to the institution of the suit; and that the suit was rightly dismissed by the lower Court for want of such notice. Shahunshah Begum v. Fergusson, I. L. R., 7 Calc., 499, distinguished. Quere—Whether the latter act (viz., the trespass into the plaintiff's house), on the allegations in the plaint, was an act done by the Magistrate in his official capacity, and whether a notice under s. 424 of the Civil Procedure Code would be necessary previous to suing for damages for such an act. Held, further, that as the two acts were mixed up together in the plaint and one lump sum claimed as damages for both, and as no permission to amend the plaint was asked for in the lower Court so as to convert the suit into one for damages with reference to the trespass only, the plaint ought not to be allowed to be amended on appeal to the High Court. JOGENDRA NATH ROY v. costs of realising Government revenue.—S. 424 of the Civil Procedure Code provides that "No suit shall be instituted against the Secretary of State in Council, or against a public officer in respect of an act purporting to be done by him in his official capacity, until the expiration of two months next after notice in writing has been, in the case of the Secretary of State in Council, delivered to, or left at the office of, a Secretary to the Local Government or the Collector of the District," etc. The plaintiff had instituted a suit against the Secretary of State for India in Council to set aside a certain sale of the plaintiff's property (possession of which had been given to the purchaser), but had not given him the notice prescribed by s. 424 of the Civil Procedure Code. The first Court (AMEER ALI, J.) gave the plaintiff a decree. Held on appeal (reversing the decision of AMEER ALI, J.) that whether or not the words "in respect of an act purporting to be done by him in his official capacity" relate only to a public officer and not to the Secretary of State, no suit whatever is maintainable against the Secretary of State, unless the notice prescribed by s. 424 of the Code of Civil Procedure has been given; and that therefore the present suit could not be maintained. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL v. Before this was done, he had incurred certain costs, which, by the Munsif's decree, he was ordered to hear himself. Upon appeal by the first defendant the Civil Judge found that the mortgage bond sued upon was not proved, dismissed the suit, and ordered the plaintiff to pay all costs, those of the second defendant included. Held that, under s. 337 of the Civil Procedure Code, it was competent to the Civil Judge so to modify the Munsif's decree, as the main ground of the whole decision—viz., the validity of the mortgage bond—affected all the defendants in common, and the appeal of the first defendant and the decision of the Appellate Court had reference to that common ground. YERRA-BALU VIRARAGAVA REDDI v. 21. ————— Suit on bond—Appeal by one of several defendants.—In a suit for recovery of Rs300 due on a bond, the defendants denied the execution of the bond and the receipt of the consideration. 22. ————— Any ground common to all the plaintiffs or to all the defendants—Appellate Court, Power of.—S. 544 of the Civil Procedure Code presupposes a common ground of decision affecting property in which both those who have appealed and those who have not appealed have an interest direct or indirect. Thus a District Judge has no power under this section to reverse the decree of a lower Court, given for a plaintiff, in favour of a defendant who did not appeal, and in respect to property in which the other defendants who did appeal disclaim all interest. Sriram Ghatak v. 23. ————— Intervenor—Parties—Appeal—Decree set aside on appeal by one defendant.—D C S, the zamindar, brought a suit against B, a raiyat, for recovery of arrears of rent, valued below Rs100. B set up in defence that the rent was not payable to D C S, but to N C A, the mukuridar. N C A, who claimed under a mukurari title, and alleged that he was in receipt of the rents from the raiyats, was made a party under s. 73, Act VIII of 1859. The Munsif passed a decree in favour of the plaintiff. On appeal by N C A, which was heard and decided by the Subordinate Judge on reference by the District Judge, the decree of the first Court was reversed, and the suit dismissed. S obtained a decree by consent for her share, and a sum of Rs 99 was decreed to her against the tenants for mesne profits. Against this decree the tenants appealed. The Subordinate Judge, finding that the subject-matter of the suit, the land of which partition was claimed, exceeded the jurisdiction of the Munsif, reversed the decree of the Munsif, and directed the plaint to be returned for presentation in the proper Court. It was contended, on appeal to the High Court, that the Subordinate Judge could not set aside the decree against the tenants for mesne profits. Held that, as the Munsif's Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit for partition, it could make no decree for mesne profits, and, therefore, the Subordinate Judge had power to set it aside. *NAGAMMA v. It is only when the decree appealed against has proceeded upon a ground common to all the defendants, that is, when the Court below has made a decree against several defendants upon a finding which applies equally to all of them, that under s. 544 any one of the defendants may appeal against the whole decree, and the Appellate Court may reverse or modify that decree in favour of all the defendants. *Protap Chunder Dutt v. The plaintiffs appealed, and the case was remanded to the Court of first instance under s. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure. One of the defendants appealed against the order of remand to the High Court, which set aside the order of remand and restored the decree of the first Court. Held that, the decree of the first Court being restored in its entirety, the defendants, who had not appealed, were entitled to take out execution of that decree for the costs awarded to them by it, notwithstanding that they were not parties to the decree of the High Court. *Muhammad Sulaiman Khan v. CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE, ACT XIV OF 1882 (ACT X OF 1877)—continued.

Patent for the High Court of the N.-W. Provinces has been superseded in those cases only to which s. 575 of the Civil Procedure Code properly and without straining language applies. There are many cases to which s. 575, even with the aid of s. 647, does not apply; and to these s. 27 of the Letters Patent is still applicable. One of the cases to which s. 575 of the Code does not apply is where a preliminary objection being taken to the hearing of a first appeal before the High Court on the ground that the appeal is time-barred, the Judges of the Division Bench differ in opinion as to whether the appellant has shown sufficient cause, within the meaning of s. 5 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877), for not presenting the appeal within the prescribed period. The decision of such a preliminary objection is not a "hearing" of the appeal, but precedes the hearing or determines that there is no appeal which the Court can hear or decide. Where such a preliminary objection is allowed, it cannot be said that the Court which, by reason of the Limitation Act, has no jurisdiction to hear the appeal, should nevertheless "affirm" the decree of the Court below. In the case of such a preliminary objection and such a difference of opinion (the Bench being equally divided), the opinion of the senior Judge should, under s. 27 of the Letters Patent, prevail. *Appaji Bhirav v. 2. ———— and s. 567—Appeal from appellate decree—Issue of fact referred to Appellate Court—Objection—Finality of finding.—A District Court on appeal having reversed the decree of a District Munsif's Court and dismissed the suit upon a preliminary point of law, the High Court, on appeal from the District Court's decree, reversed it and directed the District Court to submit its finding to the High Court upon an issue of fact which had been framed and tried by the District Munsif, but had not been decided by the District Court. Upon the return of the finding upon this issue to the High Court, a memorandum of objections to the finding was presented under s. 567 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Held that, as the words "as far as may be" in s. 587 (by which the provisions of Ch. XLI are made applicable to appeals from appellate decrees) must be taken to mean "as far as is consistent with the principles on which appeals from appellate decrees are admitted and determined," no objections could be taken to the finding of the District Court under s. 567 of the Code of Civil Procedure. HINDE v. PONNATH BRAYAN

Subsequently some of the objectors who claimed a 14-anna share in the property compromised with the decree-holder, who then applied that the remaining 2-anna in possession of certain specified parties should be sold. The lower Court ordered that the sale of these 2 annas should not proceed if the objectors who claimed them paid to the decree-holder a sum equal, rateably, to that levied from the 14 annas. Subsequently D obtained a decree against C alone, and on the 11th January 1884 applied for attachment of the one-third share of C in the property attached by A and B, which belonged to C and his two brothers jointly. No order was on that date passed on the application. On the 14th January 1884, E purchased from C his one-third share in the attached properties, and the purchase-money was, by arrangement between the brothers, applied in satisfying the debt due to A and B. On the 23rd January 1884, an order was passed on the application of the 11th January 1884, granting the attachment asked for by D; and on the 23rd April 1884 E preferred his claim to the one-third share purchased by him, and which had been since the purchase attached by D. The claim was disallowed on the ground that E had no title to the property, he having purchased whilst the property was under attachment. Held on appeal that the Judge should have, in accordance with s. 280 of the Code of Civil Procedure, confined himself to determining whether or no the property was in the possession of E on his own account at the time that D attached the property. KOTLASH CHUNDER SEN v. The decree declared that execution should be taken out against the property of the mother, and not against any part of her (the mother's) deceased husband's estate. In execution, A attached and put up to sale certain property as belonging to the mother. B objected to the sale, alleging that the property was not her mother's, but was inherited by her from her father. The Munsif disallowed her objection on the ground that only the right, title, and interest of the defendant's mother was put up for sale. On appeal the Judge set aside the Munsif's order. Held that, for the purposes of her objection, B was a third party unconnected with the decree, and that her objection should have been disposed of under s. 246 of Act VIII of 1859. S. 11 of Act XXIII of 1861 did not apply, and there was no appeal. HARIS CHANDRA GUPTO v. SHASHI MALA GUPTI [6 B. L. R., 721; 15 W. R., 163]

On the 13th August 1883, the plaintiff instituted this suit for a declaration that the property belonged to his judgment-debtor (I), and as such was liable to attachment and sale. The defendants pleaded that they had been in possession of the property for more than twelve years prior to the institution of the suit, and that the suit was therefore barred. The Judge rejected the plaintiff's claim. Held, reversing the decree, that the suit being brought under s. 233 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), it was a suit to set aside the order of 11th August 1883, directing the removal of the attachment, and should be determined by ascertaining the rights of the parties at the date of that order. the Subordinate Judge was no longer in force, having been set aside by the High Court. On second appeal to the High Court,—Held that the appellant could not succeed in the present appeal, the object of which was to revive the order of the Subordinate Judge. That order was one which the Subordinate Judge had no power to make. It involved taking the execution of the decree for partition out of the Collector's hands into his own, in direct contradiction of the law. In case of partition of lands, s. 265 of the Civil Procedure Code (XIV of 1882) and s. 113 of the Bombay Revenue Code (Bombay Act V of 1879) place the execution of the decree entirely in the Collector's hands. This does not deprive the Court of judicial control of its decree; as, for instance, if it should appear to have been obtained by fraud or surprise; but in the present case nothing of that kind was relied on. Nor was it asserted that the Collector had acted in bad faith, or contravened the command of the Court, or transgressed the law. What was alleged was that he had made an objectionable partition. This was not a ground on which the Subordinate Judge could interfere. DEV GOPAL SAVANT v. VASUDEV VITHAL SAVANT I. L. R., 12 Bom., 371

6. ————— Execution of decree for partition—Collector, Power of, to refuse execution—Ultra vires.—The plaintiffs obtained a decree against the defendants for partition and possession of their share in the lands in the village of Kasai. That decree was sent for execution to the Collector. In the meantime, a revision survey had been introduced into the village, under which the designation of some of the lands directed to be partitioned was changed from khoti to dhara lands. The Collector proposed to partition them, as described by the survey; but the plaintiffs having declined the proposal, he refused to partition the lands, and returned unexecuted the decree to the Court. On reference to the High Court,—Held that the Collector had acted ultra vires. The plaintiffs were entitled to have the lands partitioned, quite independent of the result of the new survey as regards the character of the lands. The proposal of the Collector was virtually to contravene the command of the Court, which as a purely ministerial officer, it was not in his power to do either directly or indirectly. GANOJI UTEKAR v. 12. ————— Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 424—Notice to Collector—Collector joined a party in respect of minor's property administered by him, to protect minor's title.—The plaintiff sued, as purchaser at a Court-sale of the interest of defendant No. 1, to redeem and recover possession of the land in dispute, alleging that it had been mortgaged by defendant No. 1 to defendant No. 2. Defendant No. 1 denied the mortgage, and that he had any title to the land, which he said belonged to R, and formed a part of R's desmukhi vatan. R having died, leaving a minor widow, sued as defendant No. 4 in the suit, the estate was administered by the Collector. On the application of the minor's personal guardians, the Collector was joined as a party. The Collector contended on the minor's behalf that, the suit having been brought without notice to him as required by s. 424 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), it was not maintainable. The District Judge was of opinion that notice was necessary. He therefore rejected the plaintiff's claim, and ordered the sale to be set aside. On appeal by the plaintiff to the High Court,—Held that notice under s. 424 of the

30. ——— Deputy Collector whether a "Court" under Land Acquisition Act.—Judicial Officer—Revenue Court—Prosecution for false evidence—Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, s. 476—Penal Code, s. 193.—The expression "the Court" in the Land Acquisition Act does not include a Collector, nor is there any authority given to the Collector to administer an oath or to require a verification. It is a false statement made under a verification that constitutes an offence under s. 193 of the Penal Code, not a verification oath or solemn affirmation. The Deputy Collector acting under the Land Acquisition Act is not a judicial officer, he cannot properly be regarded as a Revenue Court within the terms of s. 476 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, his proceedings under the former Act are not regulated by the Code of Civil Procedure, nor is he right in requiring a petition put in before him to be verified in accordance with that Code, so as to make any false statement punishable as perjury. The Deputy Collector is not in a position to pass any final order in the matter of value of the land or the right to claim the price fixed; a party dissatisfied can claim a reference to the Civil Court, whose duty it is to settle the matter in dispute judicially; therefore, to subject parties who claimed the right to such a reference to a criminal prosecution, when the matters on which the Deputy Collector had formed an opinion as a Revenue Officer under the Land Acquisition Act must be submitted to the determination of a Court, is obviously premature and improper, and is almost certain to operate very prejudicially towards them in the trial before the Civil Court of the same matter. DURGA DAS RUKHIT v. QUEEN-EMPRESS

Except in the cases of Deputy Collectors employed in making or revising a settlement, Act I of 1874 made no provision for the validation of decrees of Deputy Collectors set aside for want of jurisdiction, or for the invalidation of the decrees of the Appellate Courts which annulled those decrees. Quære—Whether the proviso to s. 8 of Act I of 1874, that the provisions of the section should not apply to any case in which the holder of a decree made by an officer employed in making or revising a settlement, and treated as invalid for want of authority in such

1. ————— Case on peremptory board—Practice.—A commission for the examination of witnesses will be issued, even though the cause is entered upon the peremptory board of the day, if the issuing of such commission is not calculated to prejudice the defendants, or to subject them to loss or inconvenience. JANSSEN v. DUNDAS . 1 Hyde, 289
2. ————— Witness out of jurisdiction—
*Power of granting commission to examine a party matter of course to examine a material witness who is out of the jurisdiction of the Court, if the witness cannot be brought into Court by its ordinary process.

 But the commission will not be granted, at the instance of either party, to enable him to give evidence himself under a commission, except under very strong circumstances indeed, such as where he is seriously ill. DOUCETT v. WISE

 plaintiff applied, under s. 640 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), for a commission to issue for the examination of three female witnesses (P, B, and A) at the residence of one of them (P). The grounds upon which he based his application were the following:—(1) That P had lost her husband ten months previously and was in mourning; that, according to Parsi usage, a widow observed mourning for two or three years, and during that time did not leave her house; (2) that B was fifty-eight years of age and sickly and physically unable to attend the Court; (3) that A was about to go up-country, and could not stay in Bombay until the hearing. Held the circumstances alleged were not such as to justify the issue of

1. Dismissal of suit on failure to pay fee—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s. 394—Remuneration of commissioner.—The Code of Civil Procedure does not authorize the dismissal of a suit on refusal or failure of a party to deposit the amount ordered by the Court as remuneration to a commissioner appointed under s. 394 to examine accounts. The remuneration of a commissioner appointed by the Court to examine accounts should, as a rule, be a definite amount, and not at a monthly allowance. RAGAVA CHARIAR v. VEDANTA CHARIAR

It is competent to an Appellate Court, under the powers conferred by s. 37 of Act XXIII of 1861, to examine the accounts, even if no exception has been taken to them in the Court appointing the commissioner. Association of artisans for acquisition of gain—Registration of Association.—An association of artisans for the purpose of enhancing the price of their work by bringing all the business of the trade into one shop and dividing the prices of the work done amongst the members according to their skill is an association that has for its object the acquisition of gain, and if consisting of more than twenty persons must be registered. *BHUKAJI SABAJI v. Evidence of registration—Evidence of registration of shareholders.—The register of shareholders required by s. 14 of Act XIX of 1857 may consist of particulars entered in different books, which taken together substantially contain all the information which the Act requires. If there be a substantial compliance with the requisitions of the Act, the register is not invalidated by reason of slight deviations from its directions or by unimportant omissions or defects in particulars of information specified in s. 14. If the certificate of registration be not forthcoming, the fact of incorporation may be proved aliunde. IN RE ALLIANCE FINANCIAL CORPORATION, BLANEY'S CASE

The rates provided for abatement of subscriptions according to a graduated scale, which might be granted or withheld from year to year by the directors according to their opinion as to the condition of the fund. A subscriber to the fund was under no obligation to continue his subscription, but might stop it at pleasure, subject in certain contingencies to forfeiture of the benefit of past payments. Fines were also provided for unpunctuality in payments of subscriptions. It was contended that the subscribers formed an association which required registration under s. 4 of the Indian Companies Act, inasmuch as mensum for seven years from the date of admission, and that at the end of the seven years Rs250 should be paid in full discharge of each share. It was further provided that subscribers should be entitled to borrow money from the said fund at interest, that a reserve fund be formed and distributed once every five years to the subscribers, and that surplus collections be distributed among the subscribers annually. In 1868, defendants' father borrowed money on mortgage from the fund in accordance with the rules, and the amount was admittedly due at the time of suit. The fund was wound up under an order of the High Court, dated 15th September 1877, during the lifetime of defendants' father, who, however, took no active part in those proceedings. It further appeared that on the execution of the mortgage, the defendants' father (the mortgagor) took a lease from the mortgagees of the houses mortgaged, and retained possession of them as tenant. Held that the association had for its object the acquisition of gain, and that, as the association consisted of more than twenty members and was not registered, its formation was forbidden by the Indian Companies Act (X of 1866), s. 4, that the mortgage suit; having for its object the carrying out of the illegal purpose of the association, was an illegal transaction; and that the suit must fail. Held, further, that the defendants were not estopped from setting up the plea of illegality either by the order of 1877 or by reason of their predecessor in title having attorned to the fund. MADRAS HINDU MUTUAL BENEFIT PERMANENT FUND v. The bonds in question were executed in favour of the stakeholder and the subscribers. The business was not registered. A suit was brought on one of such bonds to recover the amount payable for subscription on account of the period subsequent to its execution. Held that the obligees carried on business which had for its object the acquisition of gain within the meaning of Companies Act, 1882, s. 4, and accordingly constituted an illegal association, and that the suit was not maintainable. RAMASAMI BHAGAVATHAR v. 19. — Member signing unregistered copy of memorandum of association—Companies Act (VI of 1882), s. 45—Agreement to become a member—Proposal—Acceptance—Repudiation before registration of company.—On the 13th April 1886, L signed a printed copy of the proposed memorandum of association of a projected company for ten shares, which on the 3rd August was registered as the Imperial Flour Mills Company. On that day, viz., the 3rd August 1886, L received a notice from the secretary of the company, informing him that the company had been duly registered, and requesting him to pay £100 as the deposit on the shares subscribed by him. On the 5th August L replied, stating that he had decided not to take up the shares. On the 6th August the secretary wrote to L, stating that he had already become a shareholder, and could not withdraw. On the 25th September the directors held their first meeting, and resolved that the "shares applied for be allotted, and application and allotment money be called in." On the 1st October the secretary notified to L the allotment of ten shares, and requested him to pay the overdue deposit call of £10 per share and the allotment call of £15 per share. L refused to pay, and repudiated his liability in respect of the shares. He contended that he had never become a member of the company. Held that the defendant was not a member of the company, and was not liable to the plaintiff's claim. The fact that he had signed the proposed memorandum of association did not make him a member, inasmuch as the document which he had signed was not the document which was registered, nor even a true copy of it. Nor could the defendant be held bound as having agreed to become a member within the meaning of s. 45 of the Indian Companies Act (VI of 1882). The agreement which binds a party under this section must be an agreement in existence at the date of the defendant's signing the memorandum of association (viz., the 16th April 1886), that signature could amount, at the most, to an application for shares to the promoters, which by reason of its non-withdrawal before the registration of the company on the 3rd August became on that day an application to the company. There could be no acceptance of that application until the company was registered; and the defendant withdrew his application by his letter of the 5th August. The letter written by the company's agents on the 3rd August was not an acceptance. It was only a request for which the defendant had applied, and which was required as a guarantee for the bond fides of the application. Further, the terms of the resolution of the board of directors of the 25th September made it clear that up to that date the defendant's application had not been made a binding agreement by acceptance. His repudiation, therefore, of the 5th August was in time, and he could not be held liable as a shareholder of the company. Held, also, that in no case could the defendant have been bound by the letter of the 3rd August written by the agents of the directors at a meeting duly convened and composed of the proper quorum of four. It was written by the secretary after consulting separately three only of the directors. This was an irregular proceeding, which would not bind the company or the subscribers with regard to the application on the acceptance of shares. The directors did not act as a board, nor was the consent of a quorum obtained. IMPERIAL FLOUR MILLS COMPANY v. LAMB . I. L. R., 12 Bom., 647

20. — Agreement to take shares—Companies Act (VI of 1882), s. 43—Signing duplicate memorandum of association of the registration of company—Effect of such signature only equivalent to a proposal to take shares—Acceptance.—A, after the Bombay Electrical Company had been registered, signed a duplicate memorandum of association for five shares. He subsequently acted as director of the company, being qualified to act as such by procuring from a member of the company five fully paid-up shares. The shares for which he subscribed were never allotted to him, nor was he registered as holder of them. The company went into liquidation. Held that A was not liable in respect of the five shares for which he subscribed. A person signing a duplicate memorandum of association is not bound as one who has signed the original memorandum, although such duplicate is signed after the company has been registered. Such a person cannot be binding, because it does not positive agreement which the law has made the necessary consequence of the signature of the real memorandum before registration. It only amounts to a proposal to take shares. But in the present case there had been no acceptance by the company of the proposal. There had been no allotment and no placing on the register. Acceptance could not be legally inferred from the circumstances of the case. A's liability was only inchoate and never became complete. The company, while it was solvent, never accepted A's offer to become a shareholder, and after it went into liquidation it was too late. 24. — Shares issued as fully paid up—Companies Act (VI of 1882), s. 23—Rights of a purchaser with notice taking from a purchaser without notice—Contributory.—Twenty shares of the Beyla Spinning, Weaving, and Manufacturing Company, Limited, were originally allotted to A as fully paid-up shares partly for work done and partly for work to be done for the Company. The agreement under which the shares were so allotted was not registered as required by s. 23 of Act VI of 1882. A sold three of these shares to D, who had no notice that they were not fully paid up. D sold the three shares to G, who was the Managing Director of the Company. The Company was wound up by the Court. At the date of the winding up, G was holder of the three shares. In settling the list of contributories, the Court ordered G's name to be placed on the list in respect of the three shares. Though G was not liable as a contributory. Though G was a Managing Director of the Company, and as such must have known that the shares had been issued as fully paid-up shares without complying with s. 23 of Act VI of 1882, he was not on that account estopped from taking advantage of the equitable rule which protects a purchaser with notice taking from a purchaser without notice. IS B GULABDAS BHADIAS. 25. — Contributory—Increase of capital—Illegal issue of shares—Reduction of capital—Companies Act (VI of 1882), s. 13.—The Nawab of the Beyla Spinning, Weaving, and Manufacturing Company, Limited, was registered under the Indian Companies Act (X of 1866). The original capital of the company consisted of Rs. 4,00,000 divided into 1,600 shares of Rs. 250 each. In 1882 the capital of the company was increased by Rs. 1,00,000 divided into 1,600 shares of Rs. 62.5. The resolution to increase the capital was not passed in accordance with the articles of association, i.e., "with the sanction of a special resolution of the company passed at a general meeting." On the 5th November 1884, a resolution was passed at a general meeting of the company that the shareholders should take up 459 shares of the original capital and 1,027 shares of the increased capital, which were then in the hands of the company, in the proportion of one share to every two shares already held by them. In pursuance of this resolution, the appellants took up several shares of the original capital as well as of the new capital. On 19th October 1885, a general meeting of the company was held, at which it was resolved that the resolution of the 5th November 1884, and all acts done in connection with it, should be set aside, that the shares taken by the shareholders in pursuance of that resolution should be taken back by the company, and such amounts as had been paid by them on those shares should be credited to their names in the company's books. This was accordingly done, and the shares were transferred to the name of the company. In October 1886, the company was wound up by order of the Court. In settling the list of contributories, the District Judge of Surat held that the appellants were liable, as contributories, in respect of all the shares which they had taken up in pursuance of the resolution of 5th November 1884. On appeal from this decision, — Held that, with respect to the shares of the original capital, the resolution of the 19th October 1885 was illegal and invalid. It operated, not as an investment by the company of its funds in its own shares, but as an extinguishment of the shares, and such extinguishment was virtually a reduction of the capital, which could not be done without complying with the provisions of s. 13 of the Indian Companies Act (VI of 1882). The holders of such shares were therefore properly placed on the list of contributories. Held, also, that the issue of the shares of the new capital had not been the resolution to increase the capital had not been come to in accordance with the articles of association. It was therefore open to the Company to set aside the resolution of 5th November 1884. When it was set aside, the persons who held the new shares ceased to be shareholders, and could not, therefore, be held liable as contributories. BHIMSHAI c. ISHWARDAS JAGTIVANDAS. I. L. The purchaser required the Official Assignee to transfer the shares into the names of two nominees, viz., 200 shares to the name of one nominee, and 223 shares to the name of the other. The Official Assignee executed the necessary transfer deeds and sent them to the company, with a request that the shares might be transferred accordingly. The proposed nominees were already members of the company and registered holders of shares in it, and no objection was taken to register the transfer, unless the transferees would pledge themselves not to approve a certain change in the mode of remunerating the agents of the company, which the Directors desired to effect, and which they believed would be very advantageous to the company. The transferees refused to pledge themselves in any way as to their future action and brought this suit to enforce registration of the transfer. Held, following Moffatt v. Farquhar, L. R., 7 Ch. D., 591, that the Directors were bound to register the transfers. It was contended that neither the Official Assignee nor the transferees had any legal right to call on the company to register the transfers. Held that, having regard to the provision of the Articles of Association of the company, the Official Assignee was entitled to have the shares registered in the names of his vendees. *KAIKHOSBO MUNCHEJI HEBBAMANECK v. 33. — Sanction to transfer not obtained from directors—Application for registration by transferee—Refusal of Directors to register—Specific Relief Act I of 1877, s. 45—Companies Act (VI of 1882), s. 58.—G bought some shares in the Bombay Fire Insurance Company and applied to the directors for registration as a shareholder in respect of the shares bought. The directors refused the application, giving no reason for so doing. G now applied to the Court, under s. 45 of the Specific Relief Act and under s. 58 of the Indian Companies Act, for an order compelling the directors to register him as a shareholder. The articles of association of the company provided (inter alia) that any shareholder might, with the sanction of the board of directors, sell or dispose of

and transfer all or any of his shares to any other person approved by the board who shall not be bound to assign any reason for the withholding of such sanction. Held that the application should be refused, for s. 45 of the Specific Relief Act did not apply (there being another "specific and adequate legal remedy"), and under the Companies Act the proper procedure had not been adopted. G was a transferee whose title was not complete, inasmuch as the requisite sanction to the transfer had not been obtained, and, therefore, there was no privity between him and the directors of the company, and he had no right to complain. IN THE MATTER OF GILBERT FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY. 34. — Approval of transfer by directors—Such power of approval a fiduciary power—Resolution of directors to approve of future transfers ultra vires.—By the articles of association of the New Great Eastern Spinning and Weaving Company transfers of shares in the company were subject to the approval of the directors. On the 18th October 1898 the directors passed a resolution "that up to the time of the next ordinary general meeting the board approve of all transfers of shares made by Dwarkadas Shamji and Ramdas Kessowji (two of the shareholders) or either of them, and . . . will transfer shares standing in the name of Dwarkadas Shamji and in the name of Ramdas Kessowji to their or his transferees without claiming any lien or raising any objection." Held that the above resolution was ultra vires and not binding on the company. The power conferred on the directors by the articles of association was a fiduciary power to be exercised for the benefit of the company, and could not be exercised until the question of each transfer together with the names of the transferer and the transferee was before them and they had an opportunity of considering each case. IN RE NEW GREAT EASTERN SPINNING AND WEAVING CO. and on the 8th August 1881 procured the passing of a resolution at a board meeting to the effect that, as Messrs. C and B, the company's solicitors, were also the solicitors of the agents, it was desirable, for the interests of the company, that a change should be made, and that Messrs. H, C, and L, be appointed solicitors of the company. The plaintiffs alleged that the only object of passing the said resolution was to facilitate the design of G, of ousting the plaintiffs from their agency, and getting the management of the company for himself; that Messrs. H, C, and L had been for a long time the solicitors of G, and had been advising him in his designs upon the company and upon the plaintiffs, and they contended that the resolution was a breach of the contract between the company and the plaintiffs, and a violation of the articles of association of the company. The plaintiffs sued G and two other directors of the company, and the company itself, and prayed for an injunction against the defendants to restrain them from committing any breach of the agreement of 26th August 1874, and in particular from carrying into effect the resolution appointing Messrs. H, C, and L as solicitors for the company, and to restrain them from doing anything inconsistent with the memorandum and articles of association. The defendants contended that the contract of the 26th August 1874 had been determined by the death of Merwanji Framji, and that the powers conferred on the agents by cl. 98 of the articles were, subject to the general powers of management, vested in the directors by the articles, and that the case was not one in which an injunction could be granted. Held that, having regard to the memorandum and articles of association, the contract was that the firm of M F & Co. for the time being should be the agents of the company for twenty-five years, and that the right to sue on the contract by its nature survived to the plaintiffs after the death of Merwanji Framji. Held, also, that there being no provision either in the articles of association or the agreement of 26th August 1874, that the power thereby conferred on the agents should be subject to the control or assent of the directors, there was no right in the directors to interfere with the agents in the exercise of their powers otherwise than as representing the company in virtue of their general powers of management. *NUSSEWANJEE v. 40. — Authority of agent—Corporation—Contract under seal—Companies' Clauses Consolidation Act, 8 & 9 Vic., c. 16, s. 97.—The Scinde Railway Company was incorporated by 18 & 19 Vic., c. 115, for the purpose of making and maintaining railways in India, and for other purposes. This was repealed by 20 & 21 Vic., c. 160, which authorized the company to extend their operations and also their capital, etc. This Act by s. 3 declared the Companies' Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, to be incorporated with it. By s. 18 the company have a "seal for use in India in lieu of the common seal of the company, and from time to time may vary and renew it, and make regulations for its use; and except as by this Act otherwise expressly provided, every document sealed with such seal, in conformity with such regulations, or in pursuance of any order of the directors, or of any authority given by the company under their common seal, shall be as valid and effectual as if the common seal were affixed thereto." By s. 54, "the company from time to time may appoint and remove such committees, persons or person as the company think fit to act on behalf of the company in India or elsewhere, with respect to the making, maintaining, managing, working, and using of the railways and other works of the company, and the control and conduct of any of the affairs in India or elsewhere of the company; and may delegate to any such committee, persons and person respectively all or any of the powers of the company and of the directors and officers thereof, which the company thinks it expedient that such committee, persons, and person respectively should possess for the purposes of his or their respective appointment." In January 1867, E was the agent of the company in India, and he entered, it was alleged on their behalf, into a contract with the plaintiffs for sixty sets of iron-work for low-sided waggons. The plaintiffs' firm did not deal in iron-work, and they had to get the goods manufactured for them in England. The Board of Directors were at the time supplying iron-work for the company. There was nothing to show that E had been appointed under the provisions of s. 54 of the Act, 20 & 21 Vic., c. 160, nor was there any evidence of the extent of his power or authority. A specification of the contract differed from it, in that it stated the waggons to be covered waggons, and not low-sided waggons. The contract was not made under seal of the company, nor was the iron-work, the subject of the contract, ever accepted by the company. The defendants admitted that at the date of the alleged contract E was the agent of the company in India, but denied that his power extended to the making of such contract; they further stated that the contract, if entered into, had been afterwards cancelled. Held by PHEAR, J., that there was no evidence to show that E had authority to make the contract. 43.——— Liability of directors for negligence in management—Employment of agent by directors—Acquiescence of shareholders—Liability of estate of deceased director—Banker, Who is a.—The plaintiffs' company went into liquidation early in the year 1879, in consequence of losses sustained by the failure of Nursey Kessowji & Co., which firm had been the bankers of the said company. The said firm had stepped payment on the 26th December 1878, having then in its hands the sum of Rs. 80,250-14-1, belonging to the company. In this suit the official liquidators of the company sought to recover that sum from the defendants, who had been directors of the company, and a further sum of Rs. 2,48,670-14-0 as damages sustained by the company through the fraud and gross negligence of the defendants in permitting Nursey Kessowji, the agent of the company, to deal with certain shares for his own purposes. The first four defendants were the directors of the company; the fifth defendant was the assignee of the estate of Nursey Kessowji, whose firm of Nursey Kessowji & Co. had become insolvent. The plaintiffs' company was registered on the 31st July 1878, and by the memorandum and articles of association the said Nursey Kessowji was appointed secretary, treasurer, and agent of the company for a period of twenty-five years, upon the terms and conditions contained in an agreement annexed to the articles of association, whereby it was (inter alia) provided that Nursey Kessowji should deposit with such banker or bankers as the directors for the time being should appoint all the moneys due from him to the said company and exceeding in amount at any one time the sum of Rs. 5,000. On the 6th August 1878, the directors of the company appointed the firm of Nursey Kessowji & Co. to be the bankers of the company. It was further alleged by the plaintiffs that, immediately after the registration of the company, the directors and Nursey Kessowji began to borrow money upon the credit of the company far in excess of the legitimate wants of the company, and to pay over the money so borrowed to the firm of Nursey Kessowji & Co., to be used by that firm in speculative business; that the said loans were obtained by the directors, not bond fide for the purposes of the company, but for the purposes of supplying funds to the firm of Nursey Kessowji & Co., to enable it to carry on its business. At the end of the year 1878 the sum paid over by the directors to the firm of Nursey Kessowji had, by reason of such borrowing, amounted to the sum of Rs. 80,250. The plaintiffs alleged that the said loans were wholly unnecessary; and they charged the directors with gross negligence in raising the said loans or permitting them to be raised; and in permitting the moneys so borrowed to remain in the hands of the firm of Nursey Kessowji & Co., to be applied by that firm to its own purposes. As to the Rs. 2,48,670-14-0, the plaintiffs alleged that certain unallotted shares of the total value of Rs. 3,93,750 had been left in the hands of the directors to be disposed of, the proceeds of which were to be applied in making certain payments due by the company; that instead of applying these shares to such purposes, the directors had filled up the said shares in the name of Nursey Kessowji, and authorized him to mortgage the same, in order to raise funds; that the said Nursey Kessowji had accordingly dealt with the said shares, and had applied the proceeds thereof to his own purposes. The plaintiffs charged the directors with fraud and gross negligence as to these shares, and claimed to recover Rs. 2,48,670-14-0 in respect thereof from the defendants. The defendants alleged that they had acted bond fide in all matters connected with the company; that they had always believed the firm of Nursey Kessowji & Co. to be in a solvent condition; and had no reason to mistrust its management of the affairs of the company. One of the defendants (No. 3) died after the institution of the suit, and his sons were made parties. His representatives and Kessowji Naik (defendant No. 1) also claimed to set off against the plaintiffs' claim certain payments made by them as guarantors for the company. Held (1) that one of the directors knew as a fact that the agent was not in a solvent condition; and that the other directors, in the circumstances of the case, ought to have ascertained his financial condition. (2) Directors are responsible for the management of their company where, by the articles of association, the business is to be conducted by the board with the assistance of an agent. They cannot divest themselves of their responsibility by delegating the whole management to the agent, and abstaining from all enquiry. If he proves unfaithful under such circumstances, the liability is theirs, just as much as if they themselves had been unfaithful. (3) That the directors had not used fair and reasonable diligence in the management of the company's affairs, and were liable to refund the money entrusted by them to the agent, Nursey Kessowji, without proper knowledge as to whether it was needed, and without any subsequent investigation of a serious character with respect to its disposal. and subsequently divided among themselves; B P taking for himself two-fifths of the whole, including the 25 shares of J S. The fact of the joint purchase was not communicated to the other directors of the company, nor was there any evidence to show that their attention had been called to certain entries in the books of the company relating to B P having paid the second call on his two-fifths of the joint purchase. J S got no notice to pay the second call, and never applied for or obtained a certificate for the 25 shares; but such a certificate was obtained by B P on the 10th of October 1864, certifying that J S was the shareholder. J S had signed a blank form of transfer and a blank form of request to the directors to transfer, which were undated and without particulars; but B P never executed the transfer as transferee, and the shares never were transferred to his name on the register, nor was the sale to him ever brought to the notice of the directors as a board, or to any of his partners, of any portion of the 2,800 shares; and the articles of association required the consent in writing of the directors to every transfer. On application by J S that his name should be removed from the list of contributories as framed by the official liquidator, and the names of B P's trustees under Act XXVIII of 1865 substituted therein in respect of the 25 shares,—Held that J S was not exonerated, under the circumstances, from the duty of obeying the articles of association and the provision of Act XIX of 1857; that the act of an individual director in his private capacity ought not to bind the board, which had never authorized or ratified his conduct; and that the official liquidator, as representing the body of shareholders, rightly insisted upon keeping J S's name on the list of shareholders. IN RE EAST INDIAN TRADING AND BANKING COMPANY, JAMNADAS SAVAKLAI'S CASE. 3 Bom., O. The letters of allotment indorsed by the allottees and receipts for the first call were made over, at the time of purchase, to the company. No transfers, however, were executed by the allottees, nor were the shares registered by the company in their own name, but they continued to stand in the names of the allottees. Two thousand of the seven thousand shares had been re-sold by the company; and the remaining five thousand were mentioned in a list, kept by the company, of shares purchased by them. On application to the allottees to have their names removed from the list of contributories, as framed by the official liquidator,—Held that the company, through its directors, having, as well by the act of purchase as by their subsequent conduct, treated themselves as the owners of the shares, could not be permitted to take advantage of their own neglect, or

A joint-stock company, even though it be empowered by its memorandum of association to deal in the shares of other companies, is not thereby empowered to deal in its own shares, and a purchase by the directors of the company of its own shares, on behalf of the company, is therefore, under such circumstances, ultra vires. A sharer in a joint-stock company can maintain an action against the directors of such company to compel them to restore to the company funds of the company that have by them been employed in transactions that the directors have no authority to enter into, without making the company a party to the suit. Where a shareholder purchased shares in a joint-stock company, knowing at the time that similar companies were in the habit of dealing in their own shares and those of other companies, and believing that the company in question adopted the same practice, but made no enquiry to ascertain whether or not such was the case, nor made any objections to such dealings of the company until it was discovered they had resulted in loss, it was held that he had, by his own conduct, lost his right to hold the directors personally liable in respect of such dealing, and the result was held to be the same whether the said shareholder was beneficially entitled to his shares, or merely a trustee of them for others. *JEHANGIR RASTAMJI MODI v. The prospectus, which was published on the 23rd June 1865, contained the following statements: "Capital, fifty lakhs of rupees in 10,000 shares, of Rs500 each, with power to increase. 57. — Liability of company for loan to secretary, treasurer, and agent—Principal and agent—Undisclosed principal—Election—Contract Act (IX of 1872), ss. 230, 233, 234.—By the memorandum and articles of association of the New Fleming Spinning and Weaving Company N K was appointed secretary, treasurer, and agent of the company, with power to raise or borrow from time to time, in the name or otherwise on behalf of the company, such sums of money as he might think expedient by bonds, debentures, or promissory notes, or in such other manner as he might deem best; and for the purpose of securing the repayment of any money so borrowed, to make any arrangement which he might deem expedient by conveying or assigning away property of the company to trustees or otherwise. N K was also secretary, treasurer and agent of three other mill companies in Bombay. On the 31st October 1878 the directors passed the following resolution:—"That the unallotted shares be filled up in the name of Nursey Kessowji, Esq., secretary, treasurer, and agent, who is empowered to mortgage them at a fair rate of interest to enable him to obtain funds for the use of the company." On the 11th November 1878 P advanced a sum of Rs. 1,00,500 upon the terms contained in a Gujarati writing of that date, and signed by N K. In this document N K acknowledged the receipt of the money, for which 335 shares in the New Fleming Spinning and Weaving Company were duly handed over as security, and he agreed to repay it within three months. The last clause in the agreement stated that it was "duly agreed to and approved by him (N K) and his heirs and representatives." As an additional security, P, when advancing the loan, obtained from K N (father of N K) a guarantee in the following terms:—"To Thuker Purmannudass Jivandass. Written by Sha Kessowji Naik. To wit,—This day Sha Nursey Kessowji has received from you Rs. 1,00,500, namely, one lakh and five hundred, having deposited by way of security 335, namely, three hundred and thirty-five 'shares' of 'The New Fleming Spinning and Weaving Company, Limited.' As to that, I am not to raise any obstacle or objection. In case it should be necessary, I am to fill up and duly deliver to you an 'indemnity bond' on stamped paper through your vakel (solicitor). This writing is duly agreed to and approved by me and my heirs and representatives. Bombay, the 11th of November in the English year 1878." On the evening of the day on which the loan was made,—viz., 11th November 1878,—but without the knowledge of K N, it was agreed between N K and P that the time for the repayment of the loan should be extended to six months. In December 1878 N K became insolvent, and on 28th December 1878 a petition was presented to the High Court to wind up the New Fleming Spinning and Weaving Company. On the 30th December P, through his solicitors, wrote a letter to the company, stating that N K had obtained a loan from him of Rs. 1,00,500 on behalf of the company's books. To this letter he received a reply signed by "K N, director," stating that the loan appeared in the books in P's name. On the 17th January 1879, an order was made for the winding up of the New Fleming Spinning and Weaving Company, and on the 4th February 1879 P gave notice on the official liquidators of the company of his claim against the company for the money advanced by him on the 11th November 1878. In March 1869 he filed a suit against K N to enforce his guarantee, but was unsuccessful, the Court holding that, by extending the period of the loan to six months, the agreement of the 11th November 1878 had been materially varied without K N's knowledge, and that K N was consequently discharged. On the 24th April 1879 P filed his affidavit in support of his claim against the company. The company resisted the claim. Held (1) that the directors had power, under the memorandum and articles of association, to authorize N K to borrow money on behalf of the company, and that they had done so, and with that object had entrusted him with the unallotted shares. (2) That when P advanced the loan to N K, he was led to believe that N K was obtaining it on behalf of the four mill companies of which he was secretary, treasurer, and agent, but that P was not aware and was not informed for which of the said companies the loan was obtained, and that the money was in fact advanced to N as to an agent acting on behalf of an undisclosed principal. (3) That P, when he discovered that the money was obtained for the New Fleming Spinning and Weaving Company, was entitled to claim against the company and to rank as a creditor of the company for the amount advanced to N K with interest from the date of the loan,—viz., 11th November 1878,—to the date of the presentation of the petition to wind up the company. 66. Winding up under supervision of Court—Order for dissolution of company—Voluntary winding up—Official liquidator—Companies Act, VI of 1882.—As a general rule, a winding-up of a company under supervision of the Court should be terminated in the same way as a purely voluntary winding-up, i.e., under ss. 186 and 187 of the Companies Act, VI of 1882. Although, under s. 195 of the Companies Act, VI of 1882, the Court has power to make an order dissolving a company in the course of winding-up, subject to its supervision, such cases must be exceptional and can only occur when the Court has deemed it proper to carry on the winding-up under supervision in a manner such as clearly to approximate to a winding-up by the Court. The ordinary rule is the other way, and it is reasonable that it should be so; as generally, a winding-up under supervision is not conducted under so intimate a control of the Court as to put the Court in a position to judge of the correctness of the liquidators' action and the completeness of the winding-up. So far as the Court does not interfere, a winding-up under supervision remains essentially a voluntary winding-up; but the Court in a winding-up under supervision has full authority to interfere and to exercise to any extent the power which it might have exercised if an order had been made for winding up the company by the Court. The words "official liquidator" in s. 160 of the Companies Act, VI of 1882, do not include the liquidators in a winding-up under supervision. Held that these resolutions were informal; that the company was not winding-up under either Act; and that an action against it by a creditor could not be stayed. The London, Bombay, and Mediterranean Bank, a joint-stock company, registered under the English Companies Act, 1862, was ordered to be wound up by an order of the Court of Chancery in England in 1866, and by a subsequent order of the said Court made in the winding-up of the bank, it was ordered that service of any notice, summons, order, or other proceedings in these matters might be effected by putting such notice, etc., into any post office, either in England or at Bombay, duly addressed to such contributories, being past members according to their respective last known addresses or places of abode. By a final balance order dated 6th June 1879, it was ordered by the Court of Chancery

in England that the persons named in the schedule to the said order, being contributories as past members of the said bank, should within four days after

On the 1st March 1879, the winding-up of the F. S. & W. Co. was ordered to be continued under the supervision of the Court, and J's suit was at the same time stayed. J then endeavoured to have the arbitration revived. In this he was unsuccessful, the submission not having been filed in Court, and the arbitration being held to be already dead and past revival. The suit subsequently came on to be heard and was dismissed, on the ground that s. 175 of the Act made an arbitration and an award a condition precedent to any suit. J then called on the liquidators to nominate an arbitrator, and enter on a fresh arbitration. This the liquidators doubted whether they could legally do, and therefore they now petitioned the Court for its order and direction in the matter. They submitted that J had never acquired the rights of a dissentient shareholder under s. 175 by reason of the insufficiency of his notice, and that, in any case, one arbitration having been already entered upon and determined, J could not now call upon them to enter on a fresh arbitration. Held, following In re Union Bank of Kingston-upon-Hull, L. R., 13 Ch. D., 509, that J's notice of dissent of the 5th August was in itself an insufficient notice under the provisions of s. 175 of the Indian Companies Act, 1866, inasmuch as it did not contain the requisition to the liquidators required by the latter part of that section, and that, consequently, it was open to the liquidators to have treated J as disentitled to the rights of a dissentient shareholder under that section. Held, further, that it was within the power of the liquidators to waive such informality in the notice on behalf of the company, and that they had in fact done so, and that J was consequently entitled to the rights of a dissentient shareholder under that section. Held, further, that the rights of a dissentient shareholder, under that and the following sections, who had elected to have the value of his interest in the company decided by arbitration, were not limited to a single reference to arbitration, and were not extinguished by the expiry, without an award being made, of the time fixed by such reference for making an award; that in such a case, unless otherwise disentitled, the dissentient shareholder was entitled to a second reference to arbitration for the purpose of arriving at a definite result by means of an award, which was the object contemplated by those sections of the Act. *IN RE FLEMING SPINNING AND WEAVING COMPANY. The Privy Council will be reluctant to interfere with the discretion of Courts having jurisdiction to sanction a

The Court had no power to sanction such an arrangement, which would be altering in a material degree the footing on which a security held by the bank stood, and interposing a new trust between it and its debtor. IN THE MATTER OF THE INDIAN COMPANIES ACT, 1866, AND OF AGRA AND MASTERMAN'S BANK

94. ———— Claims on assets—Precedence of judgment-debt due to Secretary of State—Stay of execution of judgment-debt.—A judgment-debt due to the Crown is in Bombay entitled to the same precedence in execution as a like judgment-debt in England, if there be no special legislative provision affecting that right in the particular case. Under similar circumstances, a judgment-debt due to the Secretary of State in Council for India is in Bombay entitled to the like precedence, and the reason is that such debt is vested in the Crown, and when realized falls into the State treasury. The nature of the cause of action in respect of which the judgment was recovered does not affect the right of the Crown or of the Secretary of State in Council for India to priority. As the Crown is not, either expressly or by implication, bound by the Indian Companies Act (X of 1866), and as an order made under that Act for the winding-up of a company does not work any alteration of property, such an order does not enable the Court to stay the execution of a judgment-debt due to the Crown or to the Secretary of State in Council for India. It is a principle recognized by the laws of many countries that claims of the Crown or State are entitled to precedence,—e.g., the Hindu, Roman, and French codes, the laws of Spain, the United States of America, Scotland, and England. *SECRETARY OF STATE IN COUNCIL FOR INDIA v. This application was refused, and the Magistrate, after perusing the police report, passed an order directing him to be prosecuted under s. 211 of the Penal Code. Held that the application to the Magistrate was "a complaint", within the meaning of s. 191 of the Criminal Procedure Code into which the Magistrate was bound to have enquired. A Magistrate may take cognizance under s. 191 of the Criminal Procedure Code of an offence brought to his notice by a police report which affords ground for a suspicion that an offence has been committed; but as a matter of sound judicial discretion, a Magistrate should not so proceed and direct that the person suspected be tried until some person aggrieved has complained, or until he has before him a police report on the subject based on an investigation directed to the offence to be tried, and in cases of alleged false charges, until it is clear that the original charge has been either heard and dismissed or abandoned. 38. ————— Omission of examination of complainant on oath—Dismissal of complaint—Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1862), ss. 197, 200, 202, 203.—Complaint against a police servant.—Upon receipt of a petition of complaint it is the duty of a Magistrate, as directed by s. 200 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1862), to examine the complainant on oath. Until he has done so, it is not competent for him to dismiss the complaint under s. 203 of the Code. It is an irregular proceeding on the part of a Magistrate, in place of examining the complainant on oath, to call on the person complained against to submit a report as to the truth or otherwise of the allegations made against him. If an investigation into the subject-matter of the complaint is considered necessary, it should be conducted according to the provisions of s. 202, either by the Magistrate himself or by some properly qualified officer. A complaint against a public servant such as the Chairman of a Municipality must be dealt with in exactly the same manner as any other complaint, and the consideration of the question as to the applicability of s. 197 of the Criminal Procedure Code to the case should be postponed until after the complainant has been examined on oath in accordance with the law. *SATTA CHARAN GHOSH v. Where a complainant, whose complaint had been reported false by the police, complained to the Magistrate and asked him to try the complaint, and the Magistrate did not examine the complainant himself, but made over the case to a Subordinate Magistrate for judicial enquiry or report,—Held that the Magistrate had no authority for this procedure. A complainant must be examined by the Magistrate who receives the complaint, or by some Magistrate to whom he has transferred the case. When a complainant has been examined, he is entitled to have the person accused brought before the Magistrate, and it is only when the Magistrate has reason not to believe the truth of the complaint from his examination that this can properly be refused and an investigation held. MAHABHO SINGH v. It appeared that the complainant and his witnesses, though not in attendance in the Magistrate's Court, were present in another Court in the same Court-house, being under the impression that his case had been transferred to the Magistrate of that Court. Held that the complainant having been present in the Court-house, the provisions of s. 217 of the Code of Criminal Procedure had been improperly applied.

82. — Power to dismiss case—Irregularity in dismissal—Transfer of case by Magistrate to Deputy Magistrate.—S T brought a charge of theft against B before a Magistrate. The case was made over to the Deputy Magistrate, on whose suggestion the Magistrate ordered that there should be a police enquiry. The police superintendent reported that, in his opinion, the charge was false, and that the plaintiff should be summoned for bringing a false charge; and the Magistrate, while declaring that he would not encourage charges of "false complaint," said that the injured party might swear an information if she chose. S T then petitioned to be allowed to call witnesses in support of her charge of theft, and objected to the police proceedings. The Magistrate recorded the following order:—"The case has been dismissed, and the accused, Mrs. B, has received permission to prosecute the woman S T for false charge; the present petition may be put in defence in that case." Held that the order of the Magistrate must be quashed—(1) because he had no jurisdiction, the case having been made over to the Deputy Magistrate; (2) because the order above was not a judicial dismissal of the case. Case remanded for trial of the original charge as brought by S T.

85. — Report of police officer who is an accused person—Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1852), ss. 200-203, 237.—Ss. 200 to 203 of the Criminal Procedure Code must be read together, and a Magistrate dismissing a complaint under the provisions of s. 203 on any one of the three grounds—viz. (1) if he, upon the statement of the complainant, reduced to writing under s. 200, finds no offence has been committed; (2) if he distrusts the statement made by the complainant; and (3) if he distrusts that statement, but his distrust is not sufficiently strong to warrant him in acting upon it, except upon a further enquiry as provided for in s. 232—must record his reason for so doing, for, if such reasons were not recorded, it would be impossible for the High Court, exercising its revisional powers under s. 437 of the Criminal Procedure Code, to consider whether the discretion of such Magistrate has been properly exercised. It was never contemplated that a Magistrate should call for a report from an accused person under s. 202 for the purpose of ascertaining the truth of the complaint. If such accused happened to be an officer subordinate to the Magistrate, where, therefore, a complaint was made against a police officer, and complainant's statement was duly recorded, and the Magistrate acting under the provision of s. 202 called for a report from such police officer, and acting upon that report dismissed the complaint under s. 203,—Held that he had acted illegally, and that his order made under the last-named section should be set aside, and the case proceeded with according to law from the time at which the complaint was made and the complainant's statement so recorded. The Deputy Magistrate examined the complainant, took bail from the accused, but refused to examine the complainant's witnesses, although present, and delayed the investigation unnecessarily for a long time. The Magistrate of the district then called for the proceedings, and having looked at them considered that there was no case for the interference of the Criminal Courts, and discharged the prisoner, although he was present and competent, but bound to discharge the prisoner, if his conclusion that no offence was made out was correct. Meanwhile, on the 15th October, the charge was repeated in a complaint before the Magistrate of the District, who directed the complainant and his witnesses to attend on a particular day, but subsequently, without having examined them or the complainant, referred the matter to the Sub-Deputy Magistrate. That officer having reported the charge to be false, the Magistrate, on the 9th November, wrote upon the police report, which had meanwhile, on the 26th October, been submitted to him, the following direction, viz., "show as false". On the 19th November a counter-prosecution under ss. 211, 182 and 500 of the Penal Code was sanctioned, and eventually, on the 22nd May 1879, resulted in the petitioner being convicted. While the counter-prosecution was pending, the petitioner, on the 22nd April, applied to the Magistrate to proceed with his complaint according to law, but was informed that his complaint was dismissed. On the following day the Magistrate recorded the following order:—"Dismissed in accordance with my decision recorded in the police report under s. 147 of the Code of Criminal Procedure." 16. — Requisites for composition of offence valid in law—Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1882), s. 345—Onus of proof—Wrongful restraint and confinement of coolies employed on tea garden.—Where an accused person alleges that an offence with which he is charged has been compounded so as to take away the jurisdiction of the Criminal Courts to try it, the onus is on him to show that there was a composition valid in law. M, a European British subject, charged with the compoundable offences of wrongful restraint and wrongful confinement of coolies employed on a tea garden of which he was the manager, pleaded that the Magistrate had no jurisdiction to try the cases, as they had been compounded by the complainants. The alleged compromise consisted of a Bengali paper, signed by the coolies, stating that they "made razinama" (compromise) "of the case of their own accord," and a paper in English signed by M, these papers being given to the District Superintendent of Police, who had investigated the complaints, and who stated that he asked the coolies as to the contents of the Bengali paper, and they said that they had signed it voluntarily and stated its purport, and that one of them said in the presence of the others that it was a razinama. G, one of the coolies, also wrote on the paper the words in Uriya, "I will not carry on the case." The Bengali paper was written by the Darogah of the police station in presence of M. The paper signed by M was as follows:—"I hereby agree with these Ganjam people that there shall be no legal proceedings of any kind taken against them with the exception of those who have not completed their agreements. Those whose agreements have not been completed, proceedings will be taken against them on 22nd May, if they have not returned to the garden before then." Neither of the papers were explained to G so as to make them intelligible to him, for though the Bengali paper was read out, G did not understand that language. G was one of the coolies who had completed his agreement with M. Held per PRINSEP, J.—The compounding of an offence signifies that the person against whom the offence has been committed has received some gratification to act as an inducement for his desiring to abstain from a prosecution; here there was no forbearance on the part of M to proceed against G, who had served out the term of his engagement, and therefore, there was no consideration for the agreement to compound. Having regard, moreover, to the ignorance and inferior intelligence of G, it was of vital importance for M to show what led to the alleged agreement, and how it was that the Darogah was instrumental to it, which he had not done. Per TREVELYAN, J.—Compounding an offence supposes an arrangement by which the parties have settled their differences, and in the more usual acceptance of the term implies that the prosecutor has received some consideration or gratification for dropping the prosecution. Although the provisions of the Contract Act may not apply, the proof of the arrangement must be similar to that which the Court requires for the proof of any agreement which is in issue; and unless it appears that the parties were free from influence of every kind and were fully aware of their respective rights, it would be impossible to give effect to a so-called arrangement or composition. Having regard to the fact that the writer of the Bengali agreement had not been called, and that the contracting parties were, on the one side, ignorant coolies, strangers to the land and to the language in which the document was written, and on the other, a European of some education, assisted by his Bengali clerk, and, having also the assistance of the police, it was not proved that G knew what he was about and was fairly contracting. Held, therefore, by the Court that there was under the circumstances no compounding of the offences with which M was charged, valid in law such as to deprive the Magistrate of jurisdiction to try them. *MURRAY v. When a petition either for compromise or, or for withdrawal from, the case is put in, the Court ought to make an order either granting or refusing the application then and there, and should not put it off by ordering it to be filed with the record to be considered at the close of the trial. *MAHOMED ISMAIL v. 5. — Mahomedan law—Estate limited to take effect in favour of a person after another's death.—It is not consistent with Mahomedan law to limit an estate to take effect after the determination, on the death of the owner, of a prior estate by way of what is known to English law as a vested remainder, so as to create an interest which can pass to a third person before the determination of the prior estate. The parties to a solennamah or compromise were, on the one side, the widow of a Mahomedan, she being in possession of villages in Oudh, which had belonged to him, and of which in the summary settlement of 1858 had been made with her; and, on the other side, two brothers, alleged to be his sons. By the compromise, which was made in the course of proceedings at regular settlement, it was agreed that the widow should, during her lifetime, continue to hold possession, and remain prior, without power of alienation, and that after her death the two sons should possess each one-half of the property. Held that, on the true construction of the compromise, the title of the sons to succeed was contingent upon their surviving the widow, and that no interest passed to their heirs on their deaths

6. — Penalty for non-fulfilment of conditions, Suit to enforce.—A suit for a kabuliat having been brought in the Revenue Court, a deed of compromise was filed in the suit, in which it was stipulated that a certain sum would be paid by the defendants to the zamindar as rent of four kanis of land, including homestead, after mutation of names; that Rs15-8 on account of outstanding balance and charges connected with the rents would be paid to the plaintiffs within a month; and that in default the defendants would have no right to the lands specified. The defendants having failed to fulfil the conditions, the plaintiffs executed their decree and realised from them the balance above mentioned, and having sued them for the rent obtained a decree. The plaintiffs then brought this suit to recover possession, in virtue of itnami right, of the land on the ground of non-fulfilment of the conditions of the compromise. The first Court gave them a decree, which the lower Appellate Court reversed, holding that the deed merely imposed a penalty with a view to punctual payment. Held that, as what the defendants had to do was of a perpetually recurring nature, and no action which the Court might take would be effectual in preserving the plaintiff from being sued by the zamindar, the intention was that the terms should be strictly enforced on failure to perform the conditions, and that the defendant should be obliged to surrender the lands.

7. — Construction and enforceability of compromise of suit between members of granted's family—Removal of manager—Appointment of receiver.—Early in the eighteenth century two villages were granted by the zamindars of Sivaganga and Guntamanalkaur to the last of the Naik rulers of Madura for the maintenance of the rank and dignity of his family which was now represented by the plaintiffs and defendants Nos. 1 to 23. The property was long managed by the representative, for the time being, of the senior line. In 1844 one of the junior members instituted a suit for partition, which terminated in a decree, declaring the corpus of the property to be indivisible and the annual produce to be divisible in certain shares. Subsequently in 1857 a compromise was entered into, by which the parties agreed to vary the distribution of the shares, but they agreed that the management of the estate, indivisible and inalienable, should continue to be vested in the eldest line subject to certain supervision on the part of the other members. The compromise was long acted upon by the family; but in 1892 the representative of the senior line died, leaving only his widow and infant sons. The widow, as guardian of the elder son, then entered on the management, and being gosha, delegated it to a stranger. The plaintiffs representing a junior line

16. — Interest A et t (XXXII of 1839).—Interest on certain amount payable on the happening of an event and at certain time.—Sum agreed to be paid to defend a suit.—Effect of compromise of suit on liability to pay.—A brought a suit against B and C. B wrote a letter to C, proposing that counsel should be engaged to defend the suit, and that C should contribute Rs900 only for it. C agreed to the proposal and consented to pay the amount within ten days. Counsel was engaged, and Rs4,000 were paid to him. After several hearings the case was compromised. B then demanded from C the amount which he had promised to contribute, and also interest on it. C refused to pay and a suit was brought by B to recover the said amount with interest. C pleaded that he was not liable to pay the amount, inasmuch as the case was compromised, and also pleaded that he was not liable to pay interest on it, as the debt was neither certain in amount nor payable at a certain time. Held that B was entitled to recover the amount, as there was a promise by C to pay on the happening of a certain event which had happened. Held, also, that B was entitled to get interest on the amount, inasmuch as the debt was not uncertain, the date of payment was defined, and C knew that the contingency upon which he became liable had occurred. *SURJA NARAIN MUKHOPADHYA v. the same parties, now contesting the right to part of an ancestral estate, claimed another part of the same estate, without comprising the lands now in suit, which, at the time when the first suit was brought, were outstanding under a mortgage. A decree had been made by consent, excluding the lands now sued for. The defendant's case was that the lands now claimed, together with those decreed by consent, had been made the subject of two written agreements not registered. Also, that according to the compromise each of the parties was to take a moiety of the whole estate. Each had obtained possession, but the decree was limited to the part of the estate for which the prior suit, then disposed of, was brought; and only lands then in suit—was presented to and accepted by the Court which made the consent decree. Held that this agreement had a different effect from the other one, as it constituted a step in a judicial proceeding, and did not require registration. As regards the order as pronounced in terms of it. Not as regarded the lands now in suit, excluded as they had been from the decree in the former suit, the defendant's title to them had been left to stand or fall by the other unregistered document. The latter, by the Registration Act, 1877, conferred no title, and this defence failed. PRASAD ANNI v. LAKSHMI ANNI.

20. Joint and several property—Separate property—Decided ancestral property—Certain ancestral estate was recorded as Estoppel.—Certain ancestral estate was recorded as held in equal shares by four brothers, A, B, C, and D. On A's death his son E was recorded as the holder of the share. On the deaths of B and D, C was at first recorded as the owner of their shares.
Shortly afterwards B's widow, F, and D's widow,
G, were recorded as the holders of their husbands' shares. Again, at a later period, the names of H and I, the sons of E, were substituted for those of the widows. The estate was subsequently sold for the arrears of Government revenue, but a lease of it was given to E, H, I, and C. In 1853 the Government, having purchased the estate, proposed to regrant it to the old zamindars and farmers, and a report regarding the ownership of the estate was called for. It was reported that it appeared from the statements of E and J, the son of C, that the widows of D and D had made a gift of their shares to H and I. In 1853 E, J, H, and I were asked by the Collector in what manner they proposed to divide the estate if it were granted to them, and they replied that they would hold it in equal shares. The estate was eventually granted to these persons on payment of the arrears of revenue. Each of them contributed his quota in making such payment. In 1855 an administration-paper was framed in which it was entered, at their own request, as is proved each of equal shares. In 1861 they agreed to a partition of the shares by arbitration. Three proceedings were stopped by J advancing a claim to a moiety of the estate. In March 1867 J sued for possession of a moiety of the share originally held by B's widow, then deceased, and for a declaration of his right to a moiety of the share held originally by D's widow. In June 1867 the parties to the suit offered a compromise, agreeing to divide the estate into four lots on certain conditions. A decree was accordingly passed, so to 1876, in his father's lifetime. A, J's son, and to 1876 as his father had died, to obtain the same relief as his father had sought in 1867, and a declaration that the decree was null and void. Held that, assuming that the estate was joint until 1867, A was, in the absence of fraud, not entitled to a moiety of the share originally held by his father, and that the compromise entered into by his father, and his son, was not maintainable. The shares of the estate were held in separate shares, the shares of A's great-grandson deceased as inheritance liable to obstruction, and A could not have questioned his father's acts. PITAM BISOH v. PANDU BISOH its respective legal rights, cannot afterwards ha-whether it would be for benefit of minor to set aside compromise.—The plaintiff, a minor, was, as daughter and one of the heirs of A, entitled to $\frac{1}{16}$ ths of his estate. The value of A's estate was uncertain, and depended on whether or not A had been a partner in business with M, and whether or not a sum of Rs30,000 had been paid by M to A in satisfaction of all claims which A had against M in respect of the estate of K, a deceased brother of A and former partner in the same business. M having, on A's death, possessed himself of all the estates of A, the plaintiff brought a suit against M, in which a decree was made ordering an account to be taken of the estate of A which had come into the hands of M. Pending such account M died, leaving a will, by which he appointed the son of A and another his executors, and the suit was revived against them. In their application for probate they stated that the value of M's estate, so far as they had been able to ascertain and were aware, was Rs1,11,000. Shortly after probate was granted, negotiations were entered into between the executors and the advisers of the plaintiff for a compromise, and a petition was, with the concurrence of the executors, presented by the plaintiff to the Court, asking for its sanction to the terms agreed upon by the parties, which were, that the plaintiff should receive Rs20,000, in full of all demands, and Rs5,000 for her costs of suit. This petition took, as the value of M's estate, the amount stated by the executors in their application for probate, and stated that the value of A's estate, in case the above-mentioned payment by M was proved, would be Rs30,000, and in case it was not proved, then a moiety of the estate of M; and that, considering the difficulties the plaintiff had to meet in proving her case, and with a view to put an end to further trouble, litigation, and expense, the above terms had been agreed to on her behalf. These terms of compromise were sanctioned by the Court on the 11th September 1876. Shortly afterwards, further property was discovered belonging to the estate of M. The plaintiff brought a suit against the executors to set aside the compromise, allowing that the terms had been accepted by her on the faith of the representation made by the executors in their application for probate, and charging them with wilful and fraudulent concealment. There was evidence to show that some of the property subsequently discovered was such that the defendants as executors ought to have known, even if they did not, of its existence at the time of the compromise. Held that even though the executors had no such knowledge, and there was no actual fraud, yet there was such culpable ignorance and neglect of duty on their part as to amount to fraud, and carry with it the consequences of knowledge; and as the compromise had in consequence been entered into by the parties and sanctioned by the Court under a misapprehension of material facts, the plaintiff was entitled to have the compromise set aside, and the parties restored to their rights in the former suit at the time it was effected. Per PONTIFEX, J.—In cases where the

J.—In a substantive suit by a minor to set aside a compromise made with the sanction of the Court obtained by fraud or mistake, it is not the province of the Court to enquire whether it would or would not be for the benefit of the minor that the compromise should be set aside; though it might be otherwise on an application for review to the Court which granted the sanction. *SOLOMON v. But where such a compromise was alleged to have been entered into by a mother on behalf of two minor sons on the one hand, and an adult member of the family on the other, agreeing to give the latter more than had been awarded by a judicial decision, it was held that the compromise was not binding on the minors. *DHARMJAI VAMAN v. The agreement was in writing, and dealt in one clause with the dispute, the subject-matter of the suit, and in a second clause with another dispute of long standing between the parties, with which the suit had nothing to do. The plaintiffs subsequently objecting to consent to a decree being taken in terms of the first clause of the agreement, the defendants took out a rule nisi, calling on the plaintiffs to show cause why the agreement should not be recorded in Court, and why the Court should not pass a decree in accordance therewith, under the provisions of s. 375 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). The rule was argued on affidavits on either side, the plaintiffs objecting that the above section did not apply to such a case as this, and that, in any case, the matter could not be decided on affidavits, but evidence must be gone into. Held that s. 375 gave the Court the power to deal with such a case as this in the manner required, and that this was a proper case in which to exercise such a power; and that, in the circumstances of this case, no definite procedure having been enjoined by the Code, the matter might properly be decided on affidavits. writing before the hearing, the parties to a suit entered into a compromise by which the plaintiff agreed for consideration to withdraw the suit. The petition stated the terms of arrangement, and also that an application would be made by the guardian of the minor praying the Court to allow the compromise to be carried out on his behalf. Ten days after the petition of compromise was filed, the first defendant and the plaintiff presented petitions to the Court withdrawing from the compromise, and praying that the suit should proceed. The second defendant presented a petition praying that the compromise should be recorded and a decree passed according to its terms. The Court made a decree in accordance with the prayer of the second defendant's petition. The first defendant appealed. Held that an appeal lay, and that the lower Court was wrong in enforcing the compromise at the instance of the second defendant. Semble,—That s. 375 of the Code of Civil Procedure merely covers cases in which all parties consent to have the terms entered into, carried out, and judgment entered up. *Ruttonsey Lalji v. Before a decree was passed, one of the parties objected to the compromise being accepted. Held that it was open to the Court, such objection notwithstanding, to pass a decree in accordance with the agreement. Ruttonsey Lalji v. Pooribai, I. L. R., 7 Bom., 304; and Karuppan v. An oral agreement by the parties to a suit that a decree be passed creating a charge on immovable property above Rs 100 in value is not rendered inoperative by s. 59 of the Transfer of Property Act. The parties to an appeal applied to the Court to pass a decree in accordance with the terms of a compromise, and, before decree was passed, one of the parties objected to such decree being passed, on the ground that certain conditions precedent to be performed by the other party had not been performed. The Court (this being denied by the other party) called for affidavits in proof of the terms of the agreement of

Held that the High Court was not justified in passing a decree under s. 577 of the Code of Civil Procedure in accordance with the terms of the unverified solehnamah. BANDHU BHAGAT v. MUHAMMED TAQUI. I. L. R., 14 AIL, 350*

61. *Agreement adjusting suit—Power of Court to determine fact of agreement having been made—Reference of suit to arbitration—Award.—The plaintiff sued the defendant to recover certain property of which she alleged he had taken possession. Subsequently the "matters in difference in the said suit" were by a signed submission paper referred to arbitration. An award was made ordering the defendant to pay to the plaintiff Rs 6000, and cancelling a certain account. It also decided the claim of the plaintiff to two ornaments, which was a matter not included in the "submission paper," but had been verbally referred to the arbitrator in the course of the arbitration. The plaintiff now applied that the submission and award should be filed as an agreement adjusting the suit under s. 375 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), or, in the alternative, that the award should be filed under s. 525. The defendant disputed the agreement and denied the validity of the award. Held that under s. 375 of the Civil Procedure Code, the Court had jurisdiction to determine whether, as a fact, the alleged agreement adjusting the suit has been made, and if it was satisfied that it has been made, to record it. Whether that fact should be tried on affidavit or by oral evidence, is entirely for the discretion of the Court. The Court accordingly, holding that the suit had been adjusted by the submission and award, ordered the same to be filed and the adjustment recorded. Held, further, that the Court could make no order as to that portion of the award which dealt with matter not relating to the subject-matter of the suit. A separate application should be made with regard to the ornaments. *SANIBAI v. PREMI PRAGJI

1. GENERAL CASES.

1. ———— "Confession," Meaning of, as used in Evidence Act—Evidence Act, 1872, ss. 26, 30.—The word "confession," as used in the sections of the Evidence Act relating to confessions, must not be construed as including a mere inculpatory admission which falls short of being an admission of guilt. QUEEN-EMPERESS v. JAGRUP
[I. L. R., 7 All., 646]

2. ———— Voluntary confession—Proof of guilt.—A voluntary and genuine confession is legal and sufficient proof of guilt. QUEEN v. JHURREE 7 W. R., Cr., 41

3. ———— Confession to be taken as a whole.—A prisoner's confession must be taken in its entirety. QUEEN v. BOODHOO . 8 W. R., Cr., 38

QUEEN v. SONAOOLLAH . 25 W. R., Cr., 23

4. ———— Statements of accused inconsistent with each other.—The ordinary rule of taking confessions as a whole and giving the accused (in the absence of other evidence against him) the benefit of any circumstance that may appear in his favour therefrom, cannot apply to confessions which are diametrically opposed to each other; but only where the more favourable view is not absolutely inconsistent with the general tenor of the confession. QUEEN v. NITYO GOPAL DASS BR-RAGEE 24 W. R., Cr., 80

5. ———— Inconsistent statements—Credibility of.—The words actually used by an accused, who is said to have confessed, ought to be ascertained. The Court should not accept merely the conclusions at which the witnesses deposing to a confession themselves arrived from the answers which the accused gave to questions put by them. Where an accused makes two distinct statements,—the one amounting to a confession of guilt, the other repudiating guilt,—if the one statement is taken against the accused, the other also must be taken, for what it is worth, in his favour. The Court ought to weigh well the relative credibility of the two statements before it accepts the one in preference to the other. QUEEN v. SOOBIAN

6. ———— Confessions of prisoner in one case evidence in another.—The confessions of the prisoner in one case in which he was convicted cannot be used against him in another case, unless they are deposed to on oath, either by the person who took them down, or by some one else who heard them. IN RE MUNGER BHOOXAN . 10 W. 10. — Statement admitting crime, but pleading compulsion by others.—An a prisoner is tried, that the accused, before making a confession, was warned that it was optional with him to answer the questions put to him or not, is unavailing as to the fact of such a warning having been given, it is not conclusive to show that such a confession has not been made under the influence of fear engendered by previous maltreatment, or is not otherwise valueless. Allegations made in a regular and proper manner before a Sessions Court on appeal, that a confession made by the accused before the Magistrate who tried the case was made under such circumstances as to preclude its admissibility in, or diminish its value as evidence, should receive due attention and be enquired into. A Sessions Court refusing to make such enquiry commits a grave error in law and procedure. REG. v. KASHINATH DINKAR

Proof of oral confession.—The matter before a "panchayat" was whether M and K had murdered B, and thereby disqualified themselves from further intercourse with the rest of their brotherhood. M and B made certain statements before the panchayat, which it was afterwards sought to prove against them on their trial for the murder of B, as confessions corroborating the evidence of an approver. The witnesses called to prove these "confessions" did not state specifically what was said by M and K before the panchayat. One witness, a member of the panchayat, said: "M confessed and K acquiesced." Another witness, also a member of the panchayat, said: "M and K were taxed with taking B's house, upon which both admitted having murdered him." The same witness also said: "The admissions were not taken down." It appeared that it was not till at the sixth meeting of the panchayat, and when M and K were threatened with excommunication from caste for life, that they made such statements. Held that, if the statements attributed to M and K had been actually made and assented to, and this fact had been duly proved, the provisions of s. 24 of Act I of 1872 could not be pleaded against their admissibility, on the ground that such statements had been caused by such threat, for the members of the panchayat were not in authority over M and K within the meaning of that section, nor was there any threat made having reference to any charge against them. The statements, however, could not be accepted as sufficient in themselves to corroborate the evidence of the approver, or to support the conviction of M and K for the murder of B. The statements were in general terms and represented only the impression conveyed by what might have been said to the mind of the witnesses. It was always essential that the Court should know as nearly as possible what were the words used by the supposed confessors, and what were the questions or matters in regard to which they were said. It might have been that the words ascribed to M and K, taken with the questions put and the exact subject-matter of the enquiry, did not amount to a confession of the guilt believed by the hearers to have been confessed. *EMPRESS v. 17. ——— Warning by Magistrate—Inducement to confess—Criminal Procedure Code, Act X of 1882, s. 163—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 24.—A Deputy Magistrate, before taking down a statement from a person brought before him by the police, noted on the paper on which he was about to take down the statement the following words, which, after excluding the police officers from his presence, he had verbally addressed to the accused: "After excluding from my presence the police officers, who brought him, I warned the accused that what he would say would go as evidence against him; so he had better tell the truth." Held that the use of such language was calculated to hold out an inducement to the prisoner to confess, and that such a confession was therefore inadmissible in evidence against him. *QUEEN-EMPRESS v. 3. CONFESSIONS SUBSEQUENTLY RETRACTED.

18. ——— Confession retracted before Sessions Judge.—A confession before the Magistrate, though afterwards retracted before the Sessions Court, is evidence against the party making it, under s. 366 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1861. QUEEN v. JEMA . . . 8 W. R., Cr., 40

19. ——— Statement to Magistrate afterwards retracted—Evidence—Criminal Procedure Code, 1861, s. 205.—A detailed confession made by an accused before a Magistrate, but retracted on the examination being read over to him in conformity with s. 205 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, does not amount to a confession, although the plea for retracting the confession—viz., ill-treatment of the accused by the police—may be enquired into and found to be untrue. *REG. v. Three days afterwards he voluntarily came forward and made, on solemn affirmation, another statement, in which he retracted and contradicted what he had said in his former statement. The conditional pardon was thereupon cancelled, and the accused was put upon his trial. Held that the first statement was admissible as evidence against the accused, under s. 32 of Act II of 1855. *REG. v. A jury should be asked with reference to such confessions, not whether they were corroborated by independent evidence, but whether having regard to the circumstances under which they were made and retracted and all the circumstances connected with them, it was more probable that the original confession or the statements retracting them were true. *QUEEN-EMPRESS v. Practice of taking prisoners before Magistrate to get confession recorded.—The practice of taking prisoners before Magistrates not having jurisdiction in the case, for the purpose of getting a confession recorded, is not generally desirable, but such a confession is legally admissible in evidence when duly proved. *REG. v. 30. Statement made to Magistrate.—Criminal Procedure Code, 1861, s. 109.—S. 109 of the Code of Criminal Procedure refers to cases where the confession of a prisoner has been made to the Magistrate conducting the investigation, and not to the police. It is only when properly made to the Magistrate that the confession can be used as evidence against the prisoner. The mere standing by of the Magistrate when the confession is being made to the police is not sufficient. QUEEN v. DOMUN KAHAR . . . 12 W. R., Cr., 82

34. Improper examination of accused person by Magistrate.—Criminal Procedure Code, ss. 164, 364, 533.—Evidence Act, ss. 65; 80.—Record rejected.—The Deputy Magistrate of Malabar, purporting to act under the provisions of the Mapilla Act (Madras Act XX of 1859), recorded a statement in the nature of a confession made by V, who was under arrest on suspicion of being concerned in a Mapilla outrage. This statement, which was made in Malayalam, was recorded in English in the form of a narrative and was signed by the Magistrate only. The same Magistrate shortly afterwards, purporting to act under the Code of Criminal Procedure, before any evidence was recorded against V, examined him as to this statement which was read over and translated to him. In answer to questions, V, admitted that he had made it voluntarily. This examination was recorded according to the provisions of s. 364 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. After other evidence was recorded, V, retracted his statement. He was committed to the Sessions, tried, and convicted mainly on his own recorded statement and examination. The Deputy Magistrate was examined as a witness, and stated that the statement recorded by him was made by V, and was correctly recorded, and was made voluntarily. Held that the record of the statement made by V to the Deputy Magistrate was not admissible in evidence against V. PER PARKER, J.—The provisions of s. 164 of the Code of Criminal Procedure are imperative, and s. 533 will not render a confession admissible where no attempt has been made to conform to the provisions of the former section. If the confessional statement of V was recorded by the Magistrate in his executive capacity, it was not receivable in evidence under s. 80 of the Evidence Act. The action of the Magistrate in examining V as to his confessional statement before there was any legal evidence on the record against him was illegal, and therefore the record of such examination could not be used in evidence against V. Inasmuch as the record of the statement of V was not admissible, secondary evidence thereof could not be given. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. VIRAN . . . I. L. R., 9 Mad., 224

If the provisions of these sections have not been fully complied with by the recording officer, the Court of Session cannot take evidence that the accused person duly made the statement recorded; and in cases where evidence can be taken, a Court of Session is not at liberty to treat a deposition, sent up with the record and made by the recording officer before the committing officer, to the effect that the accused person did in fact duly make before him the statement recorded, as evidence of that fact. recording of a confession or statement—Magistrate recording a confession and holding subsequent judicial inquiry.—Whether a confession made by a prisoner to a Magistrate be regarded as a statement under s. 164 or under s. 364 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, the terms of the law require that the record should be signed not only by the person who makes the confession or is under examination but also by the Magistrate and that, in addition thereto, there should be a certificate in the terms prescribed. Such a confession or statement to be admissible in evidence must strictly comply with the terms of the law. The defect in recording a confession may be remedied under s. 533, Criminal Procedure Code, by examining the Magistrate who recorded the confession. A confession freely made to a Magistrate and recorded under s. 164 of the Code of Criminal Procedure is admissible in evidence, and the fact that after the confession so recorded, the same Magistrate holds the subsequent judicial inquiry and commits the case to the Court of Session does not make the confession inadmissible on that ground. EMPRESS v. ANUNTARAM SINGH, I. L. R., 5 Calc., 954, explained and distinguished. A Magistrate may become disqualified from dealing with a case by reason of some previous action taken by him, but the character of the evidence and its admissibility cannot be affected by his subsequent conduct; or in other words, what is admissible in evidence cannot become inadmissible through the course subsequently taken by a Magistrate. *EMPRESS v. ment in Marathi. He also deposed that the statement was correctly recorded in English, and that each question and answer when recorded was interpreted to the accused in Marathi, and that the accused then made his mark at the end of the recorded statement. He further stated that there were at hand native subordinate officials of his Court who could have recorded the statement in Marathi, but that he himself had not sufficient knowledge of Marathi as to be able to read what was written by such a subordinate, or to satisfactorily check or test the correctness with which it represented the statement made by the accused. Held that, assuming that it was practicable to record the statement in Marathi and that consequently it was irregular with reference to s. 361 of the Code to record it in English, the statement was nevertheless admissible in evidence under s. 533, the irregularity not having injured the accused as to his defence on the merits. Jai Narayan Rai v. The Sessions Judge rejected the confession as inadmissible, as it did not bear the mark or signature of the accused, and, as there was no other reliable evidence to bring home the charge to the accused, he was acquitted. Held, reversing the order of acquittal, that though the record of the confession was admissible, parol evidence could be given of the terms of the confession, and those terms, when proved, might be admitted and used as evidence against the accused under s. 533 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act X of 1882). The accused was charged with the murder of the husband and in the course of the proceedings made certain statements to the police. They were then sent up by the police to a Magistrate for inquiry. He made those statements on the 26th of February, the 1st of March, and the 10th of March 1881 respectively, two of which were retracted on the 10th being a withdrawal of such evidence. He also made two statements on the 10th and 11th of March, the first of which was a confession and the second a withdrawal thereof. On the 10th of April he was granted a pardon and was thereafter treated as an approver in which capacity he gave evidence against A. He was then committed to the Court of Session to take his trial, he being sent up as an approver. In the Session Court he retracted from his deposition before the committing Magistrate, and was then and there treated as an accused person, and placed on his trial with the other accused, and the deposition already was put in as evidence. Both accused were convicted mainly on their confessions of A and B, and the statement of murder. Held that the conviction of A was valid, the Court of Session having had no jurisdiction to try him, as he was not committed to that Court by any competent Magistrate. Held that the conviction of A was also valid. (1) Because A's statement to the police was not admissible in evidence. (2) Because the statements on the 10th and 11th of March were not under the circumstances admissible in evidence, as he was not being legally tried jointly with him for the same offence. (3) That his deposition on the 10th of April was not admissible in evidence, because, apart from other reasons, A had no opportunity to cross-examine him. (4) Because A's confession under the circumstances was not a free and voluntary admission of guilt. Held, on the whole case, that independently of the admitted statements and confession there was not sufficient evidence.

167.—Admissibility in evidence of confession—Deputy Commissioner of Police in Calcutta—Letters Patent, 1865, cl. 26—Case certified by Advocate General—The prisoner, on his arrest, made a statement in the nature of a confession which was reduced into writing by one of the inspectors in whose custody the prisoner was, and subsequently signed and acknowledged by the prisoner in the presence of the Deputy Commissioner of Police at the police office, the Deputy Commissioner receiving and attesting the statement in his capacity as Magistrate and Justice of the Peace. At the trial of the prisoner at the Criminal Sessions of the High Court, this statement was tendered in evidence against him, and was admitted by the Judge, who overruled an objection on behalf of the prisoner that, under s. 25 of the Evidence Act, it was inadmissible. On a case certified by the Advocate General under cl. 26 of the Letters Patent, Held that the confession was, under s. 25 of the Evidence Act, not admissible in evidence. Per GARTH, C.J.—S. 26 of the Evidence Act is not to be read as qualifying the plain meaning of s. 25. In construing s. 25 the term "police officer" is not to be read in a technical sense, but in its more comprehensive and popular meaning. Per GARTH, C.J. (POSTIVEX, J., dissenting).—The Court which under that section is to decide upon the sufficiency of the evidence to support the conviction is, in a case coming before the Court and under s. 26 of the Letters Patent, the Court of review, not the Judge himself, of the evidence adduced at the trial. Per Curiam.—Apart from s. 167, the Court has power, in a case under cl. 26 of the Letters Patent, to review the whole case on the merits, and affirm or quash the conviction. *QUEEN v. After excluding evidence improperly admitted and put before the jury, the High Court found that the remaining evidence was not of such a character that a conviction might reasonably be based upon it. He also said that he had thrown down the girl's anklets at the scene of the murder, and would point them out. On the following day he accompanied the police officer to the place where the girl's body had been found, and pointed out the anklets. Held that such statements, being confessions, made to a police officer, whereby no fact was discovered, could not be proved against P. 91. ——— Confession made while in custody of police—Evidence Act, ss. 25, 27.—No judicial officer dealing with the provisions of s. 27 of Act I of 1873 should allow one word more to be deposed to by a police officer detailing a statement made to him by an accused, in consequence of which he discovered a fact, than is absolutely necessary to show how the fact that was discovered is connected with the accused so as in itself to be a relevant fact against him. S. 27 was not intended to let in a confession generally, but only such particular part of it as set the person to whom it was made in motion, and led to his ascertaining the fact or facts of which he gives evidence. EMPERESS v. PANCHAM, I. L. R., 4 All., 198; QUEEN-EMPERESS v. BABU LAL, I. L. R., 6 All., 509, discussed and commented on. Thus, when a police officer deposed that an accused had told him that he had

167—Admissibility in evidence of confession—Deputy Commissioner of Police in Calcutta—Letters Patent, 1865, cl. 26—Case certified by Advocate General.—The prisoner, on his arrest, made a statement in the nature of a confession which was reduced into writing by one of the inspectors in whose custody the prisoner was, and subsequently signed and acknowledged by the prisoner in the presence of the Deputy Commissioner of Police at the police office, the Deputy Commissioner receiving and attesting the statement in his capacity as Magistrate and Justice of the Peace. At the trial of the prisoner at the Criminal Sessions of the High Court, this statement was tendered in evidence against him, and admitted by the Judge, who overruled an objection on behalf of the prisoner that, under s. 25 of the Evidence Act, it was inadmissible. On a case certified by the Advocate General under cl. 26 of the Letters Patent,—Held that the confession was, under s. 25 of the Evidence Act, not admissible in evidence. Per GARTH, C.J.—S. 26 of the Evidence Act is not to be read as qualifying the plain meaning of s. 25. In construing s. 25 the term "police officer" is not to be read in a technical sense, but in its more comprehensive and popular meaning. Per GARTH, C.J. (PONTREX, J., doubting).—The Court which under that section is to decide upon the sufficiency of the evidence to support the conviction is, in a case coming before the Court and under s. 26 of the Letters Patent, the Court of review, not the Court below. Such decision is to be come to on being informed by the Judge's notes and, if necessary, by the Judge himself, of the evidence adduced at the trial. Per Curiam.—Apart from s. 167, the Court has power, in a case under cl. 26 of the Letters Patent, to review the whole case on the merits, and affirm or quash the conviction. *QUEEN v. Such a confession is not to be received or treated as evidence against the person making it, but simply as evidence on behalf of the other. The High Court, on a point of law as to the admissibility of rejected evidence, reserved under cl. 25 of the Letters Patent, 1865, and s. 101 of the High Court's Criminal Procedure Act (X of 1875), has power to review the whole case and determine whether the admission of the rejected evidence would have affected the result of the trial; and a conviction should not be reserved unless the admission of the rejected evidence ought to have

83. — Self-exculpatory statement to police officer in police custody—Re-trial.—A statement made to a police officer by an accused person while in the custody of the police, although intended to be made in self-exculpation and not as a confession, may be nevertheless an admission of a criminating circumstance, and, if so, under ss. 25 and 26 of the Evidence Act I of 1872, it cannot be proved against the accused. After excluding evidence improperly admitted and put before the jury, the High Court found that the remaining evidence was not of such a character that a conviction might reasonably be based upon it. It accordingly reversed the conviction and sentence of the accused, declining to order his re-trial. EMPRESS v. PANDHABINATH. I. L. R., 6 Bom., 84

84. — Statements of prisoner to police officer on being accused—Evidence Act, ss. 25, 26, 27.—P, accused of the murder of a girl, gave to a police officer a knife, saying it was the weapon with which he had committed the murder. He also said that he had thrown down the girl's anklets at the scene of the murder, and would point them out. On the following day he accompanied the police officer to the place where the girl's body had been found, and pointed out the anklets. Held that such statements, being confessions, made to a police officer, whereby no fact was discovered, could not be proved against P. It is immaterial whether such police officer be the officer investigating the case—the fact that such person is a police officer invalidates a confession. IN THE MATTER OF HIRAN MIYA. I. C. L. On re-examination the policeman so far altered the words stated to have been used by the prisoner as to substitute for the words at the time of the occurrence the words at the time, and on being asked if the prisoner had explained "what time," answered, "he said at the time I struck the deceased." This information was to the effect that the accused had stolen a cow and calf, and sold them to a particular person at a particular place. Held by the Full Bench (MAHMOOD, J., dissenting) that s. 27 of the Evidence Act is a proviso not only to s. 26, but also to s. 25; and that, therefore, so much of the information given by the accused to the police officer, whether amounting to a confession or not, as related distinctly to the facts thereby discovered, might be proved. *EMPRESS v. aware of it.—Held that the statement was inadmissible upon the ground that it would be most dangerous to extend the provisions of s. 27, and allow a police officer, who is investigating a case, to prove an information received from a person accused of an offence in the custody of a police officer, on the ground that a material fact was thereby discovered by him, when that fact was already known to another police officer. ADU SHIKDAR v. QUEEN-EMPRESS [I. L. R., 11 Calc., 635]

92. Confession while in custody of police—Evidence Act, ss. 25, 26, 27.—The accused were charged with theft of some jwari. During the police investigation they admitted before the police that they had taken the grain and concealed it in a jar, which they forthwith produced. The identity of the jwari recovered with that stolen was not proved to the satisfaction of the trying Magistrate, except by these admissions, and upon these admissions they were convicted of theft. Held that, as the prisoners themselves produced the jwari, it was by their own act, and not from any information given by them, that the discovery took place. S. 27 of the Evidence Act, therefore, did not apply; and, though the fact of the production of the property might be proved, the accompanying confession made to the police was inadmissible in evidence. *Empress v. 93. Evidence Act (I of 1872), ss. 25, 26—Admissibility of confession made to chowkidar—Retracted confession.—P, who was accused of the murder of his wife and was arrested by a chowkidar, was alleged to have made a confession to him of the crime in the presence of one D whose evidence was not accepted by the Judge. He subsequently, a few hours later, made a confession to the Magistrate detailing the account of the murder. Two days after he retracted his confession before the Magistrate, and alleged it had been made under police threats. Held that, after the view taken of the evidence of D, it would not be safe to act upon the confession alleged to be made to the chowkidar, but having regard to the circumstances of the case, the second confession was reliable. *EMPRESS v. In the course of the police investigation the accused was asked by the police where the property was. He replied that he had kept it, and would show it. He said he had buried the property in the fields. He then took the police to the spot where the property was concealed, and with his own hands disinterred the earthen pot in which the property was kept. He made a second statement when pointing out the spot to the effect that he had buried the property there. It was contended that those statements were inadmissible, having been made when the accused was in custody of the police. Held (1) that the above statements were clearly in the nature of a confession, as they suggested the inference that the prisoner committed the crime, and even if not intended by the accused as a confession of guilt, they were an admission of a criminal circumstance, and would form a very important part of the evidence against the accused, as showing that he had not come by the property honestly, and were, therefore, properly within the rule of exclusion in regard to confessions made by a person in custody of the police. (2) That neither of the above statements was admissible in evidence under explanation 1 of s. 8 of the Evidence Act, I of 1872, as evidence of the conduct of the accused. S. 8, so far as it admits a statement as included in the word "conduct," must be read in connection with ss. 25 and 26, and cannot admit a statement as evidence which would be shut out by those sections. (3) That the accused's statement, that he had buried the property in the fields, was admissible in evidence under s. 27 of the Evidence Act, as it set the police in motion and led to the discovery of the property. A statement is equally admissible under s. 27, whether the statement is made in such detail as to enable the police to discover the property themselves, or whether it be of such a nature as to require the assistance of the accused in discovering the exact spot where the property is concealed. *QUEEN-EMPRESS v. 111. ————— Confession made by person charged jointly with another for separate offences arising out of one transaction, admissibility of, as against the other.—In order to constitute an offence under s. 373 of the Penal Code, it is not necessary that the intention or knowledge of likelihood as to the employment of the minor for purposes of prostitution should be with reference to employment, either immediate or at some definite, and not very remote, future period, but an offence under the section is complete as soon as a girl is purchased with the guilty intention or knowledge of likelihood that she will, while still a minor under the age of 16 years, be employed for that purpose, although the point of time for such employment may be remote by reason of her physical incapacity for the purpose. H, the father of two girls, twins, about a year old, sold one of them to K, a prostitute, for Rs. 9, [and within ten days of such sale also sold her the other for Rs. 14. K was shown to have previously purchased another child whom she had brought up from her infancy, and who was then living with her and leading the life of a prostitute. Both H and K made confessions as to the guilty knowledge and intention with which the sale of the two children was made. K's confession was made within two hours after her arrest, and immediately thereafter she was committed to hajat for seven days. On the seventh day, on being brought up for trial before the Deputy Magistrate, she retracted her confession and assigned an innocent reason for her purchase of the girl. H and K were tried jointly, H being charged with an offence under s. 372, viz., selling the girls for the purpose of prostitution, and K with an offence under s. 373, viz., buying for the same purpose. Neither was charged with abetting the other. The two confessions were used as evidence. Held that, having regard to the circumstances under which the confession of K was given and retracted, it was open to suspicion, and could not safely be acted upon, and that the confession made by H was not legally admissible against her, as they were not being tried jointly for the same offence. *DEPUTY LEGAL REMEMBRANCE v. Where a re-grant is made to a former owner, the new title will depend entirely on the terms of the re-grant; and if such re-grant is made for life only, no suit can be maintained to rectify an alleged mistake, and for declaration of an absolute title according to the tenor of the sunnuds by which the property was held under the old dynasty and prior to the confiscation. *MULKA JEHAN SAHIBA v. 3. — Property standing and registered in name of one party but admitted to belong to another—Registration for fiscal purposes.—In Oudh, before its annexation to the British rule, a Rajah was a talukhdar of a large talukh. A younger branch of his family had a separate mehal in the possession of A wholly distinct from, and independent of, the talukh the Rajah possessed as representing the elder branch of the family. The Oudh Government for fiscal purposes included A's mehal with the Rajah's talukh, so that the Rajah as the elder branch of the family represented A's mehal at the Court at Lucknow, notwithstanding that A remained in undisturbed possession as absolute owner, paying through the Rajah for his mehal a proportion of the jumma fixed on the talukh. This relation between the Rajah and A subsisted up to the time of the annexation of Oudh by the British Government. While the Government was making a settlement with the land-owners, and A was about to apply for a distinct settlement of his mehal, he, and after him his widow, was induced by the Rajah not to do so, the Rajah in letters fully recognising A's absolute right to the mehal. After the suppression of the rebellion in Oudh, and the Government had recognized the talukhdari tenure with its rights, a provisional settlement of the talukh including A's mehal was made with the Rajah; but before a saad was granted to him, Government confiscated half his estates for concealment of arms. The Rajah suppressed the fact of the trust relation of the mehal of A, and contrived that it should be included in the half part of the estate the Government had confiscated, which mehal the Government as a reward granted to Oudh loyalists. A's widow brought a suit against the Government and the grantees for the restoration of the mehal and for a settlement. The Chief Commissioner held that, as the Rajah was the registered owner of the mehal of A included in his talukh, it had been properly forfeited. Such finding reversed on appeal on the ground that A was the acknowledged cestui que trust of the Rajah, and that A's widow as equitable owner was not affected as between her and the Government by the act of confiscation of half the Rajah's talukh. THUKRANI SOOKRAJ KOOWAR v. GOVERNMENT . . . 14 Moore's I. A., 112

4. — Confiscation and restoration of lands in Oudh in 1858 and of immovables in Lucknow—Gift—Title.—On a claim for a share in property consisting of (a) immovables in Lucknow and (b) revenue-paying land in a district of Oudh, the defence was title by gift, with possession, from the former owner, a member of the family through which the plaintiff claimed. As to the immovables in Lucknow, they having been included in the confiscation which, having followed the capture of the town in 1858, was subsequently abandoned without any intention on the part of Government to make a re-grant in favour of any person, the result in regard to the present question was the same as if no such event had occurred. The other property (b) came under the general confiscation of Oudh lands in 1858, and also was restored through subsequent settlement operations in which the final order, relating to the land in question, was to the effect that settlement should be made with the "heirs" of the previous owner. Held that the above did not preclude the defence of exclusive title by gift; the order last mentioned, on its true construction, only designating all those who might take under and through the previous owner (deceased at the time of settlement), without excluding any claimant, save those who might claim adversely to such title. The Government did not, in the settlement which followed the confiscation, make any arbitrary or wholly new re-distribution of estates, or proceed as if the existence of previous titles (although they had been brought to an end) was to go for nothing. The enquiry in most cases was as to who would have been entitled had there been no confiscation. As to both classes of property, the gift was maintained. JEHAN KADR v. AFSAR BAHU BEGUM

22. — Moral consideration—Promise to pay at majority debt during infancy—Promise to pay barred debt.—The general rule of law is that a consideration merely moral is not valuable consideration, such as would support a promise. But there are instances of enforceable promises which formerly were referred to the now exploded principle of previous moral obligation, and which are still held to be binding, although that principle has been rejected. Amongst these instances is a promise after full age to pay a debt contracted during infancy, and a promise in renewal of a debt barred by the law of limitation. The efficacy of such promises is now based upon the principle that where the consideration was originally beneficial to the party promising, and he is protected from liability by some provision of the statute or common law meant for his advantage, he may renounce the benefit of that law, and if he promises to pay the debt, he is bound by the law to perform that promise. D executed a razinama in favour of the plaintiff on 20th August 1868 transferring certain lands to the latter. The plaintiff, after giving the usual habalat to the Collector, was put in possession of the lands. On the 7th April 1869 P obtained a money decree against D, and on the 3rd July 1869 attached the lands as belonging to D. Held that a decree of 1865, which plaintiff held against D, though time barred, in 1868, was (being then still unsatisfied) a good consideration for D's razinama in 1868 in plaintiff's favour. TILACKCHAND HINDRUMAL v. The plaintiff, who was the agent and banker of an Ajmir constituent, on its acceptance by the drawee, credited the Ajmir constituent with the amount as of the date when the hundi would become payable. In a suit against the first indorser,—Held that, as between the Ajmir constituent and the first indorser (the defendant), the giving by the Ajmir constituent to the defendant of another hundi, which was never presented in Bombay for acceptance or payment, was a consideration for the indorsement by the defendant to the Ajmir constituent of the hundi sent by the latter to the plaintiff and sued on by him. SUGANCHAND SHIVDAS v. 25. ————— Contract to pay maintenance.—Plaintiff was brought from his native place by defendant's adoptive father, D, who had no one to inherit his property, except his daughter's daughter, with a view to give her to plaintiff in marriage, and confer on him all he possessed. After marriage D's grand-daughter died; but owing to defendant's being adopted, plaintiff was deprived of all the cherished hopes of his wife's future inheritance. Accordingly the adoptive mother and defendant executed a moshairah-patra in plaintiff's favour, promising him, in consideration of the above facts, a monthly allowance for maintenance. The present suit was to recover a balance due of this allowance. Held that, whether the English law was applied, or the principles of justice, equity, and good conscience, the deed disclosed a good and sufficient consideration for the promise to pay, and defendant was bound to pay the stipulated allowance. SHIB NUNDUN ROY v. 27. ————— Contract to grow indigo—Extinguishment of original debt which was the consideration.—Where a riyat, in consideration of an advance of money, has stipulated to grow indigo for a certain number of years, the contract is not void as being without consideration because, during the period it had to run, the debt due from the riyat is extinguished by the delivery of indigo leaves. The contract is one entire contract upon one entire consideration, and a contract which was at its commencement based upon a valid consideration cannot become void for want of consideration by any change whatever in the situation of the parties. LEDLIE v. GOPAL MUNDUL 17 W. R., 91

28. ————— Appointment of agent—Remedy in case of revocation of authority—Suit for specific performance.—The defendant, by an agreement in the nature of a letter of attorney, constituted the plaintiff and his descendants the hereditary agents of the defendant, gave him authority to collect the rents of his share in an inam village, and promised to pay him an annual salary out of the rents. Held that, as between the parties and during their lifetime, the appointment was valid and binding, whether or not any valuable consideration passed; the mere acceptance of the office by the plaintiff being a sufficient consideration for the appointment. If the defendant had revoked the agency improperly, the remedy lay, under ordinary circumstances, in a suit by the plaintiff for damages for breach of contract. Where, however, the plaintiff chose to sue for specific performance and demanded arrears of salary,—Held that, without a valuable consideration for the defendant's promise, the agreement passed by him to the plaintiff would be nudum pactum, and the plaintiff would not be entitled to recover, except for work and services actually rendered. VISHNUCHARAYA v. 29. ————— Promise to refrain from suing—Suit found to be barred.—Where, by reason of a promise, the promisee refrains from bringing a suit which, but for the promise, he might have brought, there is good consideration for the promise, but, if at the time of the promise no remedy remained to the promisee by reason of limitation, there is no valid consideration, and the promise cannot be enforced at law. PETER v. 30. ————— Want of consideration—Decree, Adjustment of, out of Court—Civil Procedure Code (XIV of 1882), s. 258—Contract.—The plaintiff held a decree against the defendant, and in execution of it attached the defendant's property. A compromise was then made by which the defendant executed to the plaintiff the bond sued upon, in satisfaction of the judgment-debt. The compromise, however, was not certified to the Court.

CONSIDERATION—concluded.

Held that the bond was without consideration. The adjustment of the decree, not having been certified to the Court, was not binding on the plaintiff, and, therefore, constituted no valid consideration. PANDURANG RAMCHANDRA C. NARAYAN

It does not appear from the statement of the case whether or not the offence was committed "in view or presence of the Court" and taken "cognizance of the same day." From the judgment it would appear that it was not, and this must form the ground for the decision; for offences under s. 175, Penal Code, are expressly mentioned in s. 450 of the Criminal Procedure Code, and if committed "in view or presence of the Court," and taken "cognizance of the same day," the Magistrate would apparently have had ex-ante power to try the offence and commit the accused as he did.

5. ———— Duration of contract—Effect of recital in regard to control over operative words.—The parties during several years had transactions consisting of the deliveries of produce by the defendants to the plaintiff's agent, under advances, upon separate contracts, specifying prices, and of consignments by the defendants through the plaintiffs. A "purchase account" and an "interest account" kept between them resulted in a "general account," and in 1872 a large sum was due thereon to the plaintiffs, to whom, in 1873, the defendants sent letters mortgaging property with instruments of title accompanying. In the beginning of 1874 the parties entered into a written agreement, which described the balance due in respect of previous advances as the "block account," comprising also an "interest account," and the transactions proceeded. The intention was shown that the advances should be liquidated "by returns," but the only date mentioned from which an inference could be drawn as to the intended duration of the arrangement between the parties show at 30th June 1875. In this suit, brought in December 1875, it was contended that the right construction of the agreement of 1874 required that it should continue to subsist (unless rescinded either by mutual agreement or on breach of its stipulations by one party justifying its rescission by the other) until the liquidation of the balance by returns; at all events, as regarded the "block account." In order to the working of an agreement for a liquidation in such a way, it would have been necessary to imply obligations, for which no express provision had been made; nothing, for instance, having been fixed as to the extent, or duration, of the business, or as to the rates at which produce was to be offered or accepted. Held that such provisions could not now be supplied, and that the stipulations as to the "block account" were binding only during the continuance of the arrangement for the conduct of the business by the parties, such arrangement being terminable at will, after the 30th June 1875. The letters of 1873, and the documents of title deposited with them, were held to constitute a security for the general balance due from the defendants to the plaintiffs, and not only a security for advances on certain of the contracts referred to in a paragraph in the nature of a recital; for, the latter was not necessarily repugnant to the wider construction, and the operative words were wide enough to apply to all the transactions between the parties. The construction of an ambiguous stipulation in a written agreement may be governed or qualified by a recital; but, if the intention is clearly to be collected from the operative words, that intention is not to be defeated or controlled because it may go beyond what is expressed in the recital. MARGAR v. It appeared that no mention had been made about the "flies" in a conversation which subsequently took place between the parties during the progress of the manufacture of the tents. Held that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover an extra price on account of "flies." LAUDER v. Subsequently the defendant contracted to sell to the plaintiffs these 90,000 bags "at H21-3 per 100 bags, delivery from October to March 15,000 each month, buyers to pay difference cash against delivery order on Mills." In August the defendant made out in the plaintiffs' favour a delivery order directing the mills to deliver 90,000 bags on receiving payment for the same at H21-3 per 100 bags, and on the same day sent to the plaintiffs a bill showing the amount of difference payable to him by them. 15. ————— Breach of contract—“Ex a certain ship.”—By a contract entered into between the plaintiffs and defendant, the plaintiffs agreed to sell certain goods ex a specific ship to the defendant, the goods to be taken delivery of within forty-five days, and ten days to be allowed for inspection, and claiming allowance for any damaged goods, the defendant to take the risk of damage from the date of the contract. The period for taking delivery and for inspection dated from the 13th May. The plaintiffs did not receive the whole of the goods until 16th of June, and therefore were not ready to perform their contract by submitting them for inspection within the specified time: the defendant did not call upon them to do so. In a suit for breach of the contract by the defendant in not accepting the goods,—Held that the plaintiffs not being in a position to complete the contract, no cause of action had arisen. Held, on appeal, that the goods ought to have been ready for inspection within the ten days stipulated, and the plaintiffs, not having shown that they were ready and willing so to perform the contract, had no right of action notwithstanding that the defendant never, in fact, called on them to deliver the goods for inspection. The words “ex a certain ship” must be taken to mean that the goods are really landed, and not in course of being landed, and therefore, independently of the question of the necessity on the part of the plaintiffs to show their readiness to perform their part of the contract, the defendant was not bound to take goods on board ship, in respect of which, if the contract were binding upon him, he would have been bound to take the risk of any damage or loss to the goods on board ship, or in the course of landing. *ROBERTSON GLADSTONE & Co. v. Goods to be alongside in time to be all taken in on or before the second day after notice that steamer is ready for cargo; otherwise difference of freight at market rate to be payable on demand as liquidated damages,” etc. On the 29th May defendant wrote saying he would be glad to know the name and probable date of arrival of the steamer. On the 3rd June the plaintiffs replied declaring the S.S. County of York against the engagement, and adding, in a postscript, that the steamer would be ready to load on or about the 12th instant. The S.S. County of York arrived in Bombay on the 10th June, but from unforeseen circumstances had not a berth in the dock and was not ready to load until the 23rd instant. In the meantime, on the 18th June, the defendant repudiated the contract on the ground that, having been led by the plaintiffs to expect that the ship would be ready to load on the 12th instant, he had made telegraphic arrangements on that footing, and the ship not being ready he was compelled to ship his goods by other steamers, in order to fulfil his engagements. The plaintiffs accordingly re-let the freight on defendant's account, and brought this suit for the loss incurred in so doing. Held that the plaintiffs were entitled to succeed, for that nothing had occurred to alter the original contract, which gave them the whole of June in which to provide a steamer. The statement made by the plaintiffs on the 3rd of June (in answer to the defendant's enquiries as to the probable date of the arrival of the steamer), that the steamer would be ready to load on or about the 12th instant, was not a promise, but a mere expression of opinion. The question of estoppel did not arise. On the 22nd June the plaintiffs gave their shippers, amongst others the defendant, a notice to the following effect: “As the County of York will be in dock to-morrow ready to receive cargo, we have to request that your cargo be down not later than Wednesday, the 24th instant, etc.” Quære—Whether this was a “notice that the steamer was ready for cargo” as required by the contract. *BERTS, CRAIG & Co. v. 17. ————— Custom or usage qualifying contract—Shipment, Meaning of.—On 18th April 1890, the defendant signed a contract (No. 3053) to buy from the plaintiffs 25 bales grey dhooties, “June shipment, in four lots, with an interval of four weeks.” These goods were not supplied, as they could not be obtained at the price limited. On 24th September 1890, the defendant gave the plaintiffs an order at an increased limit of price in the following terms: “Please telegraph your Manchester friends to purchase on my account 25 bales grey dhooties relating to No. 3053 at an all-round advance of 1d. per pair on original limits for November, December, January shipments, in three monthly lots, about 8 bales to be shipped in each month.” This order was accepted, and the goods were shipped as follows:—6 bales were banded to the carriers (the S. and N. W. Railway Co.) in Manchester on the 28th November 1890, and were shipped at Birkenhead on the 9th December 1890; 6 bales were banded to the same carriers on the 4th December 1890, and were shipped on the 13th December 1890; 10 bales were banded to same carriers on the 23rd December and 1 bala on the 24th December, and these 11 bales were shipped on the 6th January 1891. The defendant refused to accept the goods. He contended that the documents of 18th April and 24th September should be read together, and that the final contract was for November, December, January shipments, in three monthly lots, at intervals of four weeks. He also contended that the shipment on the 9th December 1890 was a late shipment, and that he was not, therefore, bound to accept the goods under the contract. As to this last contention, the plaintiffs alleged that by the custom of Bombay in the case of contracts made with members of the Native Piece-goods Association, the date of the carrier's weight note was to be regarded as the date of shipment, and that, under such a contract as the one in question, delivery to the Railway Company or other inland carrier was equivalent to shipment. This custom, it was alleged, originated in consequence of the above Association having agreed that all piece-goods ordered out by its members should be conveyed to Bombay by certain lines of steamers only, and by no others. It was stated that, unless some such custom existed, it would

18. —Sale of goods—Non-acceptance of goods—Contract for goods to be ordered from Europe—Performance of contract by offer of goods of same description not ordered out for purchasers, but bought by vendors in Bombay.—On the 7th August the defendants commissioned the plaintiffs to order out from Europe 500 cwt. copper braisers, September shipment, assorted in the manner set out in the indent signed by the defendants, "free on board, Bombay harbour," at the rate of £53-5 per ton. On the same day the plaintiffs sent a reply to the defendants' order in their usual form partly typographed and partly written, as follows:—
"We have the pleasure to inform you that we have received a telegram from our Manchester friends, and so far as regards the exports therein named, we learn that they advise the following purchase, which will be invoiced to you at your limit, subject to confirmation by letter as usual. Order this day hundred bundles of copper braisers, at £53-5 per ton, free on board, Bombay." As a fact, however, no telegram had been received from the plaintiffs' Manchester friends, and the plaintiffs had not learned that they had advised the purchase referred to in their reply. The acceptance of the plaintiffs' offer was really based on the plaintiffs' view of the probability of the copper market. The agents in England were unable to carry out the order, and it remained unexecuted. On the 27th October, the plaintiffs, having negotiated with one Naga Ducha to take over from him a September doek, and remained at the bottom in twenty-three feet of water for sixteen hours, when she was raised and her cargo discharged. The coal was pronounced unfit for a voyage to Bombay. Extensive repairs to the ship were found necessary, and she was useless until the 6th October. The plaintiff sued for damages for non-delivery of the coal. The defendants relied on the last clause of the agreement as exempting them from liability. Held that the defendants were not liable. The Rubens was lost for the purpose for which she was required under the contract, viz., for a voyage in fulfilment of a July-August shipment, and the defendants, having proved that the coal had been duly shipped on board the vessel so lost, were exempt under the last clause of the agreement from liability for non-delivery. It was argued that until the name of the carrying ship was declared to the plaintiff as purchaser, neither the ship nor the coal was assigned to the contract, and, therefore, the loss could not be within the contract. Held that, if such a condition was intended, it should have been expressed. The appropriation of certain goods to the contract by the vendors (the defendants), the placing them on board the Rubens, and doing all in their power to despatch them to Bombay in fulfilment of the contract were enough to entitle them to the protection of the last clause of the agreement. NUSSERVANJI JEWANGIE KHAMBATA v. 20. ——— Contract to sell from 2,500 to 3,500 tons of coal—Breach of contract—Non-delivery of coal—Damages.—On the 18th May 1893 the defendants sold to the plaintiffs "the entire cargo of coal per steam-ship—, May shipment via canal, amounting to 2,500 to 3,500 tons or thereabouts." The defendants intended a certain steamship called the Ethelaida, which carried a cargo of 3,395 tons of coal, to satisfy this contract. This ship, however, did not load in May, and consequently her cargo did not fulfil the condition of the contract. From the day of making the contract, the plaintiffs had been urging the defendants to declare the name of the vessel in which the coal contracted for was to be shipped. On the 14th June, the defendants by letter informed the plaintiffs that the "vessels chartered for their May shipment" had not loaded in May, and they offered to cancel the contract. On the same day, however, and about an hour after the plaintiffs had received this letter, and before they had replied to it, the defendants sent them another letter as follows:—"We have now been informed that the boat our coals have been loaded in is the Ethelaida, and we now beg to declare it." Correspondence subsequently passed between the parties. On the 15th June, the plaintiffs wrote to the defendants as follows:—"Please inform us finally what you intend. In case the Ethelaida is declared as bringing coals sold to us under contract of 18th May, please let us know the date of her sailing, landing, and the particular date of her arrival in Bombay, and also how much coal she has on board." On the following day the defendants replied: "The Ethelaida is the boat chartered for the cargo we sold you..... We do not positively know whether she commenced to load in May or June. She was expected to load about 3,300 tons." On the 28th June, the defendants wrote definitely stating that the "Ethelaida did not load in May." The plaintiffs refused her cargo, and sent in a statement of their alleged loss calculated upon 3,300 tons, the amount stated to be the cargo of the Ethelaida in the defendants' letter of the 14th June. Held that the damages must be calculated upon a cargo of 2,500 tons only. The Ethelaida was never incorporated into the contract. The defendants declared her against the contract; but, after they had informed the plaintiffs that she had not loaded in May, the plaintiffs refused her cargo. The contract, which the defendants failed to fulfil, was a contract to deliver the Ethelaida cargo, which they were always ready and willing to deliver. The option rested with the defendants whether they would deliver 2,500 or 3,500 tons, or any intermediate quantity, and upon no principle could the Court exercise that option for them and declare that they were liable to deliver more than a cargo of 2,500 tons. CURSETJI JEWANGIE KHAMBATA v. 21. ——— Suit for non-delivery.— Clause exempting from liability in case of loss of carrying ship—Loss of ship—Declaration of ship after date of loss—Appropriation of goods after goods lost.—The defendants by a contract dated 10th January 1896 sold 2,500 tons of coal to the plaintiff of the February and March shipment to be delivered in Bombay. No ship was named in the contract, which contained the following clause:—"In the event of the ship being lost, this contract shall be null and void." February and March shipments ordinarily arrive in Bombay on or before the 30th April following. All of the coal contracted for was duly delivered by the defendants except 1,376 tons, which still remained to be delivered to the plaintiffs. By a letter dated 25th April 1896 addressed to the plaintiff, the defendants declared the S.S. Eastby Abbey as the ship carrying the said 1,376 tons of coal remaining due under the contract. There was no evidence of any appropriation of coal on board the Eastby Abbey to the purpose of the above contract prior to this declaration. It subsequently transpired that the Eastby Abbey had run on a reef in the Red Sea on the 16th April and so seriously damaged that being taken to Suez (where such of her cargo as had not been thrown overboard was sold) she was found unable to proceed to Bombay, and she returned to England for repairs. The plaintiff sued the defendants for non-delivery of 1,376 tons of coal. The defendants pleaded that, the ship having been lost, they were exempt from liability under the above clause in the contract. Held that the defendants were liable for the non-delivery of the coal. There having been previously to the declaration of the ship no appropriation of the coal on board to the purposes of the contract, the exemption clause did not apply. Semble—In case of a contract containing such an

On appeal the District Judge modified the decree by fixing the rate of damages at Rs-10-0 for each garce of salt. Held on appeal that A was not competent to assign his interest in the contract to the second plaintiff, since the contract was based on personal considerations, and that the assignment of it as an executory contract was invalid without the consent of the defendants. *Farrow v. 25. — Sale of goods—Special place of delivery “to be mentioned hereafter.”—Assessment of damages—Contract Act (IX of 1872), ss. 49, 94, and 231.—Bought and sold notes of Purneah indigo seed provided: “The seed to be delivered at any place in Bengal in March and April 1891.” It was added, “the place of delivery to be mentioned hereafter.” The buyer made mention of this on the 20th March 1891 in a letter to the broker for both parties. This letter, specifying Howrah railway station as the place, was forwarded to the vendor, who replied that he would deliver at his own godowns at Sulkea. This the buyer declined. The vendor and the buyer each insisting that the place named by him was the proper one for delivery, the buyer refused to accept at the vendor's godowns, or at any place other than Howrah station. The vendor remained for a certain time ready and willing to deliver at his godowns at Sulkea; and the buyer not accepting delivery at that place, the vendor declared the contract cancelled. The buyer then sued him for breach of the contract to deliver at the place mentioned by the buyer. On the question whether the vendor had discharged his liability by readiness and willingness to deliver at his own godowns at Sulkea,—Held that the choice of place given originally by the contract to the buyer, subject only to the express contract that it must be in Bengal, and to the implied one that it must be reasonable, had not been converted, by the words about “mention” thereafter, into a deferred question to be settled by a subsequent agreement. The buyer, according to the contract already subsisting, had the right to fix the place. There was a special promise in the contract as to the delivery, and to complete its terms nothing more was required than a mention by the buyer of a reasonable place within Bengal. This had been made by him. The contract therefore did

In January 1895 an import duty of five per cent. was imposed by Government on the yarn. The defendant thereupon declined to supply the dhottars unless the plaintiff paid the duty in addition to the contract price. Held that under s. 10 of Act VIII of 1894 the defendant could call on the plaintiff to pay the duty which he had paid on the yarn, that is, he could add so much to the contract price as would be equivalent to the duty which he himself had paid. The question was whether the dhottars supplied to the plaintiff were actually made out of yarn on which duty had been paid by the defendant. *TRIKAMTAL JAMNADAS v. KAMDAS DALPATRAM, [I. L. Offer of performance—Tender of railway receipts endorsed in blank—Goods tendered—Goods subject to demurrage or freight—Duty of seller.—P agreed to sell, and F to buy, certain goods to be delivered to F in April-May 1897. The contract of sale contained (inter alia) the following clauses: “(10) The goods to be tendered fully 48 hours before the expiration of the present term of 72 hours granted by the railway company in order to enable buyers to weigh, sample, and inspect the same; and the delivery not to be considered complete until the samples have been refracted and examined, and any dispute about quality, etc., settled. (11) If railway receipt be tendered, such to be handed to buyers 48 hours before the goods are liable to demurrage under the present term of 72 hours granted by the railway company.” P, not having before the 31st May goods of his own to meet the contract, arranged with H for certain goods of H to be delivered under it, and tendered to F. On that day, certain railway receipts, which had been endorsed in blank by H in respect of the said goods, were tendered to F. F was ready to pay for the goods; but, before tendering the price, he insisted upon an endorsement of the railway receipts by H to P and by P to himself. P was unable to point out the goods to be delivered under the contract, nor could he indicate the wagon-numbers. P refused to procure the endorsements required by F, and thereupon F declined to take delivery as proposed, though he tendered the price in defendants be directed to deliver to the plaintiffs the salt collected during 1886; (2) that defendants 2, 4, and 7 should be held liable for any damages plaintiffs might suffer through a fall in the price of salt. The Court of first instance, having held that the contract contained seven separate and distinct contracts, each defendant having contracted with reference to his own pans only, decreed (1) that the seven defendants should pay damages at the rate of Rs-12-0 per garce for the salt collected by each during the years 1886 to 1889, leaving the quantity to be ascertained in the execution of the decree; (2) that the defendant should pay the plaintiffs costs. On appeal the District Judge modified the decree by fixing the rate of damages at Rs-10-0 for each garce of salt. Held on appeal that A was not competent to assign his interest in the contract to the second plaintiff, since the contract was based on personal considerations, and that the assignment of it as an excentory contract was invalid without the consent of the defendants. *Farrow v. 25. Sale of goods—Special place of delivery “to be mentioned hereafter”—Assessment of damages—Contract Act (IX of 1872), ss. 49, 94, and 231.—Bought and sold notes of Puruah indigoseed provided: “These seed to be delivered at any place in Bengal in March and April 1891.” It was added, “the place of delivery to be mentioned hereafter.” The buyer made mention of this on the 20th March 1891 in a letter to the broker for both parties. This letter, specifying Howrah railway station as the place, was forwarded to the vendor, who replied that he would deliver at his own godowns at Sulka. This the buyer declined, which goods at Sulka. 3,395 tons of coal. The vendor and the buyer each insisting that the place named by him was the proper one for delivery, or at any place other than at the vendor's godowns, or at any place other than Howrah station. The vendor remained for a certain time ready and willing to deliver at his godowns at Sulka; and the buyer not accepting delivery at that place, the vendor declared the contract cancelled. The buyer then sued him for breach of the contract to deliver at the place mentioned by the buyer. On the question whether the vendor had discharged his liability by readiness and willingness to deliver at his own godowns at Sulka, —Held that the choice of place given originally by the contract that it must be subject only to the express contract that it must be in Bengal, and to the implied one that it must be reasonable, had not been converted, by the words about “mention” thereafter, into a deferred question to be settled by a subsequent agreement. The buyer, according to the contract already subsisting, had the right to fix the place. There was a special promise in the contract as to the delivery, and to complete its terms nothing more was required than a mention by the buyer of a reasonable place within Bengal. This had been made by him. The contract therefore did not fall within s. 94 of the Indian Contract Act (IX of 1872) dealing with cases where there has been no special promise as to delivery, and fixing the place of production as the place for delivery, but rather resembled what was contemplated in s. 49. 26. Contract to supply goods at fixed price—Duty imposed on material subsequently to date of contract—Liability to supply goods—Indian Tariff Act (VIII of 1894), s. 10.—On 2nd November 1894 the defendant contracted to supply the plaintiff with a certain quantity of dhootars made of European or Egyptian yarn No. 80 at the rate of 225 pairs each month for a period of one year. In January 1895 an import duty of five per cent. was imposed by Government on the yarn. The defendant thereupon declined to supply the dhootars unless the plaintiff paid the duty in addition to the contract price. Held that under s. 10 of Act VIII of 1894 the defendant could call on the plaintiff to pay the duty which he had paid on the yarn, that is, he could add so much to the contract price as would be equivalent to the duty which he himself had paid. The question was whether the dhootars supplied to the plaintiff were actually made out of yarn on which duty had been paid by the defendant. *TRIKAMAL JAMNADAS v. KALIDAS DALPATRAM, [I. L. The Paris firm were agents for certain manufacturers of zinc. The plaintiff, a Bombay merchant, ordered out 48 casks of zinc sheets through the defendants' firm in Bombay by an indent in the following form:—"I hereby request you to instruct your agents to purchase for me (if possible) the under-mentioned goods on my account and risk upon the terms stated below." Such terms, inter alia, limited the price of the goods and the time within which the shipments were to be made. Later, the plaintiff consented to increase his limit of price. The defendants, having communicated with their Paris firm, wrote to the plaintiff as follows:—"We have the pleasure to inform you that our home firm has reported by wire concerning your esteemed order as follows:—"Placed at your increased limit." Subsequently the plaintiff was informed by the defendants that the manufacturers being full with orders, the zinc sheets would not be ready for shipment as soon as had been expected; and he was asked whether he agreed to give an extension of time, or desired to cancel the indent. Simultaneously the plaintiff wrote that the contract time had been exceeded, and that he would buy similar goods in Bombay on the defendants' account. This the plaintiff did, and brought this action to recover the difference in price as damages on account of the defendants having failed to perform their contract for the delivery of 48 casks of zinc sheets. Held

Several years after, W entered into negotiations with third parties for the sale of the concern to which the property was annexed, but not being able to come to terms with them, he broke off the negotiation, and the property was subsequently leased to others. Upon this the reversioners sued to have the property conveyed to them. Held that W's promise not to alienate the property, coupled with the promise that he would personally retain possession, amounted to an undertaking which was violated by what had taken place. 41. ——— Agreement for permission to quarry—License, Non-renewal of—Implied condition.—By an agreement (in renewal of similar agreements for the two previous years) dated the 3rd September 1888, the defendant agreed to pay the plaintiff 'rent' for a piece of hilly ground at the rate of Rs329 per month for one year, during which time the defendant was to be allowed to blast stones and carry on the work of quarrying to the extent of seven crow-bars, such quarrying to be done at such places as the plaintiff had pointed out, or should choose to point out, from time to time. The rent to be paid was arrived at on a calculation of Rs47 per crow-bar, and was to be payable whether defendant employed the seven crow-bars or less. The defendant by the sixth clause of the agreement further undertook as follows:—"As regards the police arrangement and other expenses at the time of blasting stones, and obtaining an order or license, etc., and as to any other kind of expenses, risk, and responsibility, all these are upon me. I will duly pay you at the rate of Rs329 per month clear until the fixed time." The defendant was a stone contractor, and had been employed in this work of quarrying all his life, and for the previous two years on this very spot, and was well aware that blasting could not be carried on without a license from the authorities, which was revocable at any time, and required renewal annually. At the time of the agreement the defendant was in possession of a license, which expired on the 31st December 1888. After that date the authorities refused to renew the license on the ground that the quarry, where operations were being carried on, was surrounded by houses on all sides, and the defendant thereupon refused to continue the payment of the monthly rent of Rs329. The plaintiff accordingly brought this suit in the Small Cause Court for three months' rent at the above rate. Held, looking at the nature of the contract, that it must be taken to have been the intention of the parties to it that the monthly sum of Rs329 should only be payable so long as quarrying was permitted by the authorities, and that there was no unconditional contract to pay Rs329 in all events in cl. 6 of the agreement or elsewhere. *Taylor v. nected with the person with whom a contract is made form a material element of the contract, it may well be that such a contract on that ground alone is one which cannot be assigned without the promisor's consent so as to entitle the assignee to sue him on it. Sterens v. Benning, 1 K. and J., 168, referred to. By an agreement in writing, dated 13th December 1882, and executed in favour of M D and H D, who were the proprietors of an indigo concern, the defendant R agreed to sow indigo, taking the seed and tandi from M D and H D's concern, on four bighas of land out of his holding selected, measured, and prepared by M D and H D or their amlah; and when the indigo was fit for weeding, "to weed, reweeded, and turn it up to the extent necessary according to the directions of the amlah of the concern;" and when the indigo was fit for reaping, to "reap and load it on carts according to the directions of the amlah of the concern;" and "if any portion of the said indigo land" was "in the judgment of the amlah of the concern found bad," in lieu thereof to get some other land in his holding measured, and "on the land so measured in Bysack" to "sow Bhaddon crops only, which will be reaped in Bhadur." The defendant also agreed not to sow on the land measured any crop that might "cause obstacle to the cultivation of indigo," and, if he did so, "the amlah of the concern" should "be at liberty to destroy such crop," and he should not "oppose the destruction thereof, nor sue in the Courts, Civil or Criminal, for destruction of the same." As regards a breach of any condition, it was provided: "If I or my heirs depart from the conditions of this indigo engagement directly or indirectly or in any way neglect to cultivate or do not cultivate indigo, I or they shall pay to the above-named M D and H D damages for the same from my or their person and property and shall raise no plea or objection." In 1886, M D and H D assigned the entire benefit of this agreement to the plaintiff. In a suit by the plaintiff against the defendant for damages on account of his alleged failure to cultivate indigo for the plaintiff's concern in accordance with the terms of the agreement of the 13th December 1882,—Held that the agreement must be construed as one which had been entered into by the defendant with reference to the personal position, circumstances, and qualifications of M D and H D and their amlah; and that therefore it was not assignable so as to give the assignee a right to sue upon it in his own name as for a breach of contract. TOOMEY v. But when a sale, so as to pass an interest, requires certain formal steps, and nothing turns upon the intention of the parties, no inference against a concluded agreement can be drawn from the non-completion of formalities which are not of their selection. The parties to a snit executed a written agreement, which was duly registered, whereby the plaintiff agreed to accept the property of the defendant, specified in the agreement, in adjustment of the said snit. The agreement was not recorded under s. 98, Act VIII of 1859. The plaintiffs stipulated that they would make no sales of goods of the same description to others before the 1st December 1881. The goods arrived in Calcutta between the 4th and 24th November 1881. On the 15th August the plaintiffs entered into other contracts with other buyers for the sale of the same description of goods at a lower price than that at which they had sold to the defendant, these contracts being on terms that the goods were not to arrive in Calcutta until after the 31st December 1881. In a suit to recover damages for breach of the contract by the defendant in not accepting the goods, —Held that the stipulation not to sell the goods to others itself amounted to a condition precedent to the defendant's obligation to accept the goods, and therefore the plaintiffs were not entitled to damages. CARLISLES NEPHEWS & Co. v. A portion of the jute was not delivered, and this suit having been brought against the Eastern Bengal Railway Company for the value thereof, the Small Cause Court Judge was disposed to dismiss the suit without further enquiry, on the ground of want of privity between plaintiff and defendant. Held that it was premature for the Judge to say that the suit could not lie against defendant without proceeding with the further investigation of the case, and that, although plaintiff might have a remedy against the India General Steam Navigation Company, it by no means followed that he had none against the defendant company also. GUJENDRO MOHUN SHAIKH v. 5. BOUGHT AND SOLD NOTES.

63. ——— Evidence of contract—Material variation.—C. & Co. and H. & Co. were merchants at Calcutta. H. & Co. sold to C. & Co. a large quantity of indigo through the medium of a broker, who drew up a sold note addressed to H. & Co. and submitted it to H for his approval, when H having objected to a particular word remaining, the broker took the sold note to C and informed him of H's objection. C struck his pen through the word objected to by H, placing his initials over that erasure, and returned it to the broker, who thereupon delivered it, so altered, to H. & Co. The broker delivered to C. & Co. on the following day a bought note, which differed in certain material terms from the sold note. In an action brought by H. & Co. against C. & Co. for non-performance of the contract contained in the sold note, the Supreme Court at Calcutta was of opinion that the sold note alone formed the contract, and found for the plaintiffs. Held by the Privy Council on appeal (reversing that decision) that the transaction was one of bought and sold notes, and that the circumstances attending C's alteration of the sold note, and affixing his initials, were not sufficient to make that note alone a binding contract; and that there being a material variation in the terms of the bought note with the sold note, they together did not constitute a binding contract. COWIE v. 74. ————— Performance of contract—Readiness and willingness.—Plaintiffs contracted with defendant to sell him 250 shares in the Alliance Financial Corporation, and 10 shares in the Mazagon Reclamation Company, delivery to be made at defendant's option within six months from date of contract; and cash to be paid on due delivery to defendant or his order. On the last day for delivery plaintiff produced allotment receipt papers, all bearing date prior to the date of the contract, for the numbered shares contracted to be sold in both companies. The Alliance Financial papers were endorsed by the original allottees; but neither transfers nor applications for transfers signed by the original allottees were offered, nor had any such been executed, although the Corporation had opened transfer-books long before. Of the Mazagon Reclamation receipts, nine were endorsed by the allottees, one had no endorsement, and over the allottee of it and of another receipt plaintiffs had no power to enforce delivery. The Mazagon Reclamation Company had not opened transfer-books until long after the last day of delivery. On the issue whether plaintiffs were ready and willing to deliver the shares, Held, as to the Alliance Financial shares, that plaintiffs, not being in a position to have constituted defendant as owner thereof, must fail in their suit in respect to them; and as to the Mazagon Reclamation shares that, although plaintiffs had done all that they were required to do by the usage of the market to transfer the interest in eight of them, yet the contract being an entire one, they must fail in respect to them also. If a party, bound to do an act upon request, is ready to do it when required, he will have performed his part of the contract, although he might have happened not to have been ready had he been called upon at some anterior period. JIVARAJ MEGJI v. they were registered as holders of the shares on the 1st July, when the share certificates with transfer deeds in blank were tendered to defendants, who refused to accept them or to pay the purchase-money. On the issue whether plaintiffs were ready and willing to perform the contract on their part, Held that the acts necessary to be done on the 1st July were concurrent; and that plaintiffs, being able and willing on that day to make a valid transfer, if defendants had been ready to pay the price, were not bound to take any further steps until the purchase-money was paid by defendants. IMPERIAL BANKING AND TRADING COMPANY v. 76. ————— Fraud—Contracts made with illegal object.—In a suit brought by a company against a former director of the company for the price of shares bargained and sold to the defendant, but not accepted by him, and for money found to be due on an account stated, Held that the plaintiffs could not recover, 1st,—because no shares were really bargained and sold, as the plaint alleged; and what was done was, according to the intention and understanding of the parties, a mere form gone through, for the purpose of deceiving the public, and making it appear that 10,000 shares had been sold at a certain price; and secondly, because the contracts were made for the purpose of defrauding other persons. EASTERN FINANCIAL ASSOCIATION v. 7. WAGERING CONTRACTS.

77. ————— Wagers on price of opium at opium sales—Stat. 8 & 9 Vic., c. 109.—By the common law of England, in force in India, an action may be maintained on a wager, although the parties had no previous interest in the subject-matter on which it is laid, if such wager be not against the interest or feelings of third parties, does not lead to indecent evidence, and is not contrary to public policy. The mere circumstance that a wager concerns the public revenue, or creates a temptation to do a wrong, will not render it illegal. A wager upon the average price which opium should fetch at the next Government sale at Calcutta, the plaintiffs having to pay the defendants the difference between such price and a sum named per chest, and the defendants having to pay the plaintiffs the difference between such price and the sum named, if the price should be above that sum, is not an illegal wager or contrary to public policy, though the proceeds of the opium sold at Calcutta formed part of the Government revenue. So held reversing the judgment of the Court at Bombay. The Stat. 8 & 9 Vic., c. 109, amending the law relating to games and wagers does not extend to India. RAMLOL THACKOORSEEDASS v. to secure the profit, or ascertain the loss, before the "Vayda" day. The contracts were in the usual mercantile form, and were entered into through brokers, the principals not being brought into contract with each other until after the contract was made. S's procedure was also similar. S was a mnkadam and guarantee broker to the plaintiffs; and he, too, entered into these contracts as a speculation, intending to settle them before the "Vayda" day, but prepared, if forced to do so, to perform them in kind. Held that the contracts sued on were not shown to have been agreements by way of wager. It was a highly speculative mode of doing business, but there is no law against speculation, as there is against gambling. Contracts are not wagering contracts, unless it be the intention of both contracting parties, at the time of entering into the contracts, under no circumstances to call for, or give delivery, from, or to, each other. In this case, even the defendant—seeing that he did not know with whom contracts might be made on his behalf by his brokers—must have contemplated the possibility of being called on to give, or take, delivery. TOD v. Lakhmichand, I. L. R., 9 Bom., 358, followed. As between the original parties, a promissory note which has for its consideration a debt due on a wagering contract is void and, therefore, not binding in the hands of the original payee. Oulds v. Harrison, 10 Eech., 572, distinguished. In order to constitute a wagering contract, neither party should intend to perform the contract itself, but only to pay the differences. In order to ascertain the real intentions of the parties, the Court must look at all the surrounding circumstances, and will even go behind a written provision of the contract to judge for itself whether such provision was inserted merely for the purpose of concealing the real nature of the transaction. Tod v. Lakhmidas, I. L. R., 16 Bom., 441, Eshoor v. Venkatasubba, I. L. R., 17 Mad., 480, and University Stock Exchange v. Strachan, L. R., 1896, 4 P. Ca., 166, referred to. The defendant employed the plaintiff from time to time as a broker to purchase Government paper and shares of the Manekji Petit Spinning and Weaving Company. The plaintiff did so to the extent of many lakhs of rupees. No delivery was given or taken, but the differences only between the contract price and the price at the date of settlement (the Vaida day in each month) were paid or received by the defendant. The plaintiff now sued the defendant on two promissory notes given to the plaintiff by the defendant in respect of differences due by him in respect of the contracts thus made on his behalf. The defendant pleaded that he was not liable, the contracts being wagering contracts. It appeared from the evidence that the practice in the bazar (which was followed in this case) was for brokers to enter into such contracts in their own name, and not to disclose the principals. The brokers became liable to give or take delivery. The defendant stated that he did not know the persons to whom the plaintiff sold or from whom he purchased. Held (1) on the evidence that the defendant authorized the plaintiff as his broker to contract on his behalf, but in the plaintiff's own name, on the understanding that the defendant would indemnify the plaintiff and pay him brokerage in respect of the transactions entered into by him on behalf or for benefit of defendant. Accordingly the plaintiff did enter into contracts in his own name with third parties. The defendant was not directly a party to them, nor did his name appear anywhere in the contracts themselves. (2) That the plaintiff was entitled to recover from the defendant the losses which he paid to third parties in respect of the contracts made by the plaintiff on the defendant's behalf, and that such losses were a valid consideration pro tanto for the notes sued upon. No doubt, so far as the defendant was concerned, all the contracts were merely wagering or gambling transactions, but there was no evidence to show that, so far as the third parties were concerned, they were otherwise than genuine. The plaintiff was not, as between himself and the defendant, the principal in the transactions. He was merely the broker with a personal liability to the third parties. There was nothing to show that as between himself and the third parties the contracts were not perfectly genuine. The non-delivery and payment of differences on hand was a matter of subsequent arrangement. If he was liable to be called upon to receive or make actual delivery, then, in the absence of any express agreement to the contrary, a similar liability rested on the defendant himself, whatever might have been the defendant's own intentions. As the contracts between the plaintiff and the third parties were not void, so the contracts between the defendant and the plaintiff to indemnify the plaintiff in respect of these contracts were also valid. The mere fact that the plaintiff, knowing the defendant's position and means, must have inferred that he did not mean or intend to perform the contracts in specie, was not, per se, without more, sufficient to render the contracts invalid and not binding on the defendant. The inference of the plaintiff would not be, per se, a binding agreement. PEROSHIA CURSETJI v. MANEKJI DOSSABHOY I. L. R., 22 Bom., 899

These rules expressly provided for the delivery of cotton in every case and forbade all gambling in difference. the plaintiff contracted to purchase from the defendant the right to receive the dividend on 50 shares of the Empress Mill at Rs7 per share, the plaintiff being under an impression that the dividend was to be declared on some subsequent day. The plaintiff deposited Rs100 with the defendant as part payment of the purchase-money. Subsequently it was ascertained that the dividend had been already declared on 17th January 1883 (i.e., four days before the contract) at Rs25. The plaintiff thereupon sued the defendant to have the contract declared cancelled, and sought to recover the deposit of Rs100, with interest. The Judge of the Court of Small Causes at Broach, being of opinion that the contract was in its nature a sutta, or wagering contract, rejected the plaintiff's claim. The plaintiff applied to the High Court, under its extraordinary jurisdiction, to set aside the lower Court's decision. Held that, in the first instance, the plaint, as framed, not disclosing any cause of action, ought to have been returned for amendment. It should either have alleged a mistake common to both parties to the contract or should have contained an allegation of fraud, on the defendant's part, inducing the plaintiff to enter into the agreement. The mere circumstance that the contract was "caused by one of the parties to it being under a mistake as to a matter of fact" would not, under s. 22 of the Contract Act (IX of 1872), have made the contract voidable. Held, also, that, if the contract was really a wager, the deposit could not be recovered under s. 65 of the Contract Act, as its nature must from the first have been known to the parties. To an agreement, so known to be void, s. 65 does not apply. If the contract was in the intention of both parties a wager, the suit would be barred by s. 1 of Bombay Act III of 1865, which, though it formed a part of Act XXI of 1848, which is repealed by the Contract Act, is not, being a special Act applicable to the Bombay Presidency, itself repealed. It must be read with s. 30 of the Contract Act. Held, also, that to constitute a wager, the transaction between the parties must "wholly depend on the risk in contemplation," and "neither party must look to anything but the payment of money on the determination of an uncertainty." But if one of the parties has "the event in his own hands," the transaction is not a wager. If the plaintiff's real contention was that defendant was aware of a declaration of dividends at Rs25 per share, and by keeping plaintiff in ignorance of the facts induced him to enter into a wagering agreement for payment of differences at a contract rate of Rs37 per share, then to a suit for the recovery of the deposit made to the defendant with reference to such an agreement, Bombay Act III of 1885 has no application. Wagering contracts are not illegal. They are simply destitute of legal effect. If fraud was practised on plaintiff, the maxim potior est conditio defendentis would not apply. DARABHAI TRIBHOBANDAS v. LAKSHMOHAND PANACHAND

93. ——— Addition of words to contract—Sale of goods.—R G & Co. entered into a contract to sell certain goods to A S, N S, both Calcutta firms. The contract, which was in a printed English form, was taken on the 18th December 1868, by one M, on behalf of the firm of R G & Co., to obtain the signature of the vendee's firm. It was signed on their behalf by A S. Neither M nor A S understood English, and no explanation was given of the terms of the contract to A S at the time he signed it, but there had been negotiations between M and A S as to these goods prior to the time when A S's signature was obtained. It did not appear that the goods had been identified in any way by the purchasers, who had merely seen a sample. After his signature, A S wrote in Nagri, "Goods fresh grenades five cases at two annas and three pie per yard." A S, N S, afterwards, on the 6th February 1869, paid Rs1,000 as earnest money, which was accepted by R G & Co., who then allowed further time for taking delivery of the goods, which, however, A S, N S, finding some of the goods were stained, declined to do. R G & Co. thereupon brought an action for breach of contract in not taking delivery, and a cross-suit was brought by A S, N S, to recover the Rs1,000 paid as earnest money. Held that the words "fresh goods" after the signature of A S constituted part of the contract into which the parties entered, and by which they were bound. MADHAN CHANDRA RUDAR v. The forgery having been established, the Court of first instance dismissed the suit as against all the three defendants, and this decision was affirmed on appeal. Or second appeal to the High Court.—Held that the decision was correct, as a material alteration in a bond is, if fraudulently made, sufficient to render the bond void. A party who has the custody of an instrument made for his benefit is bound to preserve it in its original state, and any material alteration of it will vitiate the instrument. Where a person brings a suit upon a document which, when produced in evidence, is found to have been fraudulently altered to the knowledge of the plaintiff, no Court ought to allow an amendment to enable him to succeed upon it in its original state. *GOGUN CHUNDER GHOSH v. 106. — Effect of alteration as vitiating material part—Vesting of interest by execution of mortgage instrument.—By an agreement entered into between plaintiff and defendants' predecessors in title plaintiff undertook to sell and convey certain lands to the purchasers and to allow half the purchase money to remain at interest for three years on security of the lands sold. Plaintiff's mother was alive, as also his son, who was then a minor. In order to protect the purchasers from any claims by the said mother or son as against the lands so agreed to be sold, plaintiff further agreed to give the purchasers a bond indemnifying them from any such or other claims. Plaintiff, in pursuance of the said agreement, duly executed a conveyance in respect of claims: gave the purchasers an indemnity in respect of claims by his mother as against the lands in plaintiff's executed a mortgage over the lands in plaintiff's favour, in which the indemnity to be furnished by plaintiff was at first referred to the words, "a but the document concluded with the words, "a security should be furnished for this sum on account of the minor only." The balance of purchase money so secured not having been paid, plaintiff brought a suit for the sale of the mortgaged land, and before doing so tendered an indemnity protecting the defendants against any claims that might be made as against the lands by the plaintiff's said minor son. It was found that the mortgage instrument after its execution had been added to the mortgage document, and had been added to the mortgage document, and was a material one and vitiated the document, that the suit, being based on the altered document, must fail, and that the tender of a general guarantee as originally agreed upon was a condition precedent to the plaintiff's right to sue.—Held per COLLINS, C.J., and BENSON, J. (in an order calling for a finding as to whether the alteration had been made with the mortgagor's consent) that the mortgage instrument having provided for security to be given by plaintiff in general terms, the addition of the words "for the minor only" restricted the liability of the property to be given by plaintiff as security to claims made by the said minor son. It diminished the guarantee to be given by plaintiff against claims as a basis for the plaintiff's suit unless the plaintiff could show that the alteration had been made with the consent of the mortgagors, who executed the document. The finding of the lower Court was that the alteration had been made without the mortgagor's consent. *Held, SUBRAMANIA AYYAR, Offg. C.J., and MOORE, J. 120. ——— Execution of deed obtained by misrepresentation—Cancellation of signature—Contract Act, ss. 13 and 19—Breach of duty—Ordinary diligence.—The firm of Nicol & Co. having suspended payment, a general meeting of creditors was convened, at which it was unanimously resolved that the business of the firm should be wound up by voluntary liquidation under the supervision of a committee; and that the winding up should be conducted by two trustees under the supervision and control of the said committee. At a subsequent meeting of the creditors the above resolutions were confirmed, and it was further resolved that a completion-deed should be prepared in pursuance of the terms of the above resolutions. The adoption of this last resolution was strongly pressed upon the meeting by the solicitor for the insolvent firm on the ground that the mode of procedure therein proposed was proposed solely in the interest of the creditors. He entirely repudiated the idea that the members of the firm were to obtain any benefit by the proposed measure. No mention was made on either of the meetings of any release to be given to the parties. The plaintiffs were creditors of Nicol & Co., and R, S, and B were their respective agents in Bombay. R, S, and B attended the said meetings on the plaintiffs' behalf, and were appointed members of the committee of supervision and control. A few days after the last-mentioned meeting, M, one of the partners of the insolvent firm, called upon R, who at the time was deeply engaged in pressing an important business. M produced a deed which had been prepared by the solicitors of the firm, and which contained a clause by which the creditors, in consideration of the assignment of the estate to trustees, released and discharged the members of the firm from all claims. M was aware of the existence of the release in the deed. He asked R to execute the deed stating that it was "the most deed." R requested M to leave the document, saying that he would go over it and return it in the course of the day. M then earnestly pressed him to execute the document at once, stating that it was of the utmost importance that no time should be lost, as the native creditors were coming to his office, and that it was necessary that all the members of the committee of supervision should sign first. R objected to sign the document without reading it, and M thereupon led him to suppose that the deed only carried out what was agreed to at the creditors' meeting. Upon the faith of that assurance, R executed the deed on behalf of the first plaintiffs in the belief that it was nothing

Immediately after the execution of this agreement the price of rice rose, the defendant did not pay within the fifteen days, and in the plaint in this suit the price of rice was calculated at 8 annas per para. Held that the bargain was unconscionable. Under the Contract Act, s. 74, in a case falling within its terms only reasonable compensation could be given, which in the present case would be interest at a somewhat high rate. The contract in effect was that, if the principal with 12 per cent. were not paid on 22nd September, double the amount should be payable on the 15th November. 129. ————— Voluntary transfer—Act IX of 1872 (Contract Act), s. 16.—In a transaction between two persons where one is so situated as to be under the control and influence of the other, the Courts in this country have to see that such other does not unduly and unfairly exercise that influence and control over such person for his own advantage or benefit, or for the advantage or benefit of some religious object in which he is interested, and will call upon him to give clear and cogent proof that the transaction complained of was such a one as the law would support and recognize. Where a fiduciary or quasi-fiduciary relation had existed, Courts of Equity have invariably placed the burden of sustaining the transaction upon the party benefited by it, requiring him to show that it was of an unobjectionable character and one which it ought not to disturb. The exercise of this beneficial jurisdiction is not confined to cases only between guardian and ward, attorney and client, father and son, but the relief thus granted stands upon a general principle applying to all the variety of relations in which dominion may be exercised by one person over another. The plaintiff, who on the death of the widow of his brother became entitled to the estate of the deceased, found himself resisted in his claim by wealthy relatives. He was a man without means. The defendant took him to his house, kept him there, found him all the money for the purpose of carrying on his litigation with his relatives, in which the plaintiff succeeded. While the litigation for mutation of names in respect of the property was pending in the Revenue Court, and while plaintiff was residing with the defendant, he executed the sale deed in favour of defendant's brother for the nominal consideration of Rs 9,500, or half the property he claimed: and again, shortly after the mutation case had terminated in his favour, he executed a deed of endowment of the remaining half in favour of a temple founded by the ancestor of the defendant, and in which the defendant was interested, and the result was that plaintiff was left as poor as he was when he first came into the defendant's hands. Plaintiff sued for cancellation of the deed of endowment, on the ground that the same had been obtained from him by the exercise of undue influence and by means of fraud, and obtained a decree. On appeal by the defendant it was held that, looking at all the facts, such a relation between plaintiff and defendant in the course of the year 1885 had been established as to cast upon the latter the obligation of satisfying the Court that the transaction, which was given effect to by the deed of endowment, was an honest bona fide transaction

Interest—"Dharta"—Illiterate agriculturist.—
The High Court as a Court of equity possesses the power exercised by the Court of Chancery of granting relief in cases of such unconscionable or grossly unequal and oppressive bargains as no man of ordinary prudence would enter into, and which, from their nature and the relative positions of the parties, raises a presumption of fraud or undue influence. The principles upon which such relief is granted apply to contracts in which exceedingly onerous conditions are imposed by money-lenders upon poor and ignorant persons in rural districts. The exercise of such power has not been affected by the repeal of the usury laws. Chesterfield v. Janssen, 2 Ves., 155, O'Rourke v. Bulington, L. R., 2 Ap. Cas., 514, Earl of Aylesford v. Morris, L. R., 8 Ch. D., 481, Earl of Suellin, L. R., 15 Ch. D., 339, Ap. 481, Nevill v. Cook, L. R., 10 Ch. Ap., 339, Ap. 481, and Beynon v. Cook, L. R., 10 Ch. Ap., 339, referred to. An illiterate Kurmi in the position of a peasant proprietor executed a mortgage-deed in favour of a professional money-lender to whom he owed Rs. 7, by which he agreed to pay interest on that sum at the rate of 24 per cent. per annum at compound interest. He further, agreed that "dharta" or a yearly fine at the rate of one anna per rupee should be allowed to the mortgagee, to be calculated by yearly rests. It was also provided that the interest should be paid from the profits of certain mukama land of the mortgagor, and that, if the interest were not paid for two years, the mortgagee should be put in possession of this land. As security for the debt, a six pies zamindari share was mortgaged for a term of eleven years. The effect of the stipulation as to "dharta" was that one anna per rupee would be added at the end of every year, not only to the principal mortgage-money, but also to the interest due, and the total would be again regarded as the principal sum for the ensuing year. Ten years after the date of the mortgage, the mortgagor brought a suit for redemption on payment of only Rs. 7 or such sum as the Court might determine as due to the mortgagee. At that time the accounts made up by the mortgagee showed that the debt of Rs. 7 with compound interest had swollen to Rs. 73, of which the "dharta" alone amounted to Rs. 11. Held that the stipulation in the deed as to "dharta" was not of the kind referred to in s. 74 of the Contract Act (IX of 1873), and that there was no question of penalty, but that, looking to the relative positions of the parties, and the unconscionable and oppressive nature of the stipulation, the benefit thereof should be disallowed to the mortgagee and the mortgagor permitted to redeem on payment of the mortgage-money and interest, no appeal having been preferred by him from the decree of the first Court making redemption subject to the payment of interest. LALLI v. RAM PRASAD. I. L. R., 9 All., 74 found that advantage was taken by the plaintiff of the fact that the defendant was being pressed in the tax for immediate payment of revenue due, to induce him to execute the bond, charging compound interest at the above-mentioned rate, notwithstanding that ample security was given by mortgage of landed property. It was also found that, although, under the terms of the bond, the plaintiff had power to enforce the same at any time by bringing to sale the mortgaged property, he had wilfully allowed the debt to remain unsatisfied, in order that compound interest at a high rate might accumulate. Held that the bargain was a hard and unconscionable one, which the Court had undoubted power to refuse to enforce, and which, under all the circumstances, it would be unreasonable and inequitable for a Court of justice to give full effect to; and that, under the circumstances, compound interest should not be allowed. Kumini Sundari Chaudhrani v. Kali Prasanna Ghose, I. L. R., 12 Cal., 225, Beynon v. Cook, L. R., 10 Ch. Ap., 339, and Lall v. Ram Prasad, I. L. R., 9 All., 74, referred to. The Court decreed the principal sum of Rs. 99, with simple interest at 24 per cent. per annum, up to the date of institution of the suit. MADHO SING v. KASHI RAM. I. L. R., 9 All., 228

138. ———— Contract to pay expenses of litigation.—The result of the English cases regarding "hard" or "unconscionable bargains" is that in dealings with expectant heirs, reversioners, or remaindermen, the fact that the bargain was declined by others as not being sufficiently advantageous, does not raise a presumption that it was fair and reasonable; and that until the contrary is satisfactorily proved by the party trying to maintain the bargain, the Court may presume that a bargain which apparently provides, in the opinion of the Court, for an unusually high return or for an exceptionally high rate of interest is a hard and unconscionable bargain against which relief should be granted. The doctrine of equity on the subject of such bargains is applicable in England only to dealings with expectant heirs, reversioners, or remaindermen. The judgment of the Privy Council in Kumini Sundari Chaudhrani v. Kali Prasanna Ghose, I. L. R., 12 Cal., 225 : L. R., 12 I. A., 215, does not imply that the doctrine is to be applied in India to cases except where it would have been applied in England, or except where the case is in some way analogous to a case of snatching a bargain with an expectant heir, reversioner, or remainderman, or except where there is some fiduciary relationship between the lender and the borrower, although there may be no fraud or undue influence, or except there is some incapacity, such as ignorance, on the part of the borrower to appreciate the true effect of his bargain. For the purposes of meeting the expenses of an appeal to the High Court, the appellant, on the advice of his legal advisers, executed a bond for Rs. 25,000 in consideration of the obligor agreeing to defray such expenses. The obligor from his recovering possession of the property in

140. — Contract to carry coolies by ship. — Appointing of master prohibited from taking ship. — Acting against Regulation Act, XIII of 1851. — Where a contract was entered into for the carriage of coolies, the ship-owner was held guilty of breach of contract in appointing a master who was prohibited by an order of Government from commanding a ship carrying emigrants. RAJES C. PERUMBAHARIAN. 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 131

141. — Act alleged to be not a breach of contract. — Owner of goods. — An agreement entered into between the plaintiff and defendant, members of the same caste, contained a stipulation that in the event of the defendant objecting to the receiving of a girl from or the giving a girl to the plaintiff in marriage, the defendant should be bound to return Rs. 1000 with interest, which the plaintiff had paid to the defendant under the agreement. It was found by the Civil Judge that the fifteenth defendant's son was engaged to be married to the second plaintiff's daughter, and that the marriage was broken off on the part of the fifteenth defendant. Held, on special appeal, that this was prima facie a breach of the agreement which entitled the plaintiff to recover, and that it was for the defendants to show that it did not bring them within the terms of the agreement. RESI CHETTY v. VENGARRA CHETTY. [1 Mad., 325]

143. — Contract for sale of seed. — Excess refraction. — A contract for the sale of seed contained the following provision:—"Refraction guaranteed at four per cent., with usual allowance up to six per cent., exceeding which the seller is to reclaim the seed at his expense within a week; failing which, buyers to have the option of cancelling that portion of the contract tendered, or of buying against the seller, or of taking the parcel as it stands, with usual allowance for excess refraction. Delivery from seller's godown in pile up to the 15th of July next." On the 10th July, the vendor tendered the seed. On examination the refraction was found to be above the contract rate. It was agreed that the vendor should reclaim the seed; and on the 15th July, the purchasers went to take delivery of the seed, which was found still to be not sufficiently cleared. On the 16th July, the vendor said that he should require a week longer for that purpose. The purchasers then cancelled the contract. 144. — Agreement to deliver goods at specified place. — Tender of goods. — Right to rescind contract. — If a person contracts to deliver goods at a specified place, he must be there in person or by agent, and be ready to deliver them; if to deliver them by a certain time, he must tender them so as to allow sufficient time for examination and receipt. But when a thing is to be performed at a certain place, on or before a certain day, to another party to a contract, the tender must be to the other party at that place, and that other party must be present at some particular part of the day before sunset, so that the act may be completed by daylight. Where a thing is to be done anywhere, a tender at a convenient time before midnight is sufficient. In case of violation of a contract by one party, the other party may ordinarily rescind it totally or partially, provided he himself is guilty of no default or violation, and exercises the right within a reasonable time. If, after default of the other party, he does an act recognizing the contract, he cannot afterwards rescind it. KANTICK NATH PANDY v. GOVERNMENT. [11 W. R., 58]

145. — Failure in performance of stipulation giving party right to rescind. — Impossibility of strict and literal performance. — When an agreement provides that an act is to be done by one of the parties within a limited time, and the party fails to perform the act within such time, if the other party elects notwithstanding to take the benefit of the contract, the latter must perform his part of it; and though exact and literal performance of the original stipulation has become impossible, the terms of the contract must be carried out as nearly as possible. *BHOJO SOONDUBEE DEOLA v. 146. — Revocation of contract by new agreement. — Breach of new contract. — If a second contract be entered into between two parties in revocation of a previous one, the contractee cannot fall back upon the conditions of the first contract, on the ground of the breach by the contractor of the subsequent one, unless there be express conditions in the latter agreement to that effect. *KALLIPERSAD SINGH v. 9. BREACH OF CONTRACT—continued.
 hundred full-pressed bales "fully good fair Kishli cotton" at Rs28-8 per candy, to be delivered from March 15th to April 1st. On March 21st the plaintiffs sent the defendant a letter reminding him of the contract and requesting him to take delivery. On receipt of this letter, the defendant put the matter into the hands of F. The plaintiff had then no cotton of the specific kind to deliver, nor did the letter refer to any particular bales. At 11-30 o'clock on March 30th, the plaintiffs sent the defendant a letter enclosing a sampling order directed to an employé of Messrs. H and S, on whose premises the bales referred to in the order were lying. F, on behalf of the defendant, got samples taken of the cotton and examined them, but without reference on that day to any standard. He then, however, conceived doubts as to the quality of the cotton, and expressed his doubts to the plaintiffs in the evening of that day. On 31st March the plaintiffs sent the defendant a delivery order enclosed in a letter from their solicitors calling on the defendant to attend with his surveyor at 1 P.M. on that day to survey the cotton, as otherwise an ex-parte survey would be held. This letter reached the defendant at 11-30 o'clock A.M., and was given by him to F at noon of the same day. F applied to M to attend as surveyor, but M was unable to do so. The plaintiffs had an ex-parte survey held by Messrs. C and B at 1 P.M., and they pronounced the cotton, samples of which were submitted to them, to be "fully good fair Kishli cotton." While this survey was going on, the defendant was on the Cotton Green, but declined to attend, saying that F did come, and subsequently Sherry afterwards F did come, and subsequently wrote a letter to plaintiffs in the defendant's name, stating that the cotton was not of the description contracted to be sold by them, and asking for a survey. This letter reached the plaintiffs at 2-19 o'clock P.M. After this there was a discussion between plaintiffs and defendant and F. On that afternoon (the 31st March) the plaintiffs' solicitors sent a letter to the defendant stating the result of the survey and requiring him to take delivery. This was answered by a letter of next day (April 1st) from the defendant's solicitors denying that the cotton had been quality or that proper notice of the survey had been given, alleging that the defendant had that morning attended with his surveyor and asked leave to survey the cotton which had been refused, and stating that the contract must be treated as cancelled. The cotton was sold by auction on April 5th. The plaintiffs brought this suit to recover Rs1,631-1-11 as damages for non-acceptance of the cotton. The defendant contended that there had been no reasonable time allowed by the plaintiffs for the examination of the cotton, and that a joint survey was not necessary under the terms of s. 38 of the Indian Contract Act (IX of 1872), and that the defendant, having had a period of twenty-four hours for inspection, had had a reasonable opportunity of seeing whether the cotton offered by the plaintiffs was such cotton as the plaintiffs were bound by their contract to deliver. 152. Breach of warranty—Goods not agreeing with sample—Conduct of parties—Estoppel.—In a suit for damages for breach of warranty, where the dispute was whether the goods tendered (shellac) were according to the contract, it appeared that a sample had been taken by the plaintiff's stevedore, and referred to the selling broker to decide whether the goods from which it had been taken ought to be accepted, and he decided that they should be taken at one rupee per maund less than the contract rate, which award the parties agreed to abide by. The stevedore then went to the godown of the defendants, thoroughly examined the undelivered shellac, and removed it to the godown of the plaintiff. Held that after this the parties could not be allowed to raise the question whether there had been a breach of that contract and to ask for damages by reason of the goods not being of the quality contracted for. *FORNARO v. 153. Alleged breach of warranty by vendor on a sale and delivery of goods—Burdens of proof after acceptance, following upon an examination by purchaser.—Under five contracts for the sale of good Burma catch, to be delivered to a Calcutta firm, in Calcutta, by the vendors, who knew that it was bought for the export market, delivery and acceptance followed upon a searching examination of the catch by the purchasers. The latter having sent advices of this purchase to a New York firm, with which they were in partnership, parcels of catch were sold to different buyers in America, to whom, under such "forward" contracts, the catch was shipped in separate shipments by the Calcutta firm. On the arrival of the catch, objection was taken to its quality by the American buyers, who refused to take delivery. The Calcutta firm thereupon sued the vendors under the five contracts above mentioned. The burden of proof being upon the plaintiffs, who had accepted the catch after full examination in Calcutta, to prove the breach of contract by the vendors by cogent evidence that arose from the presumption of due performance that arose from such acceptance. Held that this presumption was rebutted in the absence of evidence as to the treatment of the catch on its re-shipment by the plaintiffs on the voyage from India to America, and at the port of arrival. *GAN KIM SWAN v. After notice to the defendant, the plaintiffs re-sold the goods and sued to recover the expenses of the re-sale and the difference between the price realized and the contract price with interest. Goods were re-sold at a loss, and in a suit to recover such loss it was contended, in defence, that the property in the goods had not passed to the defendants, and that plaintiffs' only remedy was by way of damages. Held that a clause such as that contained in the indent came into operation notwithstanding that the property had not passed to the buyers; and that plaintiffs were entitled to recover the deficiency arising from the re-sale. BEST v. Calcutta, under which E accepted bills to a large amount for C, upon C's promise to cover the bills before maturity. In June C ordered the defendant Railway Company to consign all goods despatched from Fyzabad to E's address, and empowered E to take delivery of, and give receipts for, all such goods. In the same month, C despatched from Patna, in bags supplied by S & Co., fifty-five tons of poppy-seed to Calcutta, and sent the railway receipt to E, who was therein named as the consignee. One of the terms printed on the receipt stated that goods would only be delivered to the consignee named in the receipt, or to his order. In advising E of the despatch of poppy-seed, C informed him that it had been sold to S & Co., and that delivery was to be made through T & Co.; and E had also seen letters which passed between C and his agents, in which the following passages occurred: "Our Calcutta firm will deliver the poppy to T & Co.," and "Do your best, and hurry off despatches of fifty tons of poppy; the rest of the poppy and linseed can go to E." E endorsed the railway's receipt to S & Co., who paid the freight, and sent the receipt to S & Co. together with the Railway Company at first promised to give, but afterwards, under an order from C to "deliver fifty tons to T & Co., and to no other party, the rest of the seed to be delivered according to documents," they, at T & Co.'s request, delivered the whole fifty-five tons to them. In an action by E against the Railway Company for non-delivery of the seed to him, —Held (per MARKBY, J.) E was mere agent of the vendor for the delivery of the goods; T & Co. had superior title to the goods, of which E had notice. Held (per COOK, C.J., and MACPHERSON, J., on appeal) the Railway Company was bound to deliver to E. The property in the goods and the right of possession was in him; he had an authority coupled with an interest which C could not revoke; he had no notice of the title of T & Co., which was an equitable right only. EAGLETON v. 160. ———— Betrothal—Marriage—Breach of promise of marriage—Reciprocal contingent contract—Damages—Upariyaman—Halai Bhatia caste.—The plaintiffs alleged that by a written agreement dated the 18th March 1882 the first defendant and her deceased son L agreed that the second defendant K, who was the daughter of the first defendant, should be given in marriage to the second plaintiff, who was the son of plaintiff No. 1; and that the betrothal of these two persons took place accordingly. The agreement was executed by the said L, as eldest male member of his family, in the name of his deceased father. In pursuance of this agreement, the plaintiffs paid to the first defendant Rs 700 as "upariyaman," and they presented K with ornaments and clothes of considerable value. The plaintiffs complained that the first defendant subsequently refused to carry out the contract of marriage and had married her daughter, K (defendant No. 2), to another person. They claimed in this suit to recover the ornaments and clothes, together with the ₹700 paid to the first defendant as "upariyaman" and ₹10,000 as damages. The first defendant was sued both in her personal capacity and as heir and legal representative of her son L. The first defendant pleaded that neither she nor the second defendant were bound by the betrothal agreement, as they were not parties to it, that the contract had been a contingent contract, inasmuch as her son, L, had agreed to give K (defendant No. 2) in marriage to the second plaintiff only on condition that he (L) should obtain in marriage U, the daughter of the third plaintiff, and that L and U were accordingly betrothed; that L had died in 1894, and that the contract had been thereby determined; that she had been willing to renew it, and had proposed that a younger son of hers (J) should be accepted as the husband of U, but that the plaintiffs had declined this offer. In proof of her allegation that the contract was a reciprocal contingent contract, the first defendant relied upon defendant the value of the ornaments and the ₹700 paid by the plaintiffs as "upariyaman," together contract. held not dismissed.

By s. 2 (d) of the Contract Act, services already rendered at the desire of the promisor are placed on the same footing with such services to be rendered and constitute a good consideration for a definite agreement. Cases where a person without the knowledge of the promisor or otherwise than at his request does the latter some service, and the promisor undertakes to compensate him for it, are covered by s. 25 of the Contract Act (IX of 1872); in them the promise does not need a consideration to support it. *SINDHA SHRI GANPAT-SINGJI HIMATSINGJI v. At the time when the child was handed over to the widow, her husband's corpse was still in the house, and the relatives of the child and other members of the caste obstructed the removal of the corpse until the child had been accepted in adoption, and until the widow had executed a deed of adoption. (a) GENERALLY.

1. ——— Contract void as contrary to law—Agreement partly void and partly valid.

A mistake as to existing facts may invalidate a contract; but an erroneous expectation, which events entirely falsify, has no effect. BANSHETTI v.

been enhanced at the Government survey. Bab-

2. Contract between brokers to divide profits.—A contract between two brokers to divide the profits of a transaction is not an illegal contract, and an action to enforce it is therefore maintainable. SUHAJ v. BISHUN DYAL [1 Agra, 269]

3. Contract in consideration that person will give evidence in civil suit—Void contract—Consideration.—A contract to pay money upon the consideration that the plaintiff would give evidence in a civil suit on behalf of the defendant cannot be enforced. Such a contract is either for true evidence, and then there is no consideration, or for favourable evidence, either true or false, and then the consideration is vicious. Semble—If the consideration had been the plaintiff's promise not to evade process, that would still be no consideration for the defendant's undertaking. SASHANNAH CHETTI v. RAMASAMY CHETTI 4 Mad., 7

4. Contract illegal and fraudulent as against third parties, but enforceable between the parties to it.—A contract between several persons to make separate tenders to Government, and that whoever should obtain a contract from Government should share the profits with the others, although fraudulent towards the Government, will be enforced against any of such persons at the suit of any one of them who may have made the tender in pursuance of the contract. ISSER CHUNDRA GHOSH v. BHOOBUN MOHUN BANERJEE Bourke, O. C., 313

5. Agreement to join Soma.—A suit, brought to enforce a penalty for breach of an agreement by which the defendant contracted to join a certain Soma, of which the plaintiffs were members, and agreed that his would not, without the plaintiffs' permission, leave the community or join any other, it was held must be dismissed, the contract not being one capable of being enforced in a Court of law. NITAI SHAHA v. SHUBAL SHAHA [2 B. L. R., S. N., 4: 10 W. R., 349]

6. Contract made by company before Registration Act XIX of 1857, s. 2.—In a suit filed on the 28th of April 1866 and brought by a joint-stock company, after registration, to recover damages for breach of a contract made with the defendants before registration, Held (by COUCH, C.J., and ARNOULD, J., affirming on appeal the decree of SARGENT, J.) that the contract was illegal under s. 2 of Act XIX of 1857, and that the plaintiffs could not sue upon it. *GUJERAT TRADING COMPANY v. 7. Contract made by company before Registration Act XIX of 1857, s. 2.—In a suit brought by a transferee of shares in a joint-stock banking company formed after the passing of Act VII of 1860, and neither incorporated nor registered when the plaint was filed, to compel the directors, trustees, and public officers of the company to give up the share certificates which had come into the possession of the bank, or to pay damages to the plaintiff, Held (by COUCH, C.J., and SARGENT, J.) that affirming on appeal the decree of ARNOULD, J. that

8. Payment in consideration of releasing person from prison.—The plaintiff's husband being in jail, the plaintiff agreed with the defendants to pay them Rs50 in consideration of their obtaining her husband's release, which they stated they could do. She accordingly paid the money. In an action for breach of contract, Held the action would not lie, as the contract was an illegal one. PROTIMA AURAT v. DUKHINA SIKHAR [9 B. L. R., Ap., 38: 18 W. R., 450]

9. Contract to obtain more favourable assessment by means not stated.—In a written agreement the defendant, in consideration of a sum of money received by him, promised to obtain a more favourable assessment upon certain villages in respect of waste and cultivated lands, and in case of failure to repay the amount received, Held that the contract was not vitiated by reason of illegality. Aliter if it appeared upon the face of the plaintiff's written agreement, that the arrangement was that the defendant should use corrupt or illegal means, or improperly exercise any personal influence which he possessed or professed to possess over a public servant. PICHARKUTTY MUDALI v. NARAYANAPPA AIYAN [2 Mad., 243]

10. Suit to recover bribe to Ameen.—A civil suit does not lie to recover money paid to a Civil Court Ameen to induce him to make a favourable report. GOGUN CHUNDER DUTT v. JANAKEE 20 W. R., 235

11. Contract not to alienate—Agreement—Consideration.—By a written instrument, duly registered, T agreed, in consideration of the recognition by his two brothers of his rights in the joint and undivided property of the three brothers, not to sell, transfer, or mortgage his share except to them, and, should he desire to dispose of it, to dispose of it to them for a certain sum. In breach of this agreement, he gave a usufructuary mortgage of his share to L. Held, in a suit by L to enforce the mortgage, that the agreement was valid, and that the mortgage was bad against T's brothers. LAKHMI CHAND v. TORI LAL I. L. R., 1 All., 618

12. Agreement for release of attached property—Contract Act, s. 20—Mistake of fact.—Where the property of a judgment-debtor had been attached in execution for a sum claimed to be due under a decree, but which sum in fact included interest not awarded by the decree, Held that an agreement, whereby the debtor obtained the release of his property on condition of paying by instalments the entire amount claimed inclusive of the interest, was not unlawful and void under s. 23 of the Indian Contract Act; and that the mistaken belief of the parties to the agreement that interest could be recovered by proceedings in execution was not a mistake of fact rendering the agreement

The period for which S was responsible for F's good conduct having expired without F committing any act to forfeit the security and S refusing to return the deposit, F sued S to recover the deposit. farm of the right of retail opium at certain shops in a district, and whose lease contained a clause prohibiting sub-letting without the Collector's permission, entered into an agreement with the defendant to sub-let to him, on certain conditions, the management of certain shops in the district for one year without the Collector's permission. After the expiration of the year, the plaintiff brought a suit against the defendant to recover the balance due to him under the agreement, and obtained a decree. Held, reversing the decree, that the agreement not being permitted by the rules framed under the Opium Act (I of 1878) was forbidden by s. 4 of the Act, and was void as having in view an object forbidden by law. Held, further, that the plaintiff could not recover the price of the opium supplied to the defendant, inasmuch as advances made for an illegal purpose, subsequently carried out, cannot be recovered. RAGHUNATH LALMAN v. Land Revenue Act (XIX of 1873), s. 125.—By a mutual agreement entered into between the parties to a private partition of certain villages held by them jointly the parties agreed that, if either party at the time of the partition was holding sir land in a village which upon partition fell into the share of the other party, he would relinquish his rights in such sir land in favour of the party into whose share the said village had fallen. Held that under such private partition the holder of the sir land became, on partition being effected, an exproprietary tenant in respect of the land previously held by him as sir, and that consequently the agreement to relinquish his rights in such land was not enforceable in law. KASHI PRASAD v. KEDAR NATH SAHU [I. L. R., 20 All., 219]

21. — Agreement by plaintiff and defendant not to bid against each other at an auction.—There is nothing necessarily unlawful in two or more persons agreeing not to bid against one another at an auction-sale. HARI BALKRISHNA v. NABO MORRESHVAR . I. L. R., 18 Bom., 342

22. — Condition against sub-contract—sub-contract made notwithstanding condition—Suit by sub-contractor—Illegality of sub-contract—Damages—Compensation for work done.—Defendant contracted with the Executive Engineer of the Public Works Department to supply materials for the construction of a public road. One of the conditions of the contract was that no work was to be underlet, or let by task work, by the contractor without the express permission, in writing, of the Executive Engineer or his duly authorized agent. Subsequently the defendant, without obtaining the requisite permission, entered into an oral agreement with the plaintiff, under which the plaintiff was to do the contract work and the defendant to pay him all moneys received from the Executive Engineer under the contract, after deducting ten per cent., as the defendant's profit. It did not appear that the plaintiff

knew of the condition against underletting contained in the contract. The plaintiff sued the defendant for the balance of money due to him under the oral agreement. The first Court found that the plaintiff had executed the whole of the contract work; and that the defendant had received from the Executive Engineer a total sum of R2,766-11-11, and of this had paid to the plaintiff R2,334-13-6, leaving a sum of R431-14-5 still in his hands. It ordered the defendant to pay this sum to the plaintiff less 10 per cent. of the whole sum of R2,766-11-11, and passed a decree accordingly for R155-3-8. On appeal the Judge varied the decree by awarding to the plaintiff the whole sum of R431-14-5. He found that it had been agreed that the defendant should retain 10 per cent., but held that the agreement to assign or sublet the contract was contrary to public policy, and bad under s. 23 of the Contract Act (IX of 1872). On appeal to the High Court, Held (reversing the decree of the Judge and restoring that of the first Court) that as it did not appear that the plaintiff knew of the condition in the contract, and as the objection of illegality was not taken by the defendant, the plaintiff was not precluded from enforcing against the defendant his own contract. Even if, however, the plaintiff could not enforce the contract, he would, under the circumstances, be entitled to receive from the defendant compensation for the work and labour of which the defendant had received the benefit. The only question was how the work done should be valued. There was no direct test of its market value. The best available test was the amount which the plaintiff, at the time when he entered into the agreement, accepted as sufficient, namely, the amount to be paid by the Executive Engineer less 10 per cent. The High Court, therefore, restored the decree of the Subordinate Judge. GAYADHAR RAGHUNATH JOSHI v. DAMODAR MOHANLAL . . . I. L. R., 21 Bom., 522

23. — Unlawful agreement—Promissory note given in fraud of insolvency law—Illegal consideration.—In a suit on a promissory note it appeared that it had been given by the defendant to the plaintiff in consideration of his withdrawing his threatened opposition to the discharge of an insolvent and consenting to an arrangement among the general body of creditors, who were not, though the insolvent was, aware of this transaction whereby the plaintiff was to obtain a special advantage. Held that the contract was unlawful, and the suit could not be maintained. KRISHNADEVA CHETTI v. ADIVULA MUDALI . I. L. R., 20 Mad., 84

24. — Illegal contract—Compound interest—Sonthal Parganas Settlement Regulation (III of 1873), s. 6—Sonthal Parganas Justice Regulation (V of 1893), s. 21—Contract Act, s. 21—"Unlawful" consideration, meaning of.—There is no law or regulation laying down that an agreement between any two persons living in the Sonthal Parganas to pay compound interest upon the amount borrowed is "unlawful" within the meaning of s. 23 of the Contract Act. 31. — Prohibiting discharge of obligation attaching under decree of Court.—A became surety for certain judgment-debtors, whose property had been attached in execution of a decree, but who had agreed with the decree-holder to liquidate the amount of the decree by yearly instalments. An agreement between A and the judgment-debtors contained the following conditions: "If any of the instalments be paid by the said A, the obligors shall not be at liberty to liquidate the remaining instalments either from their own funds or by borrowing money; but that A shall continue to pay the instalments as they fall due, and shall hold possession of the estate." The judgment-debtors afterwards satisfied the decree in full. Held in a suit against them by A that the above condition was void as contrary to public policy, as it prohibited the discharge of an obligation which, by decree of Court, the judgment-debtors were ordered to pay. LALL MUNEE v. In consideration for these services, the defendant was to pay the plaintiff the sum of Rs. 5,000, which sum was to become due on the marriage of the defendant's youngest brother to a girl of the caste, and to be expended in purchasing caste utensils, which were to be kept for the use of the caste. The suit was brought, and was conducted by the plaintiff and the defendant jointly, and was decreed by the High Court on appeal, and the defendant obtained possession of half the property. The plaintiff sued to recover possession of the half on the ground that the agreement was illegal and void. It appeared that the amount actually spent by the defendant in the former litigation was Rs. 368, and that, if that suit had failed, he would have lost about Rs. 600. It was found that the value of the half share of the property was about Rs. 1,000. Held that the agreement was unfair, unreasonable, extortionate, and contrary to public policy within the meaning of s. 23 of the Contract Act (IX of 1872), and that the plaintiff was entitled to recover possession of the land in suit on payment of compensation for the advances made by the defendant in the former litigation, with interest at 12 per cent. per annum. Chunni Kuar v. 64. — Compounding charge of fraudulent abstraction of documents—English Common Law rule.—The plaintiff, a resident of Pondicherry, held a bond from one of the defendants (the second) for a certain sum of money. This bond the plaintiff charged the said defendant before the French legal authorities with having fraudulently abstracted from his house in Pondicherry, and he obtained the arrest and extradition from the British territory of the second defendant, as also of his brother, the first defendant. The latter on his way to Pondicherry met the plaintiff, and a settlement of accounts took place. The fifth, sixth, seventh, and eighth defendants made themselves liable by executing the bond sued on for the sum found due to the plaintiff, and took indemnity bonds to themselves from the first defendant, the consideration being the agreement of the plaintiff to discontinue further proceedings in the criminal charge. The Court at Pondicherry sanctioned the agreement as a compromise by civil redress, and suspended further proceedings in accordance with the law in force in the settlement. Held that the contract was enforceable, the facts of the case not showing the compromise to be in its nature prejudicial as being in contravention of public policy under the Government of British India, or injurious to the good order and interests of society in regard to the administration of public justice. The English Common Law rule, that contracts for the compounding or suppression of criminal charges for offences of a public nature are illegal and void

RAMAJIT SINGH* . . . I. L. R., 3 All., 737

5. ———— Consideration—Post-nuptial contracts—Contract partly legal and partly illegal.—The defendant, a Mahomedan husband, executed a kabinnama in favour of his wife, by which he agreed, among other things, that he would maintain her and make over to her whatever money he should earn; that he would never exercise any violence upon her; that he would not take her away from home; that it should not be within his power to marry or make any nika without her permission; that he would do nothing without her permission, and, if he did, she should be at liberty to divorce him, and realize from him the amount of dinmohur for her dowry, and the nika would then be null and void. The plaintiff sued her husband upon this document, which was registered, to recover from him all his earnings amounting to Rs 665, after deducting Rs 54, which she admitted having received from him. The lower Appellate Court held, reversing the decision of the Munsif, that the agreement had been made subsequently to the marriage, and was, though registered, void for want of consideration. Held on appeal that the agreement, being registered, came within s. 25 of the Contract Act, and was not void on the ground that there was no consideration. Although some parts of the agreement might be illegal as being contrary to public policy, and therefore void, yet those which were legal could be enforced. (See Davlat Singh v. Pandu, I. L. R., 9 Bom., 17.) The Court treated the suit as one to enforce that part only of the contract which was legal, and considered the plaintiff entitled to recover a fair sum for her maintenance.

which was then under attachment, but on that day all of s. 25 (3) of Act IX of 1872 includes a "judgment-debt," and such petition was a promise to pay a debt barred by limitation within the meaning of that law, and a suit founded on such petition to recover the balance of the money due under the decree was maintainable. *BILLINGS v. 13. ———— Promise to pay barred debt—Document containing requisites of s. 25.—A document sufficiently complies with s. 25 of the Contract Act when it is signed by the person to be charged, and refers to the debt in such a way as to identify it, and contains a promise to pay wholly or in part the debt referred to therein, or expresses an intention to pay which can be construed to be a "promise." To create a "promise" within the meaning of the section, it is not necessary that there should be an accepted proposal reduced to writing, a written proposal, accepted before action, becoming by the definition clause a promise when accepted. The words of the section show that it is the debt, and not a sum of money in consideration of the barred debt that the promisor should refer to. In defence to a suit for rent, a tenant pleaded that a portion of the claim was barred by limitation. Plaintiff relied on a letter which had been signed by defendant, after the disputed portion had become barred, and in which the defendant, after referring to the periods in respect of which the arrears of rent were due, said, "I shall send by the end of Vysakha month." Held that the document contained the ingredients required by s. 25, cl. (3), of the Contract Act, and that the claim was not barred by limitation. APPA RAO v. SURYAPPA RAO

14. ———— Acknowledgment of barred debt—Kistbundi, Suit on—Limitation Act, XIV of 1859, s. 4.—A obtained a decree in 1858 against B, but did not apply for execution till 1864, when B, although objecting that the decree was barred, presented to the Court, under arrangement with A, a petition acknowledging a certain sum to be due, and executed a kistbundi agreeing to pay the debt by monthly instalments. B paid several instalments, but did not do so on one occasion, until execution was taken out against her. On her death shortly afterwards, execution was taken out against her representatives. The representatives objected that the decree was barred, and that the kistbundi could not be substituted for the decree. The objection was, on appeal to the High Court, allowed. A then brought a suit on the kistbundi. Held that, at the time the kistbundi was entered into, the decree was, under the limitation law then in force, capable of being executed, and that there was, therefore, valid consideration for the kistbundi. Held, also, that even had there been no valid consideration for the kistbundi, yet the principle laid down in s. 25, cl. 3, of Act IX of 1872, and which prevailed before the passing of that Act, would have saved the kistbundi from becoming void for want of consideration. *HEERA LALL MOOKHOPADHYA v. J, having conveyed the boiler across the nala spanned by the bridge and finally to the place of destination, sued to recover from C the money expended by him in so doing, alleging breach of contract. It was held that the suit was rightly dismissed on the ground that the agreement was voidable by C under the provisions of s. 19 of Act IX of 1872. In pursuance of the agreement, D and E went to Madras, and entered into the service of the firm. After it had continued for about 2½ years, the service was determined by notice from the firm. D and E then, in violation of their said covenants, refused to return to England, though requested to do so by the firm, and proceeded to set up and carry on, on their own account, business of the same kind as that carried on by the firm. Held, in a suit by the firm against D and E for damages for breaches of the said covenants, and for a perpetual injunction restraining D and E from carrying on in Madras, or within 800 miles from Madras, any business carried on by the firm, that, treating the covenant in restraint of trade as one entered into in England, it could not, even if valid by the law of England, be enforced in India, inasmuch as its object was to contravene the law of India (s. 27 of Act IX of 1872). Held, further, that that covenant would have been void by the law of England because the limit of the restriction was unreasonable, and, as no narrower limit had been mentioned in the agreement, this was not a case where the covenant could have been enforced within a narrower and reasonable limit. Held, also, that the covenant to return to England, except so far as it operated improperly in restraint of trade, was a covenant the breach of which did not in any way cause damage to the firm, and therefore such breach did not entitle them to any damages. *OAKES v. 9. ——— Contract in restraint of trade—Construction of contract.—A contract under which goods were purchased at a certain rate for the Cuttack market, containing a stipulation that, if the goods went to Madras, a higher rate should be paid for them, is not one in restraint of trade; and where the purchaser sold the goods to a person in Calcutta, who in turn resold to another, who took them to Madras,—Held that the original purchasers were, under the terms of the contract, liable to pay at the enhanced rate. *PREM SOOK v. 10. ——— Partial restraint of trade.—S. 27 of the Contract Act does away with the distinction observed in the English cases between partial and total restraint of trade, and makes all contracts falling within its terms void unless they fall within its exceptions. The section was intended to prevent a partial as well as a total restraint of trade. A and B, two ghat serangs, entered into a contract with X and five others who carried on the business of dubashes at Chittagong for the purpose of carrying on their respective businesses in unanimity and not injuring one another's trade. The contract, which was to last for three years, provided, inter alia, that A and B were to act as ghat serangs only and do no service to ships in any other capacity; that X and the other dubashes were to give A five vessels secured by them every year for him to act as ghat serang; and that A was only to act as ghat serang to the said five ships, and, with the exception of ships for which he had previously acted as ghat serang, he should not act as ghat serang or do any other services for ships belonging to any one else. The contract also contained provisions as to the apportionment of the five ships so to be given to A amongst the various dubashes, and amongst such, an agreement by X to give A the third ship he should secure. It also contained a provision for the payment of Rs. 1,000 as damages by any one breaking the contract to the person who should suffer by the breach. In a suit by A against X alleging a breach of the contract by the latter in not giving him the third ship as agreed, and claiming Rs. 1,000 by way of damages, X pleaded that the contract was void under s. 27 of the Contract Act as being in restraint of trade. Held that the contention was sound, and that the suit must be dismissed.

The effect of s. 43 of the Contract Act is not to create a joint and several liability in such a case. The mother of the infant sons intervened and the attachment was raised, and M and S were referred to a regular suit to establish their claims. In January 1878 V was declared insolvent. M and S respectively sued to have it declared that the house No. 9, A Street, was liable to be attached and sold in satisfaction of their decrees against V. 1. — Breach of contract—Impossibility to perform a portion arising after execution.—A contract was entered into between the plaintiff and the defendant, by which the plaintiff agreed to cultivate indigo for the defendant, for a specified number of years, in certain specified lands, situated in different villages, with respect to portion of which lands the plaintiff was a sub-tenant only. Subsequently, during the continuance of the contract, the plaintiff lost possession of these lands, through his immediate landlord having failed to pay the rent, and having been in consequence ejected therefrom by the owner. In a suit by him, under the above circumstances, to have so much of the contract as related to these lands cancelled, on the ground that it had become impossible of performance through no neglect on his part. Held that such a case came within the provisions of cl. 2, s. 56 of Act IX of 1872 (Contract Act), and that the mere fact that the plaintiff could have paid up the debt due by his immediate landlord and so retained possession of the land was not sufficient to constitute such an omission or neglect on his part as to take it out of the provisions of that section. IMRER PERSHAD SINGH & CAMPBELL

2. — Contract to carry passengers in ship—Passengers infected with disease—Error in performance of contract—Implied term in contract—Performance becomes illegal—Penal Code (XIV of 1860), s. 288.—By a contract made with the plaintiffs the defendants agreed to carry from Bombay to Jeddah, in their steamer Mobile, 500 pilgrims who were about to arrive in Bombay from Singapore in the plaintiffs' ship the Stars. The defendants were to be paid at the rate of Rs 6 per head, and the ship Mobile was to receive the pilgrims on the 3rd May 1888. The Stars arrived in Bombay on the 1st May with about 600 pilgrims on board, and on the 2nd May the plaintiffs gave notice to the defendants that 500 of them were ready to go on board the Mobile on the next day in accordance with the contract. The defendants refused to receive the pilgrims on board the Mobile on the ground that they had come to Bombay in the Stars, and that during the voyage of that ship to Bombay there had been an outbreak of small-pox on board; that the 500 pilgrims had been in close contact with those who had been suffering from the disease, and that on the 3rd May fresh cases were occurring among the pilgrims brought from Singapore. They pleaded that under these circumstances they were not bound to ship and carry the 500 pilgrims, contending (1) that it was an implied term in the contract that the 500 pilgrims should be free from small-pox or other dangerous disease, and (2) that the performance of the contract had under the circumstances become unlawful (s. 289 of the Penal Code and s. 56 of the Contract Act). Held that the defendants were bound to carry out the contract. In the absence of proof, that a term providing that the pilgrims should be free from small-pox was to be implied by the usage of the pilgrim-carrying trade, there could be no reason for implying it. The possibility that some of the 500 pilgrims might have the germs of the disease in them owing to their exposure to infection, might make carrying them more expensive and onerous, but it was a contingency which from the very nature of the trade must have been known to the defendants, and if they wished to provide against it, they should have done so by express terms. Held, also, that the performance of the contract had not become unlawful. The risk of disease was not greater than would necessarily be incurred in every crowded emigrant ship. But, even if special precautions were desirable under the circumstances, it was for the defendants, who had entered into an absolute agreement, to have taken them. BOMBAY AND PERSIA STEAM NAVIGATION CO. & RERATING COMPANY

The defendant did not pay the Rs 400 or give the bond, but pleaded that there had been a novation of the original contract by reason of the subsequent agreement, and that the suit, being based on the original contract, could not be maintained, and he relied on the provisions of ss. 62 and 63 of the Contract Act in support of his contention. Held that neither section had any bearing on the case, and that upon the breach by the defendant of the terms which he had made, and upon the non-performance by him of

2. ———— Money paid under compulsion of law—Voluntary payment.—A mortgagee of two separate properties became by purchase the owner of the equity of redemption of one of them, and of this property the value was so proportioned to his payments that the mortgage-debt was in effect satisfied. This mortgagee, however, obtained a decree and order in execution for the sale of the other property, on which his mortgage was the second. Of the latter property, the plaintiffs, who also represented the first mortgagee, had become purchasers, and they filed objections to the sale. These were disallowed, and they thereupon paid into Court money sufficient to satisfy the decree in order to prevent the sale. Held that this was not a voluntary payment, nor a payment of money equitably due; but one made under compulsion of law, i.e., under pressure of the execution-proceedings. And held that this might be recovered in a suit for a money-decree, the remedy not being confined to the execution-proceedings. DULICHAND v. RAMKISHEN SINGH

3. ———— Reimbursement of person paying money due by another in payment of which he is interested—Purchase of mortgaged property.—M and R conveyed certain property to S by a deed of sale, in which the vendors asserted themselves to be in possession of the property, and no mention was made of the property being mortgaged. There was nothing to show that the purchaser purchased a mere equity of redemption, nor that he was aware of the mortgage. Before S obtained possession of the property, the mortgagee sued to enforce his lien and obtained a decree and attached the property in execution, and it was advertised for sale. S satisfied the decree, which was equal in amount to the purchase-money, and brought a suit to obtain possession of the property. The Court of first instance decreed the claim conditionally on the payment of the purchase-money to the defendants, but the lower Appellate Court reversed the decree, being of opinion that the plaintiff was entitled to an unconditional decree, and its decree was affirmed in special appeal. *MAZHA ALI v. On its being contended that defendant was under no obligation to provide for the expenses of his brother's daughter's marriage,—Held that defendant was liable, the marriage having been properly performed. Held, further, that the suit was maintainable, though it had been brought by the mother of the bride, and not by the bride herself. Semble—That the mother was, within the meaning of s. 69 of the Indian Contract Act, interested in making the payment which had given rise to the action. Mortgage—Decree enforcing hypothecation—Satisfaction of decree by person not subject to legal obligation thereunder—Suit for contribution brought by such person against judgment-debtor—Gratuitous payment.—The widow of D, a separated Hindu, hypothecated certain immovable property which had belonged to her husband. The immediate reversioners to D's estate were his nephew S and the three sons of his brother O. After the widow's death, the mortgagee put his bond in suit, impleading as defendants S, two of S's four sons, and the three sons of O. Only the three last-mentioned persons resisted the suit, and the mortgagee obtained a decree directing the sale of the mortgaged property in satisfaction of his claim. From the operation of this decree S was wholly exempted, and his sons were made liable only to pay their own costs. Before any sale in execution of the decree could take place, the sons of S paid the amount of the decree into Court, thus saving the property from sale. They subsequently sued the sons of O for contribution in respect of this payment. It was found that, at the time when the payment was made, S was a member of a joint Hindu family with the defendants, and that his sons, the plaintiffs, had, at that time, no interest in the property by transfer from him. Held that at the time of the payment the plaintiffs could not properly be regarded as in the position of co-mortgagors with the defendants, so as to have an equitable lien upon the property they had saved from sale; that it was not a case of a payment which the defendants were bound to make in which the plaintiffs were "interested" within the meaning of s. 69 of the Contract Act; and that therefore the fiction of an implied request by the defendants to the plaintiff to make the payment could not be imported into the case, and the plaintiffs were not entitled to contribution. Held, also, that there was no such relationship between the parties as would create or justify the inference of any right in the plaintiffs to look to the defendants for compensation so as to make s. 70 of the Contract Act applicable; and that, if the plaintiffs as mere volunteers chose to pay the money not for the defendants, but for themselves, they could not claim the benefits of that section. The principle of the decision in Pancham Singh v. Ali Ahmed, I. L. R., 4 All., 58, has been recognized and provided for in the Transfer of Property Act. By the use of the word "lawfully" in s. 70 of the Contract Act, the Legislature had in contemplation cases in which a person held such a relation to another as either directly to create or reasonably to justify the inference that by some act done for another person, the person doing the act was entitled to look for compensation to the person for whom it was done. Ram Tulul Singh v. K eventually established her title to the property, obtained possession, and recovered the rents from the tenants, and B was obliged to refund the same. Subsequently B sued K to recover the sum which he had paid on account of revenue. Held that the claim did not fall within the provisions of ss. 69 and 70 of the Contract Act, and the fact that the plaintiff had been a loser by his wrongful act, or that the defendant had been benefited by the payment he made, would give him no right of action against her. Tiluk Chand v. In such suit it was contended that the payments were merely voluntary, and that the plaintiff could not recover them. Held that the plaintiff was "interested" in making the payments, and was therefore entitled to recover under s. 69 of the Contract Act. Held, further, that s. 70 of the Contract Act applied to the case, inasmuch as the word "does" in that section includes payments of money, and also that the plaintiff was entitled to recover under s. 9 of the revenue sale law, as he believed in good faith that his interest would be endangered by a sale taking place. The liability of a landlord under s. 9 of the revenue sale law to recony a person paying Government revenue for him does not depend upon the question of whether the money was originally deposited or not, but accrues upon its being credited in payment of the arrears. SMITH v. In such suit it was contended that the payments were merely voluntary, and that the plaintiff could not recover them. Held that the plaintiff was "interested" in making the payments, and was therefore entitled to recover under s. 69 of the Contract Act. Held, further, that s. 70 of the Contract Act applied to the case, inasmuch as the word "does" in that section includes payments of money, and also that the plaintiff was entitled to recover under s. 9 of the revenue sale law, as he believed in good faith that his interest would be endangered by a sale taking place. The liability of a landlord under s. 9 of the revenue sale law to recoup a person paying Government revenue for him does not depend upon the question of whether the money was originally deposited or not, but accrues upon its being credited in payment of the arrears. *SMITH v. paid, but not due, and paid under compulsion.—In execution of a decree, the plaintiff purchased certain property. The plaintiff thereupon presented a claim, which was disallowed, as he had not obtained, and consequently could not produce, the sale certificate. Re-sale, Notice of—Right of unpaid vendors—Nominal damages.—The defendant purchased from the plaintiffs a cargo of Watson's Hartley steam coal at Rs 21 per ton, to arrive by ship Grecian, but on its arrival the defendant, on being called upon to do so, refused to take delivery, on the ground that the usual certificate that the coal was what it was stated to be did not accompany the cargo. The plaintiffs thereupon gave notice to the defendant that, unless delivery were taken, the coal would be sold on his account and at his risk; and on the defendant repeating his refusal to take delivery, the plaintiffs caused the coal to be sold, and it was purchased in the name of M & Co., for Rs 13 per ton. In a suit, which was stated in the plaint to be for the loss sustained by the plaintiffs on the re-sale, the Court found that the plaintiffs themselves were the real purchasers, and that the sale had taken place without proper notice, and under the circumstances was invalid. Held, both in the lower Court and on appeal, that the plaintiffs had, by the way in which they had dealt with the coal, rendered themselves accountable to the defendant in respect thereof, and that, notwithstanding the defendant had committed a breach of the contract in refusing to take delivery of the coal, the plaintiffs were bound to give an account of the coal and prove that they had sustained a loss on the re-sale, and on their omission to do so they were not entitled to recover any damages. Held on appeal per MARKBY, J., that the plaintiffs were not entitled to put aside the sale as invalid and treat the case as one for damages for breach of contract. Under the circumstances, they were not entitled to even nominal damages. The mere shipment on board the Grecian did not pass the property in the coal to the defendant under s. 77 of Act IX of 1872. Per PONTIFEX, J.—Whether, by virtue of the contract and the subsequent appropriation and shipment, the property in the coal passed or did not pass to the defendant within the meaning of s. 84 or s. 83 of Act IX of 1872; even if the sale were invalid, the plaintiffs were not entitled, considering their conduct in dealing with the coal, and the concealment of their interest in the purchase, and in the absence of satisfactory evidence of what ultimately became of the coal, to recover any damages. *BUCHANAN v. Penalty—Suit by a joint proprietor for arrears of rent—Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), s. 29 (b)—Kabuliat executed prior to—Covenant for a higher rate—Enhancement of rent—Bengal Rent Act (VIII of 1869), s. 5.—In a kabuliat executed in 1881, it was stipulated that upon the expiry of the term of seven years fixed therein, a fresh lease should be executed; that should the defendant cultivate the lands without executing a fresh kabuliat, he would pay rent at the rate of Rs 4 a bigha (a rate much higher than that fixed for the term). No fresh kabuliat was executed on expiry of the term, and the plaintiff, a part proprietor, collecting rent separately, brought this suit for arrears of rent at the new rate of Rs 4. The defendant objected, inter alia, that the plaintiff, being a part proprietor, was not entitled to sue for enhanced rent, and that the stipulation for the higher rate was a mere threat, and not intended to be carried out. The first Court gave a decree at an enhanced rate, or an addition of two annas in the rupee, in terms of s. 29 (b) of the Bengal Tenancy Act. On appeal, the Subordinate Judge dismissed the whole suit, on the ground that the suit being one for enhanced rent, and the plaintiff a part proprietor, the suit did not lie. Held that, the kabuliat having been executed before the Bengal Tenancy Act was passed, the present case did not come within the operation of that Act, and the plaintiff, although a part proprietor, could bring this suit. Rani Chunder Chackrabutty v. Giridhar Dutt, I. L. R., 19 Cal., 755, followed. Held by PRINSEP and GHOSE, JJ. (RAMPINI, J., dissenting)—That the additional rent was intended to be enforceable only on default to execute a fresh kabuliat, and the so-called agreement to pay at the enhanced rate of Rs 4 was in the nature of a penalty. Held by RAMPINI, J.—The plea that the rate of Rs 4 was a penalty was not taken by the defendant in his written statement, and, in any case, the stipulation did not come within the purview of s. 74 of the Indian Contract Act, and the suit was not for compensation for breach of contract, but for rent at a rate which the defendant has agreed to pay from a certain time. Held, also, that s. 29 (d) of the Bengal Tenancy Act has no retrospective effect, and does not apply to the present kabuliat, which was executed before the passing of that Act. That s. 5 of Bengal Act VIII of 1869 did not debar an agreement by an occupancy raiyat to pay whatever rate he pleased. *Banke Behari v. Sundar Lal, I. L. 1. ———— excep. 1.—Possession of goods by person other than owner—Title conveyed by vendor to vendee.—The plaintiff let to D a piano on hire on the following terms:—"At R30 per month; if duly paid for and kept three years, shall then become the property of hirer." These terms were embodied in a voucher which was signed by D. The monthly hire was not regularly paid, and the plaintiffs sued for and obtained a decree for a portion of the hire up to May 1873. Subsequently in that month, D sold the piano to the defendant, who obtained delivery of it in June. In a suit by the plaintiff in trover for conversion of the piano, the Judge found that the defendant acted in good faith. Held that the possession acquired by D was not possession by consent of the owner within the meaning of s. 108 of Act IX of 1872, excep. 1, and that he did not, by sale to the defendant, transfer the ownership in the piano to him. Excep. 1 of s. 108 does not apply where there is only a qualified possession, such as a hirer of goods has, or where the possession is for a specific purpose. GREENWOOD v. HOLQUETTE. 12 B. L. R., 42; 20 W. R., 467

2. ———— Possession with consent of owner—Bailment—Bailee—Sale by bailee of goods bailed—Title of vendee.—The general rule laid down by s. 103 of the Contract Act that no seller can give to a buyer a better title than he has himself is qualified by excep. 1 to that section. But the possession contemplated by that exception does not extend to every case of detention of chattels with the owner's consent. The exception has particular relation to the cases of persons allowed by owners to have the indicia of property, or possession under such circumstances as may naturally induce others to regard them as owners, and constituting some degree of negligence or defect of precaution imputable to the true owners. Where, however, the detention of a chattel is allowed for a particular limited purpose, there is not a possession such as is required by the exception. In the case of a gratuitous bailment of a chattel, the possession remains constructively with the owner. S left with C a buffalo and a calf, to be taken care of during his absence from home. C sold the animals to M. S sued to recover them. Held that the bailment by S to C was a gratuitous one, or else a mere custody by C for S; that S was, therefore, at the time of sale in constructive possession of the animals, and C could not transfer to M an ownership that he had not himself. *SHANKAR MURLIDHAR v. 1. ————— Jurisdiction of District Court—Suit for dissolution of partnership and for account.—The suit was brought for a dissolution of partnership between plaintiff and first defendant, and for an account as between them. It was alleged in the plaint that plaintiff and first defendant entered into partnership in 1864 to work a jungle in the North Arcot District which had been leased to plaintiff for three years; that fourth defendant was subsequently admitted a partner, and that the contract was carried on under the style of R T & Co.; that in March 1867, fourth defendant took up a contract in Madras and another general partnership was established, of which plaintiff and first defendant were members; that the funds of the first firm became incorporated in the second firm, which was styled K T & K, and that this firm undertook several contracts in Madras and Chingleput; and finally, that the cause of action was the refusal of first defendant to account, and accrued in North Arcot District, where all the defendants resided permanently. The District Judge dismissed the suit on the ground that, under s. 265 of the Contract Act, he had no jurisdiction. Held on appeal that the District Court of North Arcot had jurisdiction, as the defendants were resident within the district; that the provision in the Contract Act is permissive, and does not prohibit a suit elsewhere than at the place where the partnership was carried on if a sufficient ground of jurisdiction

Jurisdiction of District Court—Suit for adjustment of accounts of a partnership.—S. 265 of the Contract Act, while it enables a partner, after the termination of a partnership, to apply to the District Court to wind up the business, does not take away the ordinary right of suit in any Civil Court having jurisdiction to have the accounts of the partnership taken. Jurisdiction of District Court—Partnership, Winding up.—The Bombay Civil Courts Act, No. XIV of 1869—Power of District Judge to refer to Assistant Judge a case falling under s. 265 of Contract Act.—A previous dissolution of partnership is necessary in order to give jurisdiction to the District Court under s. 265 of the Contract Act. Accordingly, where a suit was instituted in the District Court of Ahmedabad by some members of a partnership (which, however, was not dissolved at the date of the suit) for the winding up of the business of a ginning factory and for distributing among the shareholders any surplus that might remain, after providing for the payment of its debts, under s. 265 of Act IX of 1872, and the Assistant Judge, to whom it was referred for trial by the District Judge, directed the dissolution of the partnership and the winding up of its business, the High Court on appeal reversed the decree of the Assistant Judge, and returned the plaint to the plaintiffs for its presentation to the proper Court. s. 11.—The Court of a Subordinate Judge is inferior to the Court of a District Judge within the meaning of s. 11 of the Civil Courts Act. The word "may" in s. 265 of the Contract Act has a somewhat similar force to the words "it shall be lawful" in a statute, which merely make that legal and possible which there would otherwise be no right or authority to do. And the words "may apply" in the section create a new jurisdiction, which must be exercised strictly in accordance with the statute which creates it, that is to say, the jurisdiction created by the section must be exercised exclusively by a Court not inferior to the Court of a District Judge, within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the place or principal place of business of the firm, which it is sought to wind up, is situated. It was the intention of the Legislature, in enacting s. 265 of the Contract Act, to create a new jurisdiction to be exercised exclusively by the Court of the District Judge; and in the absence of a contract to the contrary, the members of a partnership, or their representatives, cannot obtain the relief mentioned in the section except by resorting to that Court. The presumption that the existing jurisdiction of a Court is not intended to be taken away

13. ——— Payment by judgment-creditor on cross-decree by one only of his judgment-debtors—Payment for arrears of rent.—A decree-holder for arrears of rent against three persons jointly placed certain sums of money in Court to the credit of one of them, viz., the plaintiff, who, in her capacity of guardian of her son, had a cross-decree against him, and afterwards he withdrew those sums in execution of the joint decree. Thereupon the plaintiff sued the other two joint debtors for contribution, as she had repaid to her minor son the sum of money so taken away. Held that the payment by the plaintiff to her minor son was a voluntary payment, and was not therefore such a payment as entitled her to sue her joint debtors for contribution. RAJAKHAI DEBI v. The Collector having called upon the proprietors to pay the fees of the Ameen, the plaintiff's payment of the whole amount was not a voluntary payment, as the Collector could have sold the whole estate to realize the fees. Certain property belonging to the deceased having been attached and advertised for sale, plaintiffs paid the costs due under the Privy Council decree, and then sued for contribution. Held that defendants were liable for the sum paid in excess of plaintiff's share. ABRUDULLAH v. the rights of the parties could be settled in a regular suit. A then sued B for a refund of the money on the ground that at the time of B's attaching the property his decree against C had been already satisfied. The Zilla Court gave a decree for A upon the merits. The High Court, on appeal, held that the payment into Court was a voluntary payment, and therefore A had no right of action against B. Held (reversing the decision of the High Court) that the payment was not a voluntary payment. FATIMA KHATUN v. sued the mortgagor and the plaintiff for the mortgage-money, claiming to recover it by the sale of the portion of such estate purchased by the plaintiff. Having obtained a decree, the mortgagee caused a portion of such portion to be sold in the execution of the decree. In order to save the remainder of such portion from sale in the execution of the decree, the plaintiff satisfied the judgment-debt. The plaintiff then sued the defendants for contribution. Held that, assuming that the mortgagee, by not including the defendants in his suit upon the mortgage-bond, had put it out of his power to proceed at law by another suit on the basis of the same bond against the properties in the possession of the defendants as purchasers, it did not follow that the plaintiff's equitable right to recover a fair contribution from the defendants on the ground of his having paid the whole debt due to the mortgagee was thereby invalidated. *JAGAT NARAIN v. 28. ———— Joint mortgage—Purchase of share in mortgage at sale in execution.—T and D in May 1867 jointly mortgaged their respective two biswas shares of a certain village. In August 1877, the mortgagee sued to recover the mortgage-money by the sale of the mortgaged property, and obtained a decree. Before this decree was executed, L obtained a decree against D, in execution of which his two biswas share was put up for sale on the 20th June 1878, and was purchased by A. Subsequently the mortgagee applied for execution of his decree, and D's two biswas share were attached and advertised for sale in execution thereof. In order to save such share from sale, A, on the 29th June 1878, satisfied the mortgagee's decree. He then sued P, D's co-mortgagor, to recover half the amount he had so paid, by the sale of P's two biswas. Held that, inasmuch as, when A discharged the whole amount of the mortgage-debt, he not only became entitled to a contribution of half such amount from P, but, having acquired the rights of the mortgagee, was competent to assert a lien on P's two biswas share, A was entitled to a decree as claimed. *PANCHAM SINGH v. The suit was dismissed by the first Court, but on appeal the order was "Appeal decreed." A entered into a compromise with B, and entered satisfaction of a moiety of the decree. He afterwards issued execution of the other moiety against C, and compelled him to pay. C now sued B for recovery of the proportion of the amount paid by him to A, but which, according to the valuation of the respective properties, should have fallen into the share of B. Held that the debt due upon the mortgage-bond was a general burden upon the two properties, for which no portion of those two properties was more liable than the other. Held also that, as between the plaintiff and defendant, the liability was not joint, but several, in proportion to the respective values of the properties, and that the plaintiff, having been compelled to pay money for which the property of the defendant was legally liable, was entitled to recover the amount from the defendant. *BHAIRAB CHANDRA MADAK v. A summary order of an inferior Court for the execution of a decree may be conclusive as between the decree-holder who obtained it and those against whom it was made, but is not necessarily so against the latter as between themselves only. Such an order has not necessarily the same effect, so far as contribution is concerned, as if it were the original decree in the suit. NUND COOMAR SINGH v. GANGA PERSHAD [3 W. R., 207]

The zamindar thereupon brought a suit against them to have his right to measure declared, and obtained a joint decree with costs. In that case no suit for contribution will lie. 3. ——— Trespass on land—Conversion of moveables lying on land—Civil Procedure Code, s. 43.—Defendants having forcibly taken possession of plaintiff's land upon which was (1) standing timber and (2) logs of timber lying stered on the ground, plaintiff had, in a prior suit, recovered possession and damages. Subsequently to the institution of such prior suit defendants (1) cut and removed certain standing trees, and (2) removed the logs which lay stered on the ground. Upon plaintiff bringing a second suit to recover damages on both grounds, objection was raised as to the logs, that a claim for their value might have been included in the former suit, since their conversion was effected when the plaintiff was dispossessed of the land upon which they lay, and that, under s. 43, no claim could now be made in respect of them. Held that a trespass on a piece of land is by itself no proof of any conversion of moveables lying upon the land at the time that the trespass takes place; that, notwithstanding plaintiff's eviction from the land, possession of the timber lying stered upon it should be presumed to have continued in him in the absence of proof of any act on the part of the defendant with special reference to such timber and showing unequivocally that the plaintiff was entirely deprived of the use of them; and that conversion of the logs was not effected by the trespass, but only by their removal subsequently to the institution of the previous suit. *MOXI v. 8. ————— Converts from Hindu to Mahomedan religion—Custom as to inheritance.—The general presumption arising from the intimate connection between law and religion in the Mahomedan faith is that the Mahomedan law governs converts from the Hindu religion to Mahomedanism. But a well-established custom in the case of such converts to follow their old Hindu law of inheritance would override that general presumption, and a usage establishing a special rule of inheritance as regards a special kind of property would be given the force of law, even though it be at variance with both Hindu and Mahomedan laws. *MAHOMED SIDDIQ v. 9. ————— Suni Borah Mahomedans—Conversion, Effect of—Hindu converts to Mahomedanism, Custom and usage of—Inheritance among such converts—Native Christians—Law applied to Native Christians prior to Indian Succession Act (X of 1865)—Burden of proof.—The Suni Borah Mahomedan community of the Dhandhuka Taluka in Gujarat are governed by the Hindu law in matters of succession and inheritance. Held, therefore, that in this community a widow is entitled to succeed to her husband's estate to the exclusion of a daughter or a step-daughter. As to the law governing Hindu converts to Mahomedanism, the following principles may now be regarded as settled:—(1) Mahomedan law generally governs converts to that faith from Hinduism; but (2) a well-established custom of such converts following the Hindu law of inheritance would override the general presumption. (3) This custom should be confined strictly to cases of succession and inheritance. (4) If any particular custom of succession be alleged which is at variance with the general law applicable to these communities, the burden of proof lies on the party alleging such special custom. If evidence is given as to the general prevalence of Hindu rules of succession in a Mahomedan community in preference to the rules of Mahomedan law, the burden of proof is discharged, and it then rests with the party disputing the particular Hindu usage in the question to show that it is excluded from the sphere of the proved general usage of the community. Among Native Christians, certain classes strictly retain the old Hindu usages, others retain these usages in a modified form, and others again wholly abandon them. Before the Indian Succession Act (X of 1865), the Christian convert could elect to attach himself to any one of these particular classes, and he would be governed by the usage of the class to which he so attached himself. Abraham v. Abraham, 9 Moo. I. A., 195. These same principles are applied to the case of Hindu converts to Mahomedanism, such as Khojas and Cutchi Memons. BAI BAIJI v. BAI SANTOK

But, although that is a good ground for questioning the propriety of a prosecution, it is not a ground for questioning the legality of a conviction. QUEEN v. ACHEET LALL . . . 17 W. R., Cr., 46

24. ——— Irregularity in criminal proceedings.—Prejudging defence.—Upon the single charge of wrongful confinement preferred under s. 342 of the Penal Code, before a Joint Magistrate, the prisoners raised a defence justifying the confinement on the ground that the persons confined had been caught by them under circumstances which led to the belief that they had committed house-breaking by night with intent to commit theft. Enquiry having been made, the Magistrate committed the prisoner not only for wrongful confinement, but, disbelieving the defence, for fabricating false evidence and for bringing a false charge. The prisoners were tried by the Sessions Judge and found guilty on all three charges at one and the same time. Held that the conviction on the last two charges was illegal, as by adding the additional charges the Magistrate had really prejudged the defence to the first charge. Where the Court, without having first heard the evidence for the prosecution, examines the witnesses for the defence, he commits an irregularity, but if the prisoners are not materially prejudiced thereby, the conviction will not be set aside. IN THE MATTER OF TURIBULLAH . . . 4 C. accordingly sent by S to the defendant at Delhi requesting him to send the books to Bombay by value-payable post, which the defendant did, and he received payment for them from the post office at Delhi. The defendant pleaded (inter alia) that the High Court of Bombay had no jurisdiction, and he denied that he had infringed the plaintiffs' copyright. Held that no part of the plaintiffs' cause of action arose in Bombay, and that the High Court of Bombay had no jurisdiction. The act of S in paying for and receiving the goods formed no part of the defendant's offence, which was completed when he posted the books at Delhi. The English Copyright Act (Stat. 5 & 6 Vic., c. 45) extends to all parts of India. Having regard to s. 15 of that Act, it is clear that a person who infringes copyright must be sued, if he offends in India, not only within the limits of that country, but also in that part of India in which the offence has been committed. See also s. 13 of the Indian Act XX of 1847. Held, also, that translations are not copies, and that the defendant, by translating the books, had not infringed the plaintiffs' copyright. The plaintiffs had registered themselves as the proprietors of the copyright of the books in question both in London and in India. The defendant had not given notice of his intention to dispute the plaintiffs' copyright as required by s. 8 of Act XX of 1847. Held that the plaintiffs' copyright in the book had been established. *MACMILLAN v. P, and in another poem one line. In many places there were differences of reading in the two books, and in more of punctuation. In the defendant's book some of the titles to the poems, which had been assigned thereto by P and not by the original authors, appeared as well as good many of P's notes, some with acknowledgment and some without. With each poem the defendant gave a mass of notes, critical and explanatory, and he also prefixed to the poems of each author a biographical notice. The suit was instituted on the 27th February 1890, and the plaintiffs complained that the publication of defendant's book constituted a breach of their copyright, and prayed for the usual relief by way of injunction and damages. They contended that, although the copyright in the works of the original authors had long lapsed, they were entitled to the copyright in the "selection" made by P. It was contended on behalf of the defendant that there could be no copyright in such a selection; that if any existed, the defendant's book did not infringe it; that the plaintiffs' book being registered as first published in 1861 and the infringement charged being in respect of the edition of 1882, and there being no evidence to show that the same selection was contained in the latter as in the former edition, the plaintiffs were not entitled to the relief prayed for; that the author of the plaintiffs' book being P, in whom the copyright would prima facie be, and the property being registered as in the plaintiffs' firm, the registry was bad, as the assignment of the copyright to the plaintiffs was not shown; that the registration was also bad, as the entry merely contained the name and address of the plaintiffs' firm, and not the individual names and addresses of the partners of the firm; that the publication of the defendant's book having been before the date of registration, the suit would not lie; and that the suit was barred by the special limitation provided by s. 26 of the Stat. 5 & 6 Vic., c. 45. Held that such "a selection" could be the subject-matter of copyright, the true principle applicable to such cases being that one person is not at liberty to use or avail himself of the labour which another has been at for the purpose of producing his work, and so take away the result of the other's labour, or in other words his property. Held, further, that the defendant's book constituted a piracy of the plaintiffs' book, and had infringed their copyright, and that they were entitled to the relief they sought. Held, also, that in the absence of any evidence to the contrary, it was reasonable to assume that successive issues of a book of this kind under the same name are substantially the same book; that it was unnecessary that the registry should show an assignment of the copyright by P to the plaintiffs: Weldon v. Dicks, L. R., 10 Ch. D., 247, followed; that the registration was not bad by reason of the names and addresses of the partners of the firm not being given: Low v. Routledge, 33 L. J. Ch., 717, and Weldon v. Dicks, L. R., 10 Ch. D., 247, followed; that the title to copyright is complete before registration, which is only a condition precedent to the right to sue, and that the plaintiffs had not therefore lost their right of action by reason of the defendant's book being

5. ————— Form of registration—"Selection" of poems, Copyright in—Infringement of copyright by publication of copy before registration—Assignments of copyright previous to registration—Limitation of suits for infringement of copyright—Stat. 5 & 6 Vic., c. 45.—The plaintiffs, the partners of a firm M & Co., were the proprietors, registered under 5 & 6 Vic., c. 45, of the copyright of a selection of songs and poems, composed by numerous well-known authors, which was prepared by one P, and originally published in 1861. Since the original publication, the book ran through several editions, one of which was published in the year 1882. The book was registered under the provisions of the above statute on the 8th February 1889, the name of both the publisher and proprietor being entered in the register as M & Co., the firm's address being given, and the date of the first publication was entered as the 19th July 1861. The poems contained in the book were arranged by P, not in chronological order of their production, but in gradation of feeling and subject, and at the end of the book were given some notes, critical and explanatory. On the 15th January 1889 the defendant published, at Calcutta, a book containing the same selection of poems and songs as was contained in P's book. The arrangement, however, of the defendant's book differed from P's in that the poems of each author were placed together and in order of their composition. In one of the poems the defendant printed forty lines, which were contained in the work by the original author, but which were omitted by

1. GENERAL RIGHTS IN JOINT PROPERTY.

1. ——— Right of co-sharers—Tenants of co-sharers.—The right of a sharer in a joint estate is a right of common enjoyment of the lands and premises, together with the tenants of the co-sharers, in like manner as the co-sharers themselves would have it. HULODHUR SEN v. GOONOO DAS ROY
[20 W. R., 128]

2. ——— Occupation by co-sharers of separate portions of estate.—The legal position of co-sharers in an estate occupying separate portions in it is that each possesses and holds, in respect of his several right, to enjoy that which is his own. If one holds a portion larger than his share, the inequality may be rectified by a partition, or if a dispute arise on a division of the annual profits, it may be adjusted in a suit for an account. KALEE PERSHAD v. LUTAFUT HOSSEIN
[12 W. R., 418]

3. ——— Use of property by co-sharers or tenants-in-common.—A Court of Equity will not interfere where a tenant-in-common acts reasonably for the purpose of enjoying the property held in common in any way in which an owner can enjoy such property without injury to his coparcener, but the case is different where there has been a direct infringement of a clear and distinct right. GOPEE KISHEN GOSSAIN v. HEM CHUNDER GOSSAIN
[13 W. R., 322]

4. ——— Manager of khoti tenure—Right of manager to abandon rights without consent of co-sharers.—In the absence of evidence of custom rendering the act of one sharer in a khotship (which act involved the sacrifice of important rights) binding upon his co-sharers, a managing khot has, without the assent of his co-sharers, no power to give up rights which belong to them as well as himself. COLLECTOR OF RATHAORI v. VYAN-KATHAY NARAYAN SURVE

[8 Bom., A. C., 1]

5. ——— Sale by some co-sharers—Authority to sell.—Debt due by all the co-sharers.—The mere circumstance of the existence of a debt due from all the co-sharers is by no means of itself enough to confer authority on some of several co-sharers to dispose of the other share. MAHOMED FAIZ ALI KHAN v. GUNGA RAM
[1 Agra, 112]

6. ——— Collection of rent in various kinds for joint tenure—Sharer in ijmalijulkur.—The sharer of an ijmalijulkur is not debarred from collecting his separate julkur jumma if he legally can do so, simply because it suits the purpose of another sharer to receive, in lieu of such a jumma, a consolidated chitti jumma. KASHEE NATH DHUR v. GUDADHUR PAL
[11 W. R., 374]

7. ——— Consent to commutation of rent—Want of consent of all sharers.—When a tenant applied for commutation of rent paid in kind, one of three lumberdars was held entitled to insist upon the adjudication on the amount of the rate as directed by law; and the consent of two other lumberdars to accept a lower rate of rent cannot debar this right. ROOPA v. SAHIB SINGH
[1 Agra, Rev., 58]

8. ——— Rights and limitation of rights of joint owners of property—Alteration of incidents of property.—It is not competent for owners of property in this country, by any arrangement made in their own discretion, to alter the ordinary incidents of the property which they possess; a joint property, therefore, cannot be made impartible in perpetuity by any such arrangement, though the owners may, for sufficient consideration, bind themselves to forego their rights for a specified time and definite purpose by a contract, which could be enforced against them personally. RADHANATH MUKERJEE v. TABRUCKNATH MUKERJEE
[3 C. W. N., 126]

9. ——— Separate payment of share of rent.—A co-sharer in an under-tenure cannot claim separate payment of his share of the rent without the written consent of the zamindar; and if the zamindar refuses to make a division of the property, application should be made to the Collector under s. 27, Act X of 1859. ISSUR CHUNDER GHOSAL v. MOOKTORAM PANDA
[9 W. R., 606]

10. ——— Receipts of rent by co-sharers—Accounts.—Limitation.—Where persons jointly interested in an estate arranged that the rents should be received by an agent, and they themselves sometimes collected direct from the tenants, such collection being treated as a receipt by the agent or by some one on his behalf, and not as a collection antagonistic to the rights of the other joint tenants, the law of limitation is no bar to taking the back accounts. Where one tenant-in-common receives rents and then relinquishes his interest in the estate to another, that other is not answerable to the third tenant-in-common

15. ———— Purchaser of rights of one of several co-sharers—Collections of rent.—A party who purchases the rights of one of a number of co-sharers comes into all arrangements made in respect to the collections; any express consent by him is not necessary for the payment of his share of the rent to any one else. *RAM NATH SINGH v. 18. ———— Payment of arrears of Government Revenue by one co-sharer, Effect of—Charge—Lien—Act XII of 1881 (N.-W. P. Rent Act), ss. 93, 177, 178, 181—N.-W. P. Land Revenue Act (XIX of 1873), ss. 146, 148—Jurisdiction of Civil Court—Salvage, Maritime Civil, Principle of—Act IV of 1882 (Transfer of Property Act), s. 100.—A co-sharer in a mehal, who was also the lumberdar, paid arrears of Government revenue for the years 1882, 1883, and part of 1884, in respect of certain lands in the mehal which were the exclusive property of another co-sharer. These lands were subject to simple mortgages executed in 1873, upon which decrees were obtained in 1884, and had been sold in execution of these decrees in 1887. The co-sharer lumberdar, having obtained a decree in a Court of revenue against the mortgagors under s. 93 (g) of the N.-W. P. Rent Act (XII of 1881) for recovery of the arrears of revenue paid by him, sought to execute that decree under s. 177 of the Act by sale of the lands which had been sold in 1887; and thereupon the auction-purchaser at that sale objected under s. 178, and the objection having been overruled, brought a suit, as authorized by s. 181, in a Civil Court to establish his title to the lands and to have them protected from sale in execution of the Court of Revenue decree. This suit was decreed, and the decree, not having been appealed against, became final. Subsequently, the co-sharer lumberdar brought a suit in the Civil Court, in which he claimed a decree for enforcement of lien by sale of the land for the amount of the Court of Revenue decree, and for a declaration that the said lien, "which is on account of Government," be declared preferential to the mortgages of 1873, the decrees thereon of 1884, and the sales under those decrees of 1887. He claimed this lien not only in respect of the arrears of Government revenue paid, but also in respect of future interest. Held by the Full Bench (MAHMOOD, J., dissenting)—(i) That the Legislature had not given or recognized in the North-Western Provinces any such right of charge or lien in favour of a person paying Government revenue as was claimed here, or provided any means by which such a charge could be enforced, and that any such charge would be at variance with the policy and intention of the Government as disclosed in its legislative enactments. (ii) That no Civil Court had jurisdiction to entertain the suit, and no Court of revenue had jurisdiction to make a decree for sale of the immoveable property or a decree in execution of which the immoveable property could be sold to the prejudice of incumbrances to which it was subject. (iii) That it was not the intention of the Legislature that a Civil Court should have jurisdiction to invest, by declaration or otherwise, a decree of a Court of revenue with the attributes of a decree for sale such as could be passed by a Civil Court in a suit for sale under the Transfer of Property Act, 1882. (iv) That there is no general principle of equity to the effect that whoever having an interest in an estate makes a payment in order to save the estate obtains a charge on the estate; and therefore, in the absence of a statutory enactment, a co-sharer who paid the whole revenue and thus saved the estate does not, by reason of such payment, acquire a charge on the share of his defaulting co-sharer. Kinu Ram Das v. Mozaffer Hosain Shaha, I. L. R., 14 Calc., 809, approved. (v) That the principle of Maritime Civil Salvage had no application to the case, and that no analogy could exist between the case of a salvor in Maritime Civil Salvage and the case of a co-sharer in a mehal to whom s. 146 or s. 148 of the North-Western Provinces Land Revenue Act (XIX of 1873) applied. *Leslie v. In 1873 he began to pay the assessment upon the interest in the land. Both the lower Courts held that the payment of assessment did not create a charge on the property, and that the plaintiff having been excluded from the property and did not pay their quotas of the assessment. Under these circum-

An Act of 1877 (Specific Relief Act), s. 21.—One of several co-sharers in a small holding began to erect a tank, and the plaintiff, upon the ground that the defendant had no right to do so, sought an injunction to restrain the defendant from doing so. The defendant pleaded that the plaintiff was a co-sharer in the land, and that the plaintiff was entitled to a share of the land. The court held that the plaintiff was entitled to a share of the land, but that the defendant was not entitled to erect a tank on the land. Held by the High Court, 12 All., 430.

83. ———— Right of lessee of one co-sharer to hold possession without consent of others—Right of ejectment.—In a suit by a co-sharer for ejectment of a lessee who was holding over after the expiration of his lease at the end of 1275 and after sufficient notice, the defendant pleaded a pottah from the plaintiff's shareholder under which he was entitled to remain to the end of 1282. Held that, as defendant's occupation and enjoyment of the land to the end of the year 1275 had been by virtue and under the authority of two separate leases granted by each shareholder, each co-extensive with his share only, and as that granted by the plaintiff had expired in 1275, the defendant had not had exclusive enjoyment of the property as tenant by virtue of the other lease. And though the other co-sharer had granted a new lease when the first lease expired in 1275, yet as the plaintiff refused to do so, and had ever since treated the defendant as a trespasser, the defendant had no right of occupation so far as regarded the plaintiff's share. *HAMILTON v. SHOSHEE SHEKHARESWAR ROY v. GIRIS CHANDRA LAHIRI . . . I C. W. N., 659

168. ———— Co-sharers, Suit by one of several, for separate share of rent, or in alternative for whole rent due if more than share claimed should be found due—Parties.—The plaintiffs, some of the co-sharers in certain lands, instituted a suit against a tenant and the remaining co-sharer P, alleging that the tenant held under a pottah granted by all the co-sharers; that rent was due from him for the period in suit; and that they had ascertained from P that he alleged that he had received his share of the rent for that period from the tenant, and that he refused to join as plaintiff in the suit. They accordingly prayed (a) for a decree for the amount of their share of the rent against the tenant; (b) if it should appear that any part of P's share of the rent remained unpaid, the requisite extra Court-fee might be received and a decree made for whole of the arrears in favour of themselves and P, and that the latter might, if he consented, be made a co-plaintiff; (c) that if it appeared that P had realized more than his share of the rent, a decree might be made against him for the excess and against the tenant for the balance. The plaintiff also asked for costs and further relief. The tenant contested the suit and submitted that it was in effect a suit for plaintiffs' share of the rent only, and could not therefore be maintained. He further pleaded that the plaintiffs and P were members of a joint Hindn family, of which P was the manager, and that, under arrangement with the latter, he had applied the rent due under the pottah towards the liquidation of debts due under bonds in P's name, but for which the joint family were liable. The first Court dismissed the suit on the preliminary issue that it was in substance a suit for a specific share of the rent by some only of the co-sharers, and that, there being no agreement by the tenant to pay the co-sharers their respective shares of the rent separately, such a suit would not lie. Held (upholding the order of the lower Appellate Court) that the order of the first Court was wrong. The suit, as framed, was necessarily a suit in the alternative; and as the plaintiffs were necessarily not aware whether any portion of P's share of the rent was due or not, but believing that none was due, they could only claim their share, asking to have the plaint amended so as to include the whole rent due if it should appear that anything was due to P, and thus bring the suit within the rule that, in the absence of special agreement between a tenant and co-sharers to pay their rateable proportion of the rent, a suit by one of the co-sharers must be for the entire rent due, making his co-sharers defendants if they refuse to join as plaintiffs. The prayer of the plaint fully provided for this, and the suit should have been tried on its merits and the plaint amended if the facts proved showed that any rent remained unpaid and due to P as asked for by the plaintiffs. On no account shall any larger amount be demanded." In a suit instituted when the land had been fully brought under cultivation, and after measurement, the plaintiff claimed only her own share of the rent and her co-sharers did not join her as co-plaintiffs, nor were they made defendants. Held that the suit was not maintainable. What the lease contemplated under the circumstances which had arisen was a final adjustment of the rent, and such an adjustment could be obtained only by a suit brought by all the co-sharers or by some of them if the others refused to join, but in that case the suit must be for the adjustment of the entire rent, and all the necessary parties must be properly before the Court. 182. ————— Evidence of previous enhancement in a suit by another co-zamindar.—More than twenty years before the institution of a suit for the enhancement of the rent of a share in a dependent talukh, the zamindari under which the talukh was held was partitioned under a batwara among three zamindars. A ten-anna share was allotted to one (the present plaintiff), a four-anna share to another, and a two-anna share to a third. The talukhdars continued to hold the entire property, and paid the rent apportioned by law severally to each of the parties entitled. In 1861 the owner of the two-anna share obtained a decree against the talukhdars for enhancement of the rent of his share. In the present suit against the same talukhdars, the defendants contended that the rent of their talukh had not been changed for a period of more than twenty years before suit. Held that the decree in the suit of 1861 had the effect of enhancing the rent payable for the whole talukh, that the plaintiff could avail herself of that decree, although she was not a party to it. *SARAT SOONDARY DABEA v. The plaintiff's attorney thereupon applied for an order upon the plaintiff and the defendant, or either of them, to pay his costs. Held the High Court has general jurisdiction over its suitors; that although a defendant has the right to compromise with a plaintiff without the knowledge of the plaintiff's attorney, such compromise must be made with the honest intention of ending the litigation, and not with any design to deprive the attorney of his costs, and he cannot make a payment to the plaintiff under that compromise, if he has notice of the lien for the costs of the plaintiff's attorney. KHETTER KRISTO MITTER v. Certain landed property, alleged to have been sold to an idol, and registered in the name of the vendee's infant son as shebait, had, after the death of that son, been mortgaged twice by the vendee, who succeeded to the office of shebait, and was mortgaged subsequently, on the death of the vendor, by his widow, to pay off the charge created by her husband. The last mortgage was foreclosed, and the mortgagee obtained a decree for possession. In a suit for the recovery of the property by a descendant of the vendee claiming as shebait of the idol, it was held that the zamindar and the patnidar, who were both compelled to appear for the protection of their interests, and whose defences were not necessarily identical, were entitled to separate costs. GOSIND NATH ROY v. The Government pleader also resisted on the ground that A was not a pauper. The Court, without inquiring into A's pauperism, rejected the application solely on the ground that A was a minor, and that he was not properly represented by a next friend or guardian. The Court ordered all costs to be paid out of the minor's estate. The minor died soon afterwards. The Collector then applied to the Court to attach certain property in B's hands which was alleged to form a part of the minor's estate. B objected, but the attachment was allowed. Held, on an application for revision of the order on which the order for costs against the minor's estate was held to be illegal and ultra vires, that no inquiry having been made into A's pauperism and no order passed such as is contemplated in s. 409 or 412 of the Code, the Collector was not entitled to costs. AMIOHAND TALAKHAND v. 57. — Civil Procedure Code (1882), s. 220—Practice—Costs of guardian ad litem—Advance by plaintiff for costs of minor defendants—Contract Act (IX of 1872), ss. 68, 70—Right to recover amount advanced.—Plaintiff, having, in a prior suit, sued the defendants, who were minors, and their father, for specific performance, was ordered by the Court to advance money to the guardian ad litem of the minors (who was appointed by the Court), to enable him to conduct their defence. Plaintiff succeeded, but the Court refused to provide in its decree for the repayment to plaintiff of the amount so advanced. On the plaintiff bringing this suit to recover that amount, Held per SUBRAMANIA AYYAR, J., (1) that the Court in which the prior suit had been brought had power neither to direct the plaintiff to make the advances to the guardian as had been done, nor to award the amount so paid as costs in the cause. The present suit, therefore, was not unsustainable for the reason that the subject-matter of it was one for the Court to have dealt with in the previous suit; (2) that the circumstances of the case were not such as to render the amount recoverable under s. 70 of the Contract Act, inasmuch as the defendants could not be said to have enjoyed the benefit of the expenditure; (3) that payments or charges connected with legal expenses in which infants are concerned may, in certain circumstances, come under the head of necessities within the meaning of s. 68 of the Contract Act. Disbursements properly made in defence of the suit by the guardian ad litem out of the plaintiff's advances might be allowable if it be alleged and proved that there were reasonable grounds for the defence put forward, though it proved unsuccessful. But that this ground could not now be relied upon on second appeal, inasmuch as it had not been put forward in the Court below, when an issue relating to it could have been framed. Per DAVIES, J., that a matter of this nature can and should be settled in the suit in which it arises: and that where a plaintiff is successful, a supplementary issue should be framed and tried as to the amount due to him on account of advances made by him to the guardian ad litem for conducting the defence, and a decree passed in his favour for the total amount of costs found to have been properly incurred in the case by the guardian out of such advances. VENKATA VIJAYA GOPALABAI v. dants the sum recovered from him by B, together with his own costs of defence. Held that, in the case of contracts of indemnity, the liability of the party indemnified to a third person is not only contemplated at the time of the indemnity, but is the very moving cause of that contract; and in cases of such a nature costs reasonably incurred in resisting, or reducing, or ascertaining the claim may be recovered. Held, therefore, that the costs incurred by B in the suit instituted against him by C, and those incurred by the plaintiff in the suit by B against him, were reasonably and properly incurred, and that he was entitled to recover them from the defendants. *PEPIN v. mortgagee, having had the benefit of the partition, and having accepted and approved of it as part of his title, as shown by the proceedings for sale, was, though not a party to the partition suit, bound by the equities attaching to the mortgaged property as incidents of the partition. The defendants in the mortgage suit, however, not being parties to the partition suit, such an order could not be properly made at their instance, but they should enforce the charge for costs against the mortgagee by supplemental suit, and the Court stayed the sale of the property for a reasonable time to give the parties an opportunity of moving for stay of the sale in any such suit as might be instituted.

92. Civil Procedure Code (1882), s. 379—Suit for injunction or damages.—Payment into Court by defendant to satisfy plaintiff's claim—Costs in such case—Costs—Civil Procedure Code (1882), s. 220—Discretion of Court.—The plaintiffs sued alleging certain windows in their house to be ancient windows and complaining that a building in course of erection by the defendant would, when completed according to the building plan, obstruct the light through the said windows. In his written statement the defendant denied that the plaintiffs' windows were ancient, and that the plaintiffs were entitled to the light and air as an easement. At the time of filing his written statement, the defendant paid into Court the sum of Rs 200, which in his written statement he stated was more than sufficient to compensate the plaintiffs for any damages they might sustain, and which he (defendant) paid in without prejudice to his contentions, but for the sake of peace and to avoid litigation. At the hearing the plaintiffs abandoned their claim for an injunction, but insisted that they were entitled to more than Rs 200 as damages. The Court found that the plaintiffs' windows were ancient, but that the Rs 200 paid into Court were sufficient damages. It therefore ordered that the defendant should pay all the plaintiffs' costs up to the date at which the Rs 200 were paid into Court, and as to their subsequent costs that the defendant should pay three-fourths of the plaintiffs' subsequent costs, and the plaintiffs should pay to the defendant one-fourth of the defendant's subsequent costs. The Court offered to simplify its order by directing the defendant to pay all the costs of the plaintiffs up to the date of paying the Rs 200 into Court, and half the plaintiffs' taxed costs subsequent to that date. The defendant appealed, contending that under s. 379 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) the plaintiffs' costs subsequent to the payment into Court should have been ordered to pay all the defendant's costs subsequent to the payment into Court. Held that the suit was not one to recover a debt or damages, and therefore s. 379 of the Civil Procedure Code did not apply. That being so, the Judge had full discretion under s. 220 of the Civil Procedure Code to apportion the costs, and the Court of Appeal would not interfere with that discretion. Held, also, that in cases not being suits to recover a debt or damages where money is paid into Court, the principle underlying s. 379 of the Civil Procedure Code ought to regulate the discretion of the Court in directing the payment of costs. 102. Assignment of decree pending appeal—Assignee of decree made respondent to appeal—Adding parties on appeal—Liability of assignee for costs of hearing in lower Court.—The Standard Oil Company and one E sued the defendant for damages. The lower Court found that there was no privity of contract between the company and the defendant, and dismissed the suit of the company (plaintiff No. 1) with costs, but passed a decree for E (plaintiff No. 2) with costs. The defendant appealed, in the first instance, making E the sole respondent. The company, however, gave the defendant (appellant) notice that the decree obtained by E had been assigned to them. Whereupon he (the appellant) obtained leave to make the company party respondents as assignees of the decree from E. The

The appellant (defendant) was not entitled, by bringing the company on the record against their will, to obtain an additional security for the costs already incurred in the lower Court. At the time of its institution, Act XV of 1852 was applicable, by s. 22 of which Act a plaintiff was deprived, in a suit cognizable by the Small Cause Court, of his costs if he obtained a decree "for less than Rs. 2,000," unless the Judge who tried it certified it was a fit case to be tried in the High Court. The suit was not determined until after the passing of Act I of 1895, by s. 11 of which the deprivation of costs applied to cases in which the plaintiff obtained a decree for less than Rs. 1,000. The Judge made a decree in favour of the plaintiff and, without certifying that the case was one fit to be brought in the High Court, he allowed the plaintiff the costs of the suit. Held, on appeal, that the case was governed by s. 6 of the General Clauses Consolidation Act (I of 1868); Act I of 1895 was not applicable, and the plaintiff was not entitled to his costs of suit. The suit was brought in 1894. It was contended for the defendant that s. 22 of the Presidency Small Cause Court Act (XV of 1852), which was in force at the date of the institution of the suit, applied to the case, and that under that section the plaintiffs, although successful, were not entitled to their costs. Held that the plaintiffs for an injunction or damages for obstruction by the defendant of the plaintiff's light and air, the defendant paid R200 into Court. The first Court granted an injunction, but on appeal the decree was varied, and an injunction refused, but R500 damages given to the plaintiff. On the question of costs, it was argued for the defendant (appellant) that he should be given his costs of appeal, as he had succeeded in setting aside the injunction granted by the lower Court, and should also get his costs of hearing in the lower Court, as the whole contest there had been as to the right to an injunction, which in appeal had been refused. The defendant had paid R200 into Court when he filed his written statement, and would have paid more if he could have obtained any indication from the plaintiff of the amount that would satisfy him. Nothing, however, would satisfy the plaintiff but an injunction, and he had failed to get it. Held that the plaintiff should have his costs of hearing in the lower Court, and that each party should pay his costs of the appeal and of the proceedings on the rule for an injunction before the trial, the ordinary rule should be observed, and the costs should follow the event. The event in this case was that the plaintiff had proved his case against the defendant, although he had not got the precise form of relief which he wanted. If a party substantially succeeds, he is entitled to his costs. GHANASHAM NILKANT NADKARNI v. MOROBA RAM-CHANDRI PAI . . . I. L. R., 18 Bom., 474

nisi was obtained by them against J C S and another, on the ground that he was the real plaintiff and S B D only a nominal one. It appeared that S B D had no means of her own, but lived in the house of J C S, who could explain nothing of her circumstances, or why she was residing in his house; but he stated that she had purchased the former plaintiff's right in the suit against a decree, she having been previously uninterested in the matter, and the only reason suggested for her doing so was that a small portion of the premises in question would serve for carrying out a religious purpose said to be entertained by her. The Court found that S B D was only a sham plaintiff, and that J C S was the real one, and the rule was made absolute. Held that the words "another party" in s. 187 of Act VIII of 1859 should be read as if identical with "another party to the suit." Held, also, that the Court cannot, by its judgment in any given suit, deal directly with persons not before it in that suit; that the Court has the same power of directing that the costs of any party to a suit for the recovery of land shall be paid by a person who is not on the record, as the late Supreme Court had, and as the Courts at Westminster still possess and exercise; that the recovery of costs from the real plaintiff in a suit in which the plaintiff on the record is only a sham one is not a step in the proceedings in any particular suit, nor can it be made the subject of a separate plaint, but is of the nature of a substantive proceeding in personam, and is within the equitable jurisdiction of the Court; that if the plaintiff on the record in a suit be only a sham one, the defendant may proceed against the real plaintiff for costs; that the real plaintiff in a suit in which the one on the record is a sham plaintiff is liable for the costs. BAMA SUNDERY DOSSEE v. The defendants in the suit were the plaintiff's mother, Naubai, who was the widow and executrix of Purshotam Ramji, and one Burjorji, who had been appointed by Naubai to act for her during her absence on pilgrimage. The plaintiff alleged that Naubai was insane and unfit to manage the estate, and that Burjorji was mismanaging and wasting it. A receiver was appointed shortly after the filing of the suit. At the hearing the suit was dismissed as against Burjorji, and the Court ordered that his costs should be paid by the plaintiff's next friend, being of opinion that he was the real actor in the suit, and that it would be unfair to make the plaintiff's estate bear the costs of proceedings in which she had no real voice. The Court was further of opinion that at the time the suit was filed Naubai was not of unsound mind, but that she had subsequently become insane. The usual accounts were ordered to be taken as against Naubai. The result of taking these accounts was that her administration of the estate as executrix was found to be unimpeachable, and in December 1883 the Court made an order directing that the next friend should pay the costs of the infant plaintiff. The next friend became insolvent, and his solicitors (the respondents) obtained an order from the Judge in chambers that the receiver should pay their costs out of the estate in his hands. The plaintiff appealed. The respondents contended that the plaintiff had adopted the suit, and that they had a lien for their costs—at any rate so far as they were incurred for the recovery and preservation of the estate. Held that the respondents were not entitled to be paid out of the estate. The plaintiff had done no overt act signifying her adoption of the suit, and the fact that she remained passive was consistent with her disapproval of it, as the decree did not immediately affect her, or require her to take action until the death of her mother Naubai. Held, also, that the property in the hands of the receiver could not be held to have been recovered by means of the suit, as it appeared that the investments were of a perfectly legitimate nature; that there was no cause for alarm with respect to the safety of the property, and that the suit, so far as it was based on alleged danger to the estate, was quite uncalled for. It was argued for the respondents that the appointment of a receiver preserved the estate from future risk arising from the fact that the executrix Naubai was of unsound mind. Held that the mere fact that the appointment of a receiver

the hands of the Collector, as manager of the Court of Wards, on the allegations that she had placed the property in the hands of the Court some years previously, because she was not at that time in a position to manage it herself, but that she was now capable of managing it, and desired to get it back. The suit was dismissed, and the plaintiff appealed on the ground, inter alia, that inasmuch as she was not a "disqualified proprietor" within the meaning of Act XIX of 1873 (North-West Provinces Land Revenue Act), the Court of Wards had no jurisdiction to take the property, and that its possession was merely the result of an arrangement to which she was a consenting party, and which she now desired to terminate. Held that, with reference to the provisions of Act XIX of 1873 and Act VIII of 1879 (North-West Provinces Land Revenue Acts), the suit as brought was not maintainable, inasmuch as there was no evidence that the plaintiff had obtained the previous sanction of the local Government to the release of the property from the superintendence of the Court of Wards, as required by s. 20 of the latter Act. Held, also, that the plaintiff could not be allowed in appeal entirely to change the nature of the grounds upon which she alleged herself to be entitled to claim relief, and that hence she could not now raise the plea that the Court of Wards, in taking the property under its management, had acted without jurisdiction. The expression "local Government" in ss. 194 and 195 of Act XIX of 1873, and s. 20 of Act VIII of 1879, means the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces. *MASUMA BIBI v. Death of minor—Right of suit.—Held with reference as well to s. 79, Bengal Act IV of 1870, as to the justice and equity of the case, that the power of the Court of Wards to represent the estate or bring a suit on behalf of a minor does not cease with the death of the minor. SOOMUNGU KOOER v. COURT OF WARDS. 17 W. R., 560.

19. Minor—Irrregular procedure.—On 27th July 1871, a disqualified proprietor, B, signed a duly attested document, declaring he had adopted a boy, by name D, the next heir R signing a declaration of his approval of the adoption. Before sanction of the Lieutenant-Governor could be obtained under Bengal Act IV of 1870, s. 74, B died, and the sanction was subsequently refused on the ground of B's death. On application made under Act XXVII of 1860, the Judge, on 28th March 1872, found the adoption good, and appointed one P to be guardian of the minor D, and directed the estate to be placed under the management of the Court of Wards. M, a judgment-creditor of R's, failing to execute his decree against the estate of B, brought a suit to have it declared that R, as heir, had inherited all B's property, and that he, M, was entitled to have that property attached and sold in satisfaction of his decree. The only defendants were A, H, manager under the Court of Wards, and R. The Subordinate Judge gave plaintiff a decree, declaring that D was not the legally adopted son of B. This was appealed from. Held that the Judge had no power to make any such order as that of the 28th March 1872 in regard to the Court of Wards. What he had power to do under Act XL of 1858, s. 12, was to direct the Collector to take charge of the estate, and it would then have become the duty of the Collector to appoint a manager and a guardian in the same manner, etc., as if the minor's property and person were subject to the Court of Wards. Held that the minor's interests were not properly represented before the Subordinate Judge, whose decree, therefore, could not stand so as to affect the minor, and that the minor must be made a party strictly in the manner prescribed by Bengal Act IV of 1870, s. 69. *ABDOOL HYE v. Power of Collector—Tenure created under Court of Wards—Previously existing tenure.—The provisions of s. 75 of Bengal Act IV of 1870 apply only to tenures created by the Collector during the time the estate has been in the hands of the Court of Wards, and not to tenures created previously. A Collector, therefore, has no power to sell for arrears of rent a tenure created before he took charge of the estate without previously obtaining a decree for such arrears in the regular way. *COLLECTOR OF CHITTAGONG v. COURT OF WARDS ACT (BENGAL, ACT IX OF 1879).

s. 20 and ss. 51-55—"Suit"— Application for execution by Collector on behalf of ward, when manager of Ward's estate has been appointed.—The word "suit" as used in ss. 51 to 55 of Bengal Act IX of 1879 is not limited to what is usually called a "regular suit," but covers miscellaneous proceedings in a suit, such as an application for execution of a decree in which the ward for the first time seeks to have the carriage of litigation instituted by his predecessor in title. When it appeared that a manager of a minor's property had been appointed by the Court of Wards under the provisions of s. 20 of Bengal Act IX of 1879, and during the absence of such manager on leave an application was made on behalf of the minor by the Collector of the district for execution of a decree,—Held that the office of manager did not become vacant because the manager obtained leave, and that, if it were not vacant, s. 51 of the Act did not enable the Collector to appear on behalf of the minor. *BHOOPENDRO NARAIN DUTT v. 3. ——— Declaratory decree—Consequential relief—Court-fees.—In a suit for a de-which the removal of an attachment of such house in the execution of a decree was sought, the plaintiff did not, as s. 7 of the Court Fees Act directs, state in his plaint the amount at which he valued the relief sought, nor did the Court of first instance cause him to supply this defect. On appeal by the plaintiff from the decree of the Court of first instance dismissing his suit, the lower Appellate Court demanded from the plaintiff Court-fees in respect of his plaint and memorandum of appeal computed on the market value of such house, the plaintiff

having only paid in respect of those documents respectively the Court-fees payable in a suit for a declaration of right where no consequential relief is prayed. Held that the market value of the property could not be taken by the lower Appellate Court to be the value of the relief sought, as the plaintiff did not seek possession of the property, and that, as the valuation of the relief sought rested with the plaintiff and not the Court, and as in this instance the declaration of right claimed necessarily carried with it the consequential relief sought, of which the value was merely nominal, further Court-fees could of the land-tax may be regarded as a remission. In the case of a talukhdari village, the proprietor of which had, under a settlement with Government for a period of twenty-two years, agreed to pay a fixed annual jumma or lump assessment, instead of the full survey assessment for the whole village. Held by a majority of the Full Bench that the difference in amount between the jumma and the full survey assessment was a remission, and therefore a suit for possession of lands in this village was to be valued according to cl. 3 of the proviso to art. 5 of s. 7 of the Court Fees Act (VII of 1870). Per BRIDGWOOD, J.—The remission contemplated by cl. (3) of the proviso "is an express remission, and not a mere difference in amount between the actual assessment payable by a talukhdar and the survey assessment." The three clauses of the proviso seem to apply only to lands which have been subjected to a survey settlement as ordinarily understood and legally provided for in the Bombay Presidency; the first clause being applicable to lands settled for a period not exceeding thirty years, the second to lands settled for a longer period or permanently, and the third to inam lands on which the whole or a part of the survey assessment has been expressly remitted. The talukhdars are not inamdars. They are land-holders liable to pay a land-tax, but not under a survey settlement, such as is applicable to lands for which provision seems to have been specially made in the proviso to art. 5 of s. 7 of the Court Fees Act. No part of the proviso, therefore, applies to a suit for the possession of lands in a talukhdari village. Such a suit should be valued according to cl. A person whose property was attached was not compelled to resort in the first instance to an application under s. 246 of the late Civil Procedure Code (Act VIII of 1859). There was nothing to prevent him from commencing his litigation by a regular suit, if such were his pleasure. Cl. 8 of s. 7 of the Court Fees Act (VII of 1870) would apply to such a suit. The language of that section is not limited to suits to set aside any special kind of attachments on land. It is large enough to

Conveyance to four members of a joint family—governed by the Mitakshara law as tenants-in-common—Survivorship.—The deceased, who was a member of a joint Hindu family governed by Mitakshara law, left a will, of which he appointed his brothers the executors and trustees. The brothers as executors applied for probate, but claimed exemption from the payment of probate duty on the ground that the property was "joint ancestral property which would pass by survivorship." The petition stated that in the lifetime of the testator he and his brothers, out of the income of the ancestral estate, purchased from the Corporation of Calcutta some plots of land which were conveyed to them as tenants-in-common; that the effect of this was to vest an undivided one-fourth share in the remaining co-parceners under the rule of survivorship, but to his legal representatives; and that, in order that effect might be given to the rule of survivorship, it was necessary to obtain probate. Held that the property, though conveyed to the brothers as tenants-in-common, vested in them as trustees for the benefit of all the co-parceners, and consequently was not liable to duty. IN

4. — Suits brought to set aside or restore attachment—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 246—Summary decision—Limitation Act, 1871, art. 15 (1877, art. 13)—Interpretation of Acts—Valuation of suits.—Suits brought to set aside or to restore an attachment upon a house in pursuance of the permission given in s. 246 of the Civil Procedure Code may be regarded either as "suits to obtain a declaratory decree or order where consequential relief is prayed" so as to fall within s. 1, cl. 4, art. (c), of the Court Fees Act (VII of 1870), or as suits to obtain or set aside a summary decision or order, in which case the stamp duty payable would be that prescribed by art. 17, cl. 1, sch. II of the Court Fees Act. The Court Fees Act being a fiscal enactment, it is the duty of the Courts to treat such suits as belonging to the latter class (it being the more favourable for the suitor), and to impose fees accordingly. Decisions under s. 246 of Act VIII of 1859 as to the removal or retention of attachments are "summary decisions or orders" within the meaning of art. 17, cl. 1, sch. II of the Court Fees Act (VII of 1870). The words "summary decision or order" in this clause of the Court Fees Act mean decision or order not made in a regular suit or appeal. The construction which has been given to these words, or nearly similar words, in the Limitation Acts (e.g., Act IX of 1871, sch. II, art. 15, and Act XV of 1877, sch. II, art. 13) affords no guide to their construction in the Court Fees Act. When Acts are in pari materia, they may be treated as forming a Code, and may be read together; but when this is not so, the construction which has been put upon one cannot be relied upon as a guide to the construction of another. The valuation of suits for the purpose of jurisdiction is perfectly distinct from their valuation for the fiscal purpose of Court-fees. Therefore Court Fees Acts, which are fiscal enactments, are not to be resorted to for construing enactments which fix the valuation of suits for the purpose of determining jurisdiction. Motichand Jaichand v. Dadabhai Pestonjee, 11 Bom., 186, explained. Ravaji Tamaji v. Dholapa Raghurao, I. L. R., 4 Bom., 123, dissented from by WESTROP; C. J. DAYACHAND NEMOHAND v. HEMCHAND DHURAMCHAND I. L. 5. — Stamp—Valuation of suit—Summary decision.—The plaintiff had attached certain immoveable property in execution of a decree against a third party. COURT FEES ACT (VII OF 1870) —continued.

Fees Act, 1870, s. 7, cl. 4, and s. 17.—A suit praying merely for a declaration that the plaintiff is entitled to require the defendants to account to him, and to permit him to inspect their books, is simply a suit for a declaratory decree without consequential relief, and falls within art. 17, cl. 3, of sch. II of Act VII of 1870. A suit praying for such a declaration as the above, and also for a positive order in the nature of a mandatory injunction for the production of the defendants' books and property in their hands, or a suit praying for such declaration as the above, and also for a positive decree for an account to be taken by the Court, and for the production of the books and property, would range under s. 7, cl. 4, art. (c) of Act VII of 1870, as being a suit "to obtain a declaratory decree or order where consequential relief is prayed," and also within art. (d) of the same section, as being a suit "to obtain an injunction;" and a suit of the third species described above would fall under art. (f) of the same clause, as being a suit "for accounts." Quere—Whether, in the case of a suit for a declaration of the right of the plaintiff to an account and to inspection of the defendants' books, and for a mandatory injunction for the production of these books, or of a suit for such declaration and for a positive decree for the taking of an account by the Court and the production of the defendants' books, the plaintiff would, by virtue of s. 17 of Act VII of 1870, require separate stamps under arts. (d) and (f) of cl. 4, s. 7, or be sufficiently covered by the stamp under art. (c) of the same clause; and whether, assuming the declaration and the account each to require a stamp, the prayer for an injunction or order for the production of books is not merely ancillary to, and not a distinct subject from, the taking of an account. Quere—Whether the provision in s. 7, cl. 4, of Act VII of 1870, that the amount of the fee payable in suits falling within that clause shall be computed "according to the amount at which the relief sought is valued in the plaint," is so inconsistent with that portion of s. 31 of Act VIII of 1859 which permits the Court receiving the plaint to revise the valuation of the claim as to render that portion of s. 31 of Act VIII of 1859 inoperative in suits within s. 7, cl. 4, of Act VII of 1870, notwithstanding the concluding passage in that clause. Quere—Whether the concluding passage in cl. 4, s. 7 of Act VII of 1870, is too express to admit of a limitation of the power of the Judge, and leaves him the right to revise the valuation placed on suits under cl. 4 by the plaintiff. But, assuming this to be so, it would, generally, not be advisable that the Judge should enhance the valuation on the reception of the plaint. The fee payable under s. 7, cl. 4, of Act VII of 1870 is according to the amount at which the relief sought is valued in the plaint, and not the value of the subject-matter of the plaint. MANOHAR GANESH v. (f).—In a suit for the removal of the defendant from the management of certain trust funds on the ground of misconduct, the plaintiff stamped his plaint with a Court-fee stamp of ₹10, and valued the suit at ₹7,000 "for the purpose of jurisdiction." Held that the ₹7,000 must be taken, under the circumstances, to be the plaintiff's interest in the subject-matter of the suit, and that the Court-fee must be estimated upon that sum. *Delroos Banoo Begum v. 7. ——— Stamp—Suit to set aside a deed or will—Declaratory decree—Consequential relief.—In a suit for confirmation of possession by declaration of proprietary right, and also to set aside a forged and invalid will,—Held that the plaintiff sought consequential relief over and above the declaratory decree prayed for, and therefore the petition of appeal ought to be engrossed on a stamp of proportionate value to the subject-matter of the suit. *JOY NARAIN GIREE v. II of the Court Fees Act, 1870, and not an ad valorem fee calculated upon the amount for which the alienations had been made. SANKARA NARAINA v. VIJAYA RAGHUNADHA MAT-TAYAN PANNIKONDAR. . . I. L. and confined there under Act I of 1871. The books kept at the station showed that the pony had been sold by auction under the Act and purchased by one Gopinath. After some time the pony had eventually been purchased by the accused from a vendor from Gopinath. The Magistrate found on the evidence that there had been no sale under Act I of 1871, and convicted the accused of criminal breach of trust, and sentenced him under s. 406 of the Penal Code. Held the conviction was illegal. There must be an entrusting of the accused with the property, and that he dishonestly misappropriated it; there must be an intention on the part of the accused to cause wrongful gain or wrongful loss. *QUEEN v. 11. — Failure to account—Penal Code, ss. 406, 407, 408. [18 W. R., Cr., 52]

The prisoner, a gomastah, took from his employers, between 15th April and 30th June, sums amounting to Rs 600, for the purchase of wood. During that period he supplied wood to the value of Rs 234, but the prosecutor alleged that most of that was to be set off against balance to the debit of the prisoner for the year before, and that the value of the firewood was, as a fact, only Rs 34. The prisoner was charged with criminal breach of trust as a servant. The defence was that he had purchased wood and made advances on that account; but this defence was proved to be false. The Magistrate convicted him, but the Judge held it was merely a failure to account, and acquitted the prisoner. Held the prisoner was guilty of criminal breach of trust. WATSON v. GOLAB KHAN

12. — Penal Code, s. 405.—Where a complaint only amounted to a statement that the accused had, in consequence of certain arrangements made with the complainant's father, received certain moneys and had refused to render accounts, but contained no allegation that he had, in fact, realized and dishonestly misappropriated any particular sum, and obviously was made for the purpose of forcing him to render accounts,—Held that the Magistrate was right in dismissing it, since the facts alleged did not constitute criminal breach of trust. QUEEN-EM-PRESS v. MURPHY

13. — Partner—Master and servant.—The accused was convicted of criminal breach of trust in respect of the value of goods which had been entrusted to him to sell. It was urged before the High Court that the conviction could not be sustained as the accused was a partner with the prosecutor, Held by JACKSON, J., that the finding of the Magistrate and Sessions Judge on the evidence was to the effect that the prisoner was not a partner, but a servant; that such finding could not be interfered with by the High Court as a Court of revision, unless there was a mistake in law; that the finding was correct in law; that the defence of the prisoner could not be taken to mean to say that he was a partner, but merely that he claimed a small share in the profits, and that such claim did not make him a partner, an agent's remuneration being a share in the profits not constituting the agent a partner. Held by KEMP and MITTER, JJ. (releasing the prisoner), that, though the allowance of a portion of the profits or goods does not destroy the relation of master and servant, the accused in this case distinctly pleaded he was a partner, and not only that he was entitled to a share in the profits; that the lower Courts did not specifically decide that the accused was a servant; and that the prosecutor's remedy was a civil suit for an account. IN THE MATTER OF LALL CHAND ROY

14. — Public servant—Penal Code, s. 409.—A village shroff whose duty it was to assist in collecting the public revenue received grain from raiyats and gave receipts as if for money received by virtue of a private arrangement. Held that he could not be convicted of criminal breach of trust by a public servant under s. 409 of the Penal Code, as he was not authorized to receive the public revenue in kind, and the party who delivered the grain did not thereby discharge himself from liability for the revenue. ANONYMOUS

15. — Penal Code, ss. 408, 409—Sentence, Mitigation of.—Where a Court inspector improperly delegated to a constable the custody, etc., of Government moneys (taking from him private security to save himself from loss in case of defalcation), and the constable dishonestly converted the money to his own use, although he afterwards restored it, the case was held to fall under s. 408, and not s. 409, of the Penal Code, and the sentence reduced from ten years' transportation and a fine of Rs 500 to one year's rigorous imprisonment without fine. QUEEN v. BANEE MADHUB GHOSH
[8 W. R., Cr., 1]

16. — Penal Code, s. 409.—To constitute an offence under s. 409, it is not necessary that the property should be that of Government, but that it should have been entrusted to a public servant in that capacity. IN THE MATTER OF RAM SOONDER PODDAR

But where the master himself has settled the account with the tradesman for a specific sum, and sends the servant with money, and the servant, after making the payment, accepts a present from the tradesman, in that case the servant does not commit criminal breach of trust, inasmuch as the money is given to him by a person whom he believes to have a right to give it, though it may be that, according to the strict equitable doctrines of the Court of Chancery, he is bound to account to the master for the money. *Hay's case, In re Canadian Oil Works Corporation, L. 3. ——— Ex-communication by Roman Catholic priest.—Penal Code, ss. 120, 503, 508.—Criminal proceedings stayed until complainant established the illegality of the priest's acts in a Civil Court.—Where the exercise of ecclesiastical jurisdiction is plainly ultra vires, or otherwise unauthorised by the ordinances of a religious society, or where such ordinances contravert the general law, and, in either case, consequences result which the criminal law was intended to restrain, the Criminal Courts are not at liberty to decline jurisdiction. A Roman Catholic complained to a Magistrate that he had been threatened with an illegal sentence of ex-communication and had been excommunicated by the ecclesiastical authorities, with a view to prevent him from asserting his legal rights in defending a civil suit concerning the property of a church. Held that, under the circumstances, the proper course was for the Magistrate to postpone the trial till the complainant proved in a Civil Court the illegality of the action of the ecclesiastical authorities. IN RE DECHIZ. The accused was charged with the offence of criminal intimidation under s. 507 of the Penal Code (XLV of 1860). The Sessions

CRIMINAL INTIMIDATION—concluded.

Judge found that the Commissioner had neither official nor personal interest in the forest officer. He therefore acquitted the accused of the offence of criminal intimidation, but convicted him of an attempt to commit the offence punishable under s. 507, and sentenced him to four months' simple imprisonment. Held, reversing the conviction and sentence, that, as the person to whom the petition was addressed was not interested in the person threatened, the act intended and done by the accused did not amount to the offence of criminal intimidation within the meaning of s. 503 of the Penal Code. PER WEST, J.—“The offence of criminal intimidation, as defined, seems to require both a person to be threatened and another in whom he is specially interested. Then there must be the intent to cause alarm to the former by a threat to him of injury to the latter. The intent itself might be complete, though it could not be effected. But the existence of the interest seems essential to the offence, as also and equally to the attempt at the offence, since otherwise the attempt would be to do something not constituting an offence.” PER BIRWOOD, J.—“No criminal liability can be incurred, under the Penal Code, by an attempt to do an act which, if done, would not be an offence against the Code. In the present case, therefore, if the accused was not guilty of committing criminal intimidation, because the act intended and done by him lacked an ingredient of that offence, he could not be guilty of an attempt at that offence.” *QUEEN-EMPERESS v. QUEEN v. NOBIN CHUNDER SIKKAR 12 W. R., Cr., 39

IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF ENAYET HOSEIN 11 W. R., Cr., 1

11. ——— Penal Code, s. 404.—Held by MARKBY, J., that under s. 404 all the elements are required to constitute the offence which would be required to constitute the offence of criminal misappropriation in respect of a person who is alive. QUEEN v. NOBIN CHUNDER SIKKAR [12 W. R., Cr., 39]

[14 W. R., Cr., 13]

CRIMINAL MISAPPROPRIATION

—concluded.

13. ——— Trust arising from duty of public servant—Penal Code, s. 409.—S. 409 of the Penal Code does not limit the mode in which a trust arises, whether by specific order or by reason of its being part of the proper duty of a public functionary. Where, therefore, it was proved that the head clerk of an office entrusted the management of stamps, with the knowledge and sanction of his superiors, to one of his assistants, the latter was held to be guilty of criminal misappropriation by a public servant, within the meaning of s. 409, when he made away with the stamps. QUEEN v. RAM DUN DEX . . . 13 W. R., Cr., 77

14. ——— Separate items of money—Charge, Form of.—The misappropriation of each separate item of money with which a person is entrusted is a separate offence, and the facts connected with it should form the subject of a separate enquiry. The duty of a committing officer in such a case is to select certain distinct items, to frame his charges upon them and to adduce evidence specially upon those items. CHETTER v. QUEEN 15 W. R., Cr., 5

15. ——— Refusal to pay for goods purchased—Penal Code, s. 403.—The prisoner who took certain hides from the prosecutrix, but refused to pay for them, was held not on that account guilty of dishonest misappropriation under s. 403 of the Penal Code. QUEEN v. BOYSTON MOONIE [17 W. R., Cr., 11

16. ——— Removal of property claimed by accused—Penal Code, s. 403.—A person having made a hole in the wall of his own house broke open a box and removed the contents to which he believed himself entitled, but as to which there was a dispute making the removal appear to have been the act of thieves from the outside; and entrusting the property to another person,—Held not guilty of criminal misappropriation. TREWA RAM v. EMPRESS . . . 10 C. L. R., 187

17. ——— Harvesting crops under attachment—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 206, 403, 424.—A judgment-debtor, whose standing crops were attached, harvested them while the attachment was in force and was convicted of theft. Held that the accused was not guilty of theft, but of the offence of dishonestly removing the property under Penal Code, s. 424. Per BENSON, J.—The offence was also criminal misappropriation within the meaning of Indian Penal Code, s. 403. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. OBAYYA

(1872, s. 466)—Acts done by public servant—Sanction to prosecution—Mahalkari.—S. 466 of the Code of Criminal Procedure extends to all acts ostensibly done by a public servant, i.e., to acts which would have no special signification except as acts done by a public servant; therefore, a mahalkari charged with fabricating the proceedings of a case decided before himself could not be tried on that charge except with the sanction specified in that section. Para. 1 of s. 466, which is intended to apply, at least chiefly, to the cases of persons specially responsible to Government, such as accountants who have failed in their duty; and para. 2, which speaks of sanction by Government alone, to persons professing to exercise certain authority, and with that pretext doing an act which is impeached by a subject, on the ground of its being wholly unwarranted, or of an excess or impropriety of some kind. A mahalkari falls within the class of public servants contemplated in para. 1

1. ———— Deposition taken before Magistrate—Evidence before Sessions Judge—Discretion of Sessions Judge.—The purpose of s. 249 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, as amended by s. 20 of Act XI of 1874, is to make depositions given before Magistrates in the preliminary inquiry evidence in the trial before the Court of Session, only when the Sessions Judge determines, in the exercise of his discretion, that they are to be used in this way. But the exercise of this discretion, considering it as a matter of fact or law, is open to review by the Appellate Court. REG. v. ARJUN MEGHA

2. ———— Former deposition of witness—Evidence Act, s. 80.—The confession of a witness in the shape of a former deposition can be used as evidence against a prisoner only on the condition prescribed by s. 249, Criminal Procedure Code, 1872, —that is, it must have been duly taken by the committing officer in the presence of the person against whom it is to be used. The certificate of the Magistrate appended to such confession in order to afford prima facie evidence, under s. 80 of the Evidence Act, of the circumstances mentioned in it relative to the taking of the statement ought to give the facts necessary to render the deposition admissible under s. 249. *QUEEN v. 3. ———— Depositions taken before Magistrate.—A Court of Session is not at liberty, under Act X of 1872, s. 249, to ground its judgment on the depositions taken by the Magistrate without taking the examinations of the witnesses afresh. QUEEN v. MAJOHUR ROY

4. ———— Witnesses before committing Magistrate.—On the trial of a prisoner for the murder of his wife and child, the witnesses for the prosecution gave evidence contradicting the evidence given by them before the committing Magistrate; and the Sessions Judge, purporting to act under s. 249, Act X of 1872, discarded the evidence taken before himself, and grounded his judgment on the evidence given before the Magistrate, and on this evidence convicted the prisoner and sentenced him to death. On appeal by the prisoner,—Held that s. 249 did not warrant such a course of proceeding. That section merely authorizes the Court to take a particular statement, made by a witness before the Magistrate as the true statement, notwithstanding that it is denied, or a statement inconsistent with it was made by the witness before the Judge, only if the Judge should see that the original statement was worthy of belief, and does not mean that the Court should discard wholly the testimony of witnesses before it and have recourse to the testimony of the same persons given before another officer. *QUEEN v. 5. ———— Use in Sessions Court of evidence taken before the committing Magistrate.—Although under certain circumstances a Court of Session may use evidence given before the committing Magistrate as if it had been given before itself, it is not proper for a Court of Session to base a conviction solely upon such evidence, there being no other evidence on the record to corroborate it. Queen v. Amanulla, 12 B. L. R., Ap., 15, Queen-Emress v. Bharamappa, I. L. R., 12 Mad., 123, and Queen-Emress v. Dhan Sahai, I. L. R., 7 All., 862, referred to. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. JEOCHI . I. L. 6. ———— Duty of Sessions Judge as to evidence taken before the Magistrate.—Sessions Judges should act with great caution in exercising the discretion given to them by s. 288, Code of Criminal Procedure, in admitting evidence given by a witness before the committing Magistrate. Where at a Sessions trial the Sessions Judge admitted, under s. 288, Code of Criminal Procedure, such evidence, without any inquiry as to the allegation made by the witness that her statement before the Magistrate was made under pressure and threat by the police,—Held that the District Judge should not have placed reliance on the evidence as given before the Magistrate, and that he would have shown a better discretion if he had first made some inquiry by examining the police officer as to the restraint and pressure under which the statement was alleged to have been made. A witness was not examined in the Sessions Court with regard to the particular statements made by him before the committing Magistrate, and he did not repeat those statements before the Sessions Court. Held that the Sessions Judge could not properly admit such statements in evidence under s. 288, Criminal Procedure Code. Where a witness was examined in the Sessions Court and had shown no disposition in any way to refile from any statement he had made before the committing Magistrate,

6. ———— Duty of Sessions Judge as to evidence taken before the Magistrate.—Sessions Judges should act with great caution in exercising the discretion given to them by s. 288, Code of Criminal Procedure, in admitting evidence given by a witness before the committing Magistrate. Where at a Sessions trial the Sessions Judge admitted, under s. 288, Code of Criminal Procedure, such evidence, without any inquiry as to the allegation made by the witness that her statement before the Magistrate was made under pressure and threat by the police,—Held that the District Judge should not have placed reliance on the evidence as given before the Magistrate, and that he would have shown a better discretion if he had first made some inquiry by examining the police officer as to the restraint and pressure under which the statement was alleged to have been made. A witness was not examined in the Sessions Court with regard to the particular statements made by him before the committing Magistrate, and he did not repeat those statements before the Sessions Court. Held that the Sessions Judge could not properly admit such statements in evidence under s. 288, Criminal Procedure Code. Where a witness was examined in the Sessions Court and had shown no disposition in any way to renege from any statement he had made before the committing Magistrate,

4. ————— Sessions trial—Accused persons, Examination of.—Questions put by the Court to an accused person under the provisions of s. 342 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1882, must be strictly limited to the purpose described in that section, i.e., "of enabling the accused to explain any circumstances appearing in the evidence against him." 5. ————— Witness—Accused person calling as witnesses persons charged with him and awaiting a separate trial for same offence—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 132.—The accused D, a European British subject, was charged, together with others who were natives of India, under ss. 384, 385, and 389 of the Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), with conspiring to commit extortion. D claimed to be tried by a mixed jury under s. 450 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898). The other accused, who were natives of India, then claimed to be tried separately under s. 452. The trial of D then proceeded, and at the close of the case for the prosecution he proposed to call as his witnesses the persons who had been charged with him and who were awaiting their trial. They objected to be called. Held that he was entitled to call them as witnesses and to examine them on oath. The words "the accused" in cl. 4 of s. 342 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898) mean the accused then under trial and under examination by the Court. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. DURANT . . . I. L. It is, therefore, not necessary for the High Court to upset the acquittal before the re-trial can be had. QUEEN-EMPEROR v. HERRICK. I. L. R., 8 Bom., 307

2. ————— Previous acquittal.—Upon a charge of dacoity, the Magistrate, having split up the charge, convicted the accused of rioting, using criminal force, and misappropriating the property of a deceased person. On appeal the Sessions Court reversed the conviction, holding that the offence, if any, was dacoity, but that the facts alleged being incredible, there was no need to order a committal. The complainant thereupon lodged a fresh complaint of dacoity based on the same facts before another Magistrate. Held that the judgment of the Sessions Court was no bar to further proceedings. *VIJAY-KRISHN v. On the application of the complainant, the District Magistrate directed further inquiry into the case under s. 437 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, and on a reference to the Court of Session the Sessions Judge held that, as no inquiry into the charge of theft had been held, the order was legal. Held that the District Magistrate had no power to pass such an order under s. 437, and that a trial on the charge of theft was barred by virtue of s. 403 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. *QUEEN-EMPEROR v. Under the second part of that section, the fact of the accused having been charged at the first trial with one offence only did not prevent the institution of a separate proceeding in respect of some other offence which was disclosed during the course of the first trial. *QUEEN-EMPEROR v. 4. ————— Jurisdiction of Magistrate—Commitment to Sessions—Criminal Procedure Code (Act XXI of 1861), ss. 427, 435.—The Sessions Judge has no power to commit to the Sessions a case in which persons were convicted by the Deputy Magistrate of an offence under s. 457 of the Penal Code: such a case being one triable by the Deputy Magistrate, ss. 427 and 435 of Act XXI of 1861 do not apply. *QUEEN v. 5. ————— Revival of proceedings after discharge—Jurisdiction of Magistrate—Sessions case—Fresh evidence.—A Deputy Magistrate having dismissed a case instituted under s. 380 of the Penal Code without taking certain evidence which in his opinion would have been of little value, the Magistrate of the district, on the application of the complainant, took such evidence, and committed the accused for trial before the Sessions Court. Held, on reference to the High Court, that as the words "Sessions case" in s. 296 of the Criminal Procedure Code had reference only to a case triable exclusively by a Court of Session, the Magistrate's action could not be supported under that section, but that (as further evidence in addition to that taken by the Deputy Magistrate was forthcoming) it was sustainable on the principle laid down in *Empress v. 6. ————— Revival of proceedings after discharge—Jurisdiction of Magistrate—Fresh evidence—Procedure.—A Magistrate has no power to remand a criminal case to a Subordinate Magistrate for re-trial after the case has once been dismissed; the courses open to him are (1) to accept a fresh complaint supported by fresh evidence, which was not before the Court when the case was dismissed; or (2) if there be no additional evidence to be procured, to report the case for the orders of the High Court

7. ————— Discharge of accused persons under s. 215—Revival of proceedings at the instance of the Court of Session—Commitment of accused persons.—Certain persons were charged under s. 417 of the Penal Code, and were discharged by the Magistrate inquiring into the offence, under s. 215 of Act X of 1872. The Court of Session, considering that the accused persons had been improperly to him to make the case over to a Subordinate Magistrate, with directions to enquire into any offence, other than the offence in respect of which the accused persons had been discharged, which the evidence on the record showed to have been committed. The Subordinate Magistrate to whom the case was made over made an inquiry, and committed the accused persons for trial before the Court of Session on charges under ss. 363 and 420 of the Penal Code. It was contended that the Court of Session was not competent to "direct the accused persons to be committed" under s. 296 of Act X of 1872, the case not being a "Sessions case" within the meaning of that section, and that the commitment was consequently illegal. Held that there was no "direction to commit" within the meaning of that section, that is to say, to send the accused persons at once to the Sessions Court, without further inquiry, and whether or not the inquiry was made in consequence of the suggestions of the Court of Session was immaterial, and that the inquiry upon the charges under ss. 363 and 420 of the Penal Code was rightly held by the Subordinate Magistrate, and the commitment could not be impeached. *EMPRESS OF INDIA v. 8. ————— Discharge by Magistrate—Order of commitment by Sessions Judge—Omission to call on accused to show cause against such commitment—Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1872), ss. 296, 283.—A Sessions Court has no power, under s. 296 of the Criminal Procedure Code, to direct the commitment of a person discharged by a Deputy Magistrate, without first giving such person an opportunity of showing cause against such commitment. But under s. 296, as amended by Act XI of 1874, the Court has power to direct the subordinate Court to enquire into any offences for which it considers a commitment should be ordered. When, however, a trial under such a commitment made by order of a Sessions Judge has been duly held, and no actual failure of justice has been caused by the error of the Sessions Judge, s. 283 of the Criminal Procedure Code would be a bar to the reversal of his judgment. *EMPRESS v. alleged adultery and enticing away a married woman for illicit purposes, the complainant refused to examine his wife as to the marriage; the Deputy Magistrate declined to frame a charge, and discharged the accused. The Sessions Judge directed a re-trial to be held by another Deputy Magistrate, and ordered that the evidence of the wife should be taken as to the marriage. Held that the Sessions Judge in ordering a re-trial had not exercised a proper discretion, he having admitted that the prosecution had failed to prove the marriage, and it not being alleged that any evidence was tendered by the prosecution and not taken by the Deputy Magistrate. CHUNDER NATH GHOSE v. 5. ————— Further inquiry—Proceedings against accused—Notice.—No order affecting an accused in a criminal matter should be made without giving him notice, so as to enable him to appear and show cause against it. A Sessions Judge has no power, under s. 437 of the Criminal Procedure Code, to direct a particular Magistrate by name to make the further inquiry contemplated by that section. The further inquiry contemplated by s. 437 of the Criminal Procedure Code is an inquiry upon further materials, not a re-hearing of the matter upon the same evidence which was before the Magistrate who held the first inquiry. IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF CHUNDI CHURN BHUTTA-CHARJEA. A criminal charge instituted before a Magistrate of the first class was finally disposed of by him by an order discharging the accused. Subsequently the Magistrate of the district, proceeding under s. 437 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, directed a further inquiry to be made by a subordinate Magistrate. This order was made without notice to the accused. Held that the Magistrate of the district had no jurisdiction to direct a further inquiry. Semle—That, as a matter of strict law, the accused was not entitled to be heard by the District Magistrate before granting the order directing the inquiry. IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF NOBIN KRISTO MOOKERJEE. under s. 437; Criminal Procedure Code, that further inquiry should be made, and the accused called on to enter upon his defence. The accused was not called upon to show cause why a further inquiry should not be made, but a summons in the terms of s. 68 of the Criminal Procedure Code was issued to him. On his appearance he was tried by the Magistrate of the district, convicted and sentenced. The witnesses for the prosecution were not recalled, but the Magistrate relied upon their evidence as recorded in the first trial, and also upon the statement of a witness for the defence which was not receivable in evidence. Held that the proceedings of the Magistrate of the district were irregular, first, because notice to show cause why action should not be taken against him in the terms of s. 437 of the Code of Criminal Procedure was not served upon the accused person before proceedings, ostensibly under that section, were commenced; and, secondly, because the subsequent proceedings of the Magistrate were not such as are contemplated by the provisions of s. 437, inasmuch as the conviction was practically based upon evidence which was not recorded in the course of a "further inquiry" before the Magistrate of the district, but upon evidence which was recorded by the Deputy Magistrate, and had been adjudicated upon by that officer; and such irregularities were fatal to the conviction. QUEEN-EMRESS v. 9. ————— Further inquiry—Power of District Magistrate to direct—"Subordinate Magistrate"—Compoundable offence.—A criminal charge under s. 448 of the Penal Code having been instituted, the accused was sent up by the police before a Deputy Magistrate of the first class. Previous to any evidence being taken, the complainant intimated to the Magistrate that the case had been amicably settled, and that he did not wish to proceed further in the matter, upon which the Magistrate recorded an order, "Compromised; defendant acquitted." Subsequently the Magistrate of the district, relying upon ss. 248 and 259 and professing to act under s. 437 of the Criminal Procedure Code, directed the Deputy Magistrate to send up the parties and proceed regularly with the case. Held further that, in addition to the Magistrate's order not being warranted by the fact, it was ultra vires, inasmuch as the Deputy Magistrate was a Magistrate of the first class and not "inferior" to the District Magistrate, and to give the District Magistrate jurisdiction to call for a record under s. 435 from another

Consequently, an order made by a District Judge directing a further inquiry to be held under s. 437 of the Criminal Procedure Code in a case where a Magistrate had discharged the accused under s. 253 was not warranted by law, when there had been a full inquiry by a competent Court and when no further evidence was disclosed, such order being based merely upon the ground that, in the opinion of the District Judge, the evidence recorded was sufficient for the conviction of the accused. *JEEBUN-KHISTO ROY v. Further inquiry should only be directed when other witnesses might have been examined, or when the witnesses have not been properly examined; and inasmuch as s. 437 does not direct that the evidence already taken should be taken again, the further inquiry should ordinarily be made by the Magistrate who made the original inquiry. Where a District Magistrate, being of opinion that a subordinate Magistrate had, without just cause, refused credit to the witnesses in a certain case and had improperly discharged an accused person, directed a further inquiry by another Magistrate, and the accused was on the same evidence re-tried and convicted.—Held that the conviction must be quashed. *QUEEN-EMPRESS v. The term "further inquiry" in s. 437 is not restricted to "inquiry upon further materials or further or additional evidence." Before directing further inquiry under s. 437, it is not obligatory on the District Magistrate to give notice to the person discharged, or against whom the complaint was dismissed. When an order directing such inquiry is made, the Subordinate Magistrate to whom it is directed has jurisdiction, and is bound to carry it out. Such order remains in force until it is duly set aside or withdrawn. Difference between the powers of the District Magistrate under the former Criminal Procedure Code (Act X, 1872) and the present one (Act X, 1882) pointed out. Empress v. Gowdappa, I. L. An order was passed directing that "a copy of the petition of complaint should be sent to the police station, calling for a report on the matter," and on receipt of the report the Magistrate dismissed the complaint under s. 203 of the Criminal Procedure Code. There was nothing in the Magistrate's original order to show that he saw reason to distrust the truth of the complaint, nor did he direct any local investigation to be made by a police officer for the purpose of ascertaining the truth or falsehood of the complaint. Subsequently to the dismissal of the complaint, the same complainant brought a fresh charge upon the same facts against the same persons in the same Court, and upon this charge the accused were tried, convicted, and sentenced. Held that the Magistrate in ordering a further inquiry, on receiving the complainant's second petition, did not act contrary to any provision of the law, and that, considering the circumstances under which the first complaint had been dismissed, a further inquiry was necessary. *QUEEN-EMPRESS v. In a suit brought to recover possession of certain property, the Judge decided one of the issues raised in the plaintiff's favour, but on the important issue as to whether the plaintiff ever had possession, he found for the defendant. The plaintiff was not examined, but on the issue as to possession he called two witnesses. The Judge disbelieved their statements, and, considering that the plaintiff had failed to prove his case, gave judgment for the defendant without requiring him to give evidence on that issue. In the concluding paragraph of his judgment, the Judge directed the depositions of the two witnesses above referred to, together with the English memoranda of their evidence, to be sent to the Magistrate, with a view to his enquiring whether or not they had voluntarily given false evidence in a judicial proceeding; and he further directed the Magistrate to enquire whether or not the plaintiff had abetted the offence of giving false evidence, on the ground that, as the witnesses were the plaintiff's servants, he must personally have influenced them, and also to enquire whether the plaint which the plaintiff had attested contained averments which he knew to be false. On a motion to quash this order, —Held that, under s. 471 of the Criminal Procedure Code, the Judge had no power to send a case to a Magistrate except when, after having made such preliminary enquiry as may be necessary, he is of opinion that there is sufficient ground (i.e., ground of a nature higher than mere surmise or suspicion) for directing judicial enquiry into the matter of a specific charge, and that the Judge was bound to indicate the particular statements or averments in respect of which he considers that there is ground for a charge into which the Magistrate ought to enquire, and that the order was bad because the Judge had made no preliminary enquiry, and because it was too vague and general in its character. *QUEEN v. 5. ————— *Power of and procedure of Court in making order under section—Order directing prosecution.—*Before a Court is justified in making an order under s. 478, directing the prosecution of any person, it ought to have before it direct evidence, fixing the offence upon the person whom it is sought to charge, either in the course of the preliminary enquiry referred to in that section or in the earlier proceedings out of which the enquiry arises. It is not sufficient that the evidence in the earlier case may induce some sort of suspicion that the person had been guilty of an offence; but there must be distinct evidence of the commission of an offence by the person who is to be prosecuted. *Queen v. 3. ——— Irregularity—Waiver or consent by prisoner—Recording statements of witnesses.—The jailer of a district jail being accused by one of the jail clerks of falsifying his accounts and defrauding the Government, the matter was enquired into by the District Magistrate, and the jailer was, by the Magistrate's order, placed on trial before a Bench of Magistrates, consisting of the District Magistrate himself, L, the Officiating Superintendent of the jail, and three other Honorary Magistrates. The prisoner and his pleaders were alleged to have stated before the commencement of the trial on being questioned that they had no objection to the composition of the Bench, but after the charges had been framed, the prisoner's counsel objected to the Bench as formed. The District Magistrate directed the Government pleader to prosecute, and both the District Magistrate and L gave evidence for the prosecution. After the case for the prosecution was closed, two formal charges were drawn up, namely, that the prisoner had debited Government with the price of more oil-seed than he actually purchased, and that he had received payment for certain oil at a higher rate than he credited to Government. The moneys, the receipt of which were the subject of the first charge, were obtained by the prisoner on the strength of certain vouchers which he had induced L to sign as correct, and L had sanctioned the sale at the rates credited to Government. Upon the prisoner's giving the names of the witnesses, he intended to call in his defence, L was deputed by his brother Magistrates to examine some of them who were connected with the jail, in order "to guard against deviation," and the depositions so taken were placed on the record "to be used by either party."

5. ——— Summary jurisdiction wrongly exercised—Unlawful assembly armed with deadly weapons—Splitting offence—Right of appeal, Deprivation of.—No Magistrate is entitled to split up an offence into its component parts for the purpose of giving himself summary jurisdiction. If a charge of an offence not triable summarily is laid and sworn to, the Magistrate must proceed with the case accordingly, unless he is at the outset in a position to show from the deposition of the complainant that the circumstances of aggravation are really mere exaggeration and not to be believed. Therefore, a Magistrate, when he has before him a person charged with having been armed with a deadly weapon while a member of an unlawful assembly, is not at liberty to disregard that part of the charge which charges the prisoner with having been armed with a deadly weapon, and so to give himself jurisdiction to try the case summarily, and then by inflicting a sentence of imprisonment not exceeding three months to deprive the prisoner of his right of appeal. *EMPRESS v. place he was empowered to exercise civil, but not criminal jurisdiction. Held that the trial of such appeal at Moradabad was an irregularity, but no failure of justice being shown to have been occasioned thereby, it was covered by s. 531 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, and did not render the trial of the appeal a nullity. *QUEEN-EMRESS v. 17. Criminal Procedure Code, 1872, ss. 491, 530—Dispute likely to cause breach of the peace—Decision on title by Civil Court—Police report, Incorporation of, by reference.—On the 20th of March 1879, A applied to have certain lands, which he had lately purchased, registered in his name. The order of the Deputy Collector, declaring that A had proved possession and was entitled to registration, was not passed until the 24th December 1879. Prior to A's purchase, B and C had, on the 6th March 1879, obtained registration of the same property. The proceedings were sent to the Commissioner, who, on the 29th September 1880, declared A to be entitled to the land; and in October the registration in the names of B and C was cancelled, and A's name was finally registered. In July 1880, proceedings under s. 530 of the Criminal Procedure Code were commenced upon the petition of certain raiyats, who alleged that other raiyats, at the instigation of A, were going to do acts which would lead to a breach of the peace. The Deputy Magistrate, the same person who, as Deputy Collector, had decided the land-registration case in favour of A, proceeded under s. 530 to consider the question as to who was in possession, and found B and C were in possession. Held that the Deputy Magistrate could not, in these proceedings, set aside the order which he had made in the registration case, as that order could only be set aside in a regular suit. The proceedings recorded by the Deputy Magistrate did not set forth in express language that he was satisfied that a dispute likely to create a breach of the peace existed in respect of the land in question between A on the one side and B and C on the other, nor did it set forth the grounds upon which he was so satisfied that such dispute existed. Held that the proceeding was therefore defective. In the proceedings the Magistrate referred to a police report, which, however, did not show that a breach of the peace was imminent. Held that, although this report might be taken to be incorporated by reference, yet that it was not sufficient to justify the order. Per FIELD, J.—Unless the parties are able to show that there is such a dispute as is likely to induce a breach of the peace, the Magistrate should hold his hand and not proceed further. When the rights of the parties have been determined by a competent Court, the dispute is at an end, and it is the duty of the Magistracy to maintain the rights of the successful party, and the proper course for the Magistrate to pursue, if the defeated party does any act that may probably occasion a breach of the peace, is to take action under s. 491 of the Criminal Procedure Code, and require from such person security to keep the peace. IN RE GONIND CHUNDER MOITRA by pleaders to irregular procedure.—Members of two opposing parties in a riot were, under two distinct committals, sent up for trial before the Sessions Judge and jury. After the close of the case for the prosecution in one of these cases, the Sessions Judge, with the consent of the pleaders representing the accused, postponed the taking of the evidence for the defence, and proceeded to examine the witnesses for the prosecution in the counter-case before the same jury. The Court then took the evidence of the witnesses for the defence in the first, and in the counter-case, in the order named, and after hearing the address of the various pleaders for the defence and the reply of the Government pleader, proceeded to sum up the facts in both cases to the jury, who returned a verdict in respect of all the accused. Held that the procedure resorted to by the Judge was a practical violation of the salutary rule which necessitated the keeping of trials in such cases distinctly separate, and that its adoption having materially prejudiced the interests of the accused, the convictions should be set aside. *Queen v. BAZU, B. L. R., Sup. a yadast from a revenue officer and convicting accused without examining complainant.—A revenue officer sent a yadast to a third class Magistrate, charging a certain person with having disobeyed a summons issued by the revenue officer. The third class Magistrate thereupon tried and convicted the accused under s. 174 of the Penal Code. The District Magistrate referred the case on the ground that the conviction was bad under s. 530 (k) of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Held that, as the yadast amounted to a complaint within the meaning of s. 4, although the complainant was not examined on oath as required by s. 200, the conviction was not illegal. *QUEEN-EMPRESS v. 62. ————— *Criminal Procedure Code, 1882, s. 530, cl. The evidence showed that one of the accused had used an axe in causing the hurt. The Magistrate apparently ignored this fact, and he convicted the accused under s. 325 of the Code. The accused appealed. The District Magistrate who heard one appeal and the first class Magistrate who heard the rest of the appeals were both of opinion that the offence committed by the accused was one of causing grievous hurt with a dangerous weapon within the meaning of s. 326 of the Penal Code, and as such beyond the jurisdiction of the second class Magistrate. But they did not think it proper under the circumstances of the case to quash the convictions. The Sessions Judge, on examining the record of the case, was of opinion that, as the offence committed by the accused was not cognizable by the trying Magistrate, his proceedings were void ab initio under s. 530 of the Criminal Procedure Code. He therefore referred the case to the High Court, and recommended that the convictions under s. 325 should be set aside. Held that the proceedings before the second class Magistrate were not void ab initio, as he had jurisdiction to try the accused for offences punishable under ss. 149 and 325 of the Indian Penal Code, with which they were originally charged. Held also that, though it was the duty of the trying Magistrate, when the evidence disclosed a circumstance of aggravation, such as the use of a dangerous weapon, which made the offence cognizable by a higher Court, to adopt the proper procedure to send the case to the higher Court, still it was not necessary to quash the proceedings, as the accused were not in any way prejudiced, and the sentences were not inadequate. *QUEEN-EMPRESS v. under s. 498 of the Penal Code (XLV of 1860) with having enticed away a married woman, and under s. 497 with having committed adultery. The woman alleged to have been enticed away resided in Bombay, but the alleged adultery took place at Khandals outside the jurisdiction. At the enquiry before the Magistrate in Bombay, objection was taken as to his jurisdiction with regard to the charge of adultery. The Magistrate, however, overruled the objections and committed the accused for trial. At the trial an application was made, on behalf of the accused, under s. 532 of the Criminal Procedure Code (X of 1882) that the commitment should be quashed and a fresh enquiry directed on the ground that an objection had been taken to the Magistrate's jurisdiction. Held, refusing the application, that the commitment being an order (see *Queen-Empress v. In the summary inquiry, which was made under s. 278 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882), he produced the sale-deed, and accused No. 2 was called as his witness and supported his claim. The Subordinate Judge found that the deed was a forgery and rejected the claim. Proceeding then under s. 478 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act X of 1882), he held the inquiry directed by that section, and committed both the accused to the Sessions Court on charges of perjury and forgery. In a charge under the former section, though a guilty intention must be proved, it is not necessary to prove which of the several guilty intentions the accused had; it will be enough if it is shown that the intention must have been one or other of those specified in s. 441, though it may not be certain which it was. An accused person, the landlord of a house in which he occupied the lower flat, was found in the middle of the night in the room of the complainant and his wife were upstairs, in which the complainant and his wife were at the time sleeping. Upon being detected, the accused was subjected to very severe treatment, but did not utter a word of protestation of innocence or make any show of remonstrance, and when questioned said, "I have committed a fault, pardon me." He was arrested upon a charge under s. 456 of the Penal Code, the criminal intention alleged being that of committing theft. The charge framed by the Magistrate did not specify any intention, and the Magistrate came to the conclusion that the trespass was not committed by the accused, who was a wealthy man, with that intention. He found, however, that the complainant had suppressed some important facts, and that he was not in his wife's room when the accused entered it, and relying on the decision in Kailash Chandra Chakrabarty v. Queen-Empress, I. L. R., 16 Cal., 657, he convicted the accused. On appeal, the Sessions Judge, though finding that the Magistrate's views were against the evidence, upheld the conviction without finding what specifically was the intention with which the entry was made. In revision, it was contended that the conviction was bad (1) because no intention was set out in the charge; and (2) because no such intention was proved by the evidence; and (3) because no such intention was specifically found by the Sessions Judge. Held that the first contention was not sustainable for the reasons above stated. Even if it had been necessary to specify the intention in the charge, it would have to be shown under the provisions of s. 537 of the Code of Criminal Procedure that the omission had occasioned a failure of justice, and, having regard to the nature of the charge and the line of defence adopted, the accused had not in any way been prejudiced in his defence. Held, as regards the second contention, that though it was not certain what the precise intention of the accused was in committing the trespass, it was clear that it must have been with one or other of the intentions specified in s. 441 of the Penal Code, and that the trespass was committed and the conduct of the accused when discovered, it was impossible to suppose that the trespass could have been committed either unintentionally or with any innocent intention, and that it must have been committed with the intention of committing some offence, but that the accused was entitled to have it taken that it was with the least possible culpable intention, namely, an offence under s. 509 of the Penal Code. Held, as regards the third contention, that in exercising its powers under s. 439 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, it is open to the High Court to alter any finding and confirm a conviction, and that, if the evidence on the record in a case be sufficient to warrant a conviction, the Court

3. Grave and sudden provocation—Murder.—Culpable homicide not amounting to murder is when a man kills another on being deprived of self-control by reason of grave and sudden provocation. But when the act is done after the first excitement had passed away, and there was time to cool, it is murder. QUEEN v. YASIN SHIKH

the deprivation of the power of self-control must continue in order to benefit a man who kills another under circumstances of grave provocation. QUEEN v. BECHOO SAOUT . . . 19 W. R., Cr., 35

6. ————— Grave provocation—Interval between provocation and attack.—Where a man suddenly cut his wife's throat, it was held that, in order to establish that the act was not done under grave provocation so as to bring the case under excep. 1 of s. 300 of the Penal Code, it is not sufficient to state that the deceased ceased abusing the prisoner then, but it is necessary to show what interval elapsed between the time when the deceased ceased to speak and the instant when the prisoner attacked her. The offence in this case held to be culpable homicide. QUEEN v. NOKUL NUSHYO . . . [7 W. R., Cr., 72

7. ————— Sudden fight—Where it appeared in the case of a person charged with murder that while smarting from a severe blow from a stick in the midst of a sudden fight, and possibly apprehensive of future violence, finding a knife at hand, he took it up, and in the mêlée inflicted the wound which caused the death of the deceased,—Held that, under the circumstances, the accused was guilty, under the Penal Code, s. 304, of culpable homicide not amounting to murder. QUEEN v. SOMRUDDIN . . . [24 W. R., Cr., 48

8. ————— Hasty and fatal blow.—The prisoner, having struck the deceased a hasty but fatal blow with a stick in his hand at the time for abusing his mother, was held guilty of culpable homicide not amounting to murder. QUEEN v. SULEEM . . . 1 W. R., Cr., 23

9. ————— Grave provocation.—The prisoners found the deceased lying in the same bed with their sister and ill-treated him, from the effects of which ill-treatment he died. Held that the provocation was sufficiently grave to justify a conviction of culpable homicide not amounting to murder. QUEEN v. KASSEEMODDEEN . . . [4 W. R., Cr., 38

QUEEN v. MAITHYA GAZEE . . . 6 W. R., Cr., 42

10. ————— Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 304—Culpable homicide not amounting to murder—Grave and sudden provocation.—A person accused of murder under s. 302 of the Penal Code pleaded in defence that he had found his sister having illicit connection with a man named Thakuri, and had in a fit of passion killed them both on the spot. The statement being accepted was held to be a good plea of grave and sudden provocation so as to reduce the offence to one of culpable homicide not amounting to murder. QUEEN-EMRESS v. CHUNNI . . . I. L. R., 18 All., 497

11. ————— Grave provocation—Husband finding wife in adultery.—Two prisoners confessed that having caught the deceased in the act of having sexual intercourse with the wife of one of them, they then and there killed him. Held that the grave provocation given reduced the crime

from murder to culpable homicide not amounting to murder. QUEEN v. GOOR CHUND POLIE . . . [1 W. R., Cr., 17

12. ————— Grave provocation—Husband finding wife in adultery.—Where a prisoner confessed that he did not suspect his wife's fidelity; that he left home on business; that on his return he saw what convinced him of his wife's infidelity; and that, maddened at the sight, he killed both her and her paramour,—Held that he was guilty of culpable homicide not amounting to murder, and that the case was one in which he ought to be treated with lenity. QUEEN v. BOODHOO . . . [8 W. R., Cr., 38

13. ————— Grave provocation—Husband seeing wife seduced to adultery.—The wife of the prisoner had been forcibly taken to the house of the deceased, a native physician, who alleged that her presence was necessary to the due performance of certain incantations. The prisoner, armed with a sword, and watching from the roof of the house, saw his wife being actually violated by the deceased. He jumped down from the roof, and struck deceased with his sword in several places, from the effects of which he died. Held that the prisoner's conviction for murder could not be sustained. The offence committed was culpable homicide not amounting to murder. QUEEN v. RANTAHAI KAHAR . . . [3 B. L. R., A. Cr., 38

14. ————— Grave provocation—Husband seeing wife in adultery—Deliberation.—On a certain evening, M, a common workman, saw N committing adultery with his (M's) wife, and on the following morning, while labouring under the excitement provoked by their misconduct, came upon them eating food together, while his wife had neglected to provide food for M. M took up a bill-hook and killed N on the spot. Held that, if M connected the subsequent conduct of N and his wife with their misconduct on the preceding evening and regarded it as implying an open avowal of their criminal relations, which, under the circumstances, he might have done, the provocation was sufficiently grave and sudden to deprive him of self-control, and to reduce the offence from murder to culpable homicide not amounting to murder. BOYA MUNIGADU v. 17. ——— Killing outlaw while endeavouring to escape—Penal Code, s. 300, except. 3.—The prisoners, fearful of being punished if they allowed him to escape, and thinking that they were acting lawfully, in furtherance of a plan arranged for them by a police constable and the lumberdar of a village for the capture of an outlaw, for whose arrest a reward had been offered, and in pursuance thereof killed him while endeavouring to escape. Held that the offence committed came under the third exception in s. 300 of the Penal Code, and was culpable homicide not amounting to murder. *QUEEN v. 25. — Subjecting person of full age to emasculation.—When a man of full age (i.e., above 18 years) submits himself to emasculation, performed neither by a skilful hand, nor in the least dangerous way, and dies from the injury, the persons concerned in the act are guilty of culpable homicide not amounting to murder. QUEEN v. BABOOLUN HIRAH . . . 5 W. R., Cr., 7

26. — Knowledge of likelihood to cause death—Pre-meditation.—Where a person snatches up a log of heavy wood, and strikes another with it on a vital part, with so much force and vindictiveness as to cause that other person's death almost on the spot, the act must be held to have been done with the knowledge that it was likely to cause death; but if done without pre-meditation, in the heat of passion on a sudden quarrel, the offence committed is culpable homicide not amounting to murder. QUEEN v. RAJOO GHOSH . . . 7 W. R., Cr., 108

27. — Taking persons in old boat—Negligence—Penal Code, s. 299.—Certain persons whom the accused, a ferryman, was rowing across a river were drowned by the sinking of the boat which was an old one with holes in it over which planks had been nailed. that he acted with the knowledge that he was likely, by taking them in the boat, to cause death within the terms of s. 299 of the Penal Code. QUEEN v. MAOHNEE BEHARA . . . 11 W. R., Cr., 3

28. — The knowledge that an act is likely to cause death does not constitute culpable homicide amounting to murder. It must be shown that the act was committed with the knowledge that it must in all probability cause death. QUEEN v. GIRDHAREE SING . . . 6 N. W., 28

29. — Act likely to cause death—Penal Code, ss. 304 and 304 (a)—Assault on thief.—The prisoners assaulted a thief so severely that he died. One hundred and forty-one marks of separate blows were found on the body of the deceased, and several of his ribs were broken. Held that s. 304 (a) of the Penal Code was not applicable to the circumstances of the case, and that, taking the offence out of the category of murder, it must still come under s. 304. QUEEN v. MAN . . . 5 N. W., 235

30. — Causing death by branding a thief—Dangerous act.—Causing death by branding a thief without the knowledge that the act was so imminently dangerous that it would in all probability cause death, or such bodily injury as was likely to cause death, is punishable under s. 304 of the Penal Code as culpable homicide not amounting to murder. QUEEN v. KHEDUN MISSEY . . . 7 W. R., Cr., 54

31. — Penal Code, s. 304 (a)—Administering milk to child in such quantity as to kill it—Rash and negligent act—Knowledge of consequences.—Where there was medical evidence to show that milk had been administered to a child in such quantities as to kill it, but there was no evidence to show that the milk was administered by the orders of the mother, or that she knew the quantity that was being administered. Held that there was not sufficient evidence to bring her within s. 304 (a) of the Penal Code. The Sessions Judge found that the mother could not have been ignorant of the fact that her child was being over-fed, or of the probable consequences of such over-feeding; such feeding was inconsistent with the terms of s. 304 (a) which provides for the causing of death by any rash or negligent act, not amounting to murder. What a man does with the knowledge that the consequences will be likely to cause death cannot be reduced to a simply rash and negligent act. QUEEN v. PEMKOR . . . 5 N. W., 38

32. — Intention to cause injury likely to result in death—Causing death by rash act—Culpable rashness—Culpable negligence.—Prisoner killed his mother by beating and kicking her. The Sessions Judge found that the death resulted from brutal beating and kicking, but acquitted of culpable homicide, because the violence was not such as the prisoner must have known to be likely to cause death. Held that this was no ground for acquitting of culpable homicide not amounting to murder: the question for the Judge was whether the act was done with the intention of causing bodily injury which was likely to cause death. The man died from hæmorrhage. The kobiraj was charged, under s. 304 (a) of the Penal Code, with causing death by doing a rash and negligent act. It was contended that, inasmuch as the prisoner had performed similar operations on previous occasions, it was not a rash act within the meaning of that section, and that at all events he was entitled to the benefit of s. 88 of the Penal Code, as he did the act in good faith, without any intention to cause death, and for the benefit of the patient, who had accepted the risk. Held that, as the prisoner was admittedly uneducated in matters of surgery, and having regard to the meaning of “good faith” as defined in s. 52 of the Penal Code, he was not entitled to the benefit of s. 88. Held, further, that s. 88 did not apply to the case, as it was not shown by the accused, on whom the burden of proving that fact lay, that the deceased knew the risk he was running in consenting to the operation, and he could not therefore be said to have accepted the risk. Held also that, under the circumstances, the conviction under s. 304 (a) was a proper one. *SOOKABOO KOBIRAJ v. On the objections of the paternal and maternal uncles of the boy that under the circumstances of the case the father was not fit and proper person to be appointed the guardian of the minor,—Held, although the father is prima facie entitled to the custody of his infant child, he can be deprived of such parental right if the circumstances justify it; therefore in a case where a child who was brought up as a Hindu, and who expressed a desire to remain a Hindu, and was living with his Hindu relation, who was maintaining him and was looking after his education properly, it would not be to the welfare of the child that he should be handed over to the father and brought up in the Christian faith, and that the Court below, under the circumstances of the case, was right in dismissing the application. *MOKOOND LAL SINGH v. 11. ———— Mother's right to custody—Guardian—Act IX of 1861—Marriage of Mahomedan mother with Christian in Mahomedan form.—A child, the offspring of a Christian marriage, was living after her father's death under the protection of her mother. A married man, a Christian, came to live with her mother, and, in order to legalize their intercourse, he and the mother became Mahomedans, and were married in Mahomedan form. About three years after, when the child had attained the age of fourteen, some of her relatives applied for an order, under Act IX of 1861, that the girl be removed from the guardianship of the mother and her second husband and placed under a Christian guardian. The girl deposed that she wished to remain with her mother and to become a Mahomedan. Held by the High Court in granting the application and appointing a guardian in place of her mother that a Judge, in the exercise of his jurisdiction under the Act, is justified in having respect to the religion professed by the father of a minor, and in passing such orders with regard to the custody of the person of such minor as he may hold to be in accordance with what would have been the minor's father's wishes had he been alive to express them. 24. Bhagdari tenures in Broach—Inheritance—Special custom—Priority of nearest male relative to daughter or sister.—The plaintiff, as heir of her father (a deceased Hindu bhagdar), sued the sons of sisters of her father's paternal uncle for possession of certain bhagdari lands situate in a village in the Broach collectorate. The defendants pleaded that they were entitled to the property under a special custom regulating the succession to bhagdari lands in the collectorate of Broach, under which custom, on the death of a bhagdar, whether Hindu or Mahomedan, without male issue, his nearest male relations (after the death of his widow), whether sprung through male or female relatives of the deceased bhagdar, succeed to his bhagdari lands to the exclusion of his daughter or sister. Held that the custom alleged was sufficiently proved, and that the defendants were entitled to retain possession of the bhagdar lands in question. Per Curiam.—The custom alleged being, if not universal, at least general, in the Broach collectorate, it should, in the case of any particular village, at any rate on evidence being given of its continuance in other similar adjacent villages, if not in the particular village itself (though it would always be more satisfactory if this could be done), be held still to survive, unless and until the opposite party proved the adoption of some other custom, or of the ordinary rules of inheritance, in the particular village, or, failing such proof, the general prevalence of such rules or such opposing custom in other similar adjacent villages. Quære—Whether males sprung of male relatives of a deceased bhagdar have priority over males sprung of female relatives of the same. Quære—Whether a daughter or sister of a deceased bhagdar is wholly excluded by the custom, from the line of inheritance, or would, on failure of male relations, succeed to the bhagdari lands. *Pranjiyan Dayaram v. of pre-emption, which was based on contract and custom as evidenced by the wajib-ul-ur of a village, was dismissed by the lower Courts on the ground that any contract which might be founded on the wajib-ul-ur was not binding on the vendor-defendant, as that document did not bear his signature, and the lower Appellate Court attached no weight to the wajib-ul-ur as proof of the custom of pre-emption, because it was drawn up when Regulation VII of 1822 was in force, and at that time there was no legal presumption of its accuracy. The claim was dismissed on the ground that the plaintiff's evidence did not prove the existence of a custom of pre-emption in the village. Held that the lower Appellate Court had erred in dealing with the evidence, and that, although this particular wajib-ul-ur was made before Act XIX of 1873 came into force, yet the weight which would attach to its entries, both as proof of the contract as well of custom, was very strong. *Isri Singh v. Wajib-ul-ur—Mahomedan law.—It having been alleged that an estate, by custom, descended to a single heir in the male line, the High Court, concurring with the Court of first instance, found that this custom had not been proved to prevail in the family. On an appeal contesting this finding, it was argued, among other objections, that the High Court had not given sufficient effect to an entry in the wajib-ul-ur of a zamindari village, the principal one comprised in the family estate now in dispute; the last owner of that estate who held all the shares in the village having caused an entry to be made to the effect that his eldest son should be his sole heir, the others of the family being maintained. Held that, though termed an entry in a wajib-ul-ur, the document was not entitled to the name, but was rather in the nature of a testamentary attempt to make a disposition contrary to the Mahomedan law of descent. *MOHAMMAD ISMAIL KHAN v. 44. Customary right of privacy—Right of building and to interfere with erection of building.—A customary right of privacy under certain conditions exists in India and in the North-Western Provinces, and is not unreasonable, but merely an application of the maxims sic utere tuo ut alienum non laedas and aedificare in tuo proprio solo non licet quod alteri noceat. In the case of a building for parda purposes, newly erected without the acquiescence of the owner of an adjacent building site, a custom preventing such owner from so building as to interfere with the privacy of the first new building would be unreasonable and consequently bad in law. But if such adjacent owner, without protest or notice, allowed his neighbour to erect and consequently to incur expenses in connection with a building for the use of parda-nashin women, a custom preventing him from interfering with the privacy of such new building would not
